C., a married woman who was tenant for life of real estate for her separate use without power of anticipation, disobeyed three orders to pay taxed costs to H., and leave was given on Jan. 15, 1894, to issue a writ of sequestration against her separate property, not subject to restraint on anticipation. The writ was issued on Feb. 8; after March 25, L., an agent of C., received rents of property, subject to restraint on anticipation, and paid them over to C. H. applied for an injunction restraining C. from receiving the rents due on March 25, or in the alternative, for leave to issue a second writ of sequestration. H., also, applied for an order that L. should pay the rent over to the sequestrators:—

Held, by C. A., affirm. North J., that the material date was that of the order to pay the costs, at that date the March rents were not due, and could not be affected by the sequestration without anticipating them:

Held, also, that a second sequestration could not affect anything not affected by the first, therefore both motions must be dismissed:

Held, also, by C. A., that s. 2 of the Married Women's Property Act, 1893, does not give jurisdiction to alter the effect of an order made before the Act came into operation. In re Lumley. Ex parte Hood Barrs bind her separate property under the Act of 1893 unless she has some separate property at the date of the contract. If she have some separate estate at the time, a charge on it will affect after-acquired property, but not otherwise. A restraint on alienation or anticipation of income given to a woman is of no avail unless the income is given to her for her separate use. Where in a will there are no words expressly giving a married woman income for her separate use, a subsequent restriction on alienation will not create a separate use by implication. Stogdon v. Stat. p. 784)—Statute of Limitations—Civil Procedure Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42), s. 5.

By a marriage settlement, dated in 1847, a fund belonging to the wife was vested in trustees in trust for investment “on real or personal securities bearing interest,” with power of varying investments with the written consent of the husband and wife or the survivor, and to pay the income to the wife for her separate use without power of anticipation, then to the husband for life, and after the death of the survivor, as to the capital, upon the trusts therein mentioned.

In 1852 the trustees, on the written consent of the wife, lent the trust fund in cash to the husband on the security of his bond in a penal sum, conditioned for repayment to the trustees of the sum advanced with interest at 4 per cent. per annum six months after date. The bond contained no stipulation in terms for payment of interest beyond the six months.

The husband and wife lived together in amity for more than twenty years after the date of the bond, the wife dying in 1876 and the husband in 1896. At his death the bond was found in his possession. He never, either during his wife's lifetime or afterwards, paid any interest on the bond or gave any written acknowledgment of his indebtedness under it:—

Held, affirming Byrne J., [1899] W. N. 134; [1899] 2 Ch. 561, that the bond debt was not barred by the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42), s. 5, on the grounds (1.) that the bond, being a penalty bond, was an interest-bearing security carrying interest (though not mentioned) beyond the date fixed for payment of the debt; (2.) that as the husband and wife had lived together in amity it was unnecessary, in order to prevent the statute from running, to go through the formality of the husband paying the interest to the trustees, the trustees paying it to the wife, and the wife paying it to the husband; and (3.) that, as the husband took with full notice that the money lent was trust money and liable to investment on interest-bearing security, he was in the position of an express trustee: Soar v. Ashwell, [1893] 2 Q. B. 390, 396:

Held, also, that no presumption of discharge of the bond arose from the mere fact of its being in the obligor's possession at his death.

Sections 12 and 13 of the statute 4 & 5 Anne, c. 16, merely recognised and confirmed the doctrine, previously established by the Court of Equity, that, in the case of a bond with a penalty, the true intent of the penalty was to secure payment, not only of the stated principal money and interest on the day fixed, but also of subsequent interest down to the actual payment of the principal, although the bond contained no stipulation for interest beyond the day fixed. Under that statute the interest is payable as interest, and not as damages for non-payment on the day fixed.

committed by her during the coverture, unless it is directly connected with the contract and is the means of effecting or inducing it and is part of the same transaction. That liability, which existed before the Married Women's Property Act, 1882, is not affected by the Act, nor is the remedy of the party injured limited by the Act to the wife's separate estate, if any.

Thus, where since the Act a contract had been entered into by K., a married woman, with E., under which E. was to pay K. a sum of money in a certain event, and subsequently K. induced E. to pay her the money by a false representation that the event had happened, it was held (1) by Byrne J., [1899] W. N. 244; [1900] 1 Ch. 203, and by the C. A., that as the contract had not been induced by the fraud and was altogether independent of it, K.'s husband was liable to E. in damages for his wife's fraud; and (2)

Held, by the C. A., that the Married Women's Property Act, 1882, did not exempt the husband from his liability.

The expression "need not be joined" in s. 1, sub-s. 2, of the Act does not mean that, whenever a plt. is suing a married woman in contract or in tort, he "shall not" join the husband with her, but only that the joinder, which was formerly necessary, is now unnecessary if the plt. is seeking to obtain satisfaction out of the wife's separate estate alone. *EARLE v. The daughter and her husband claimed by virtue of the letter to be entitled to an equal eighth share of the father's estate:—

A married woman was entitled to the income of property during her life, for her separate use without power of anticipation, subject to a proviso that on a specified event her interest should cease, and the property be held in trust for her husband. In order to assist her husband to make an arrangement with a creditor, she executed a deed-poll, whereby she admitted (believing then that it was true, though, as she afterwards alleged, it was not in fact true) that the event mentioned in the proviso had occurred, and that her life interest had determined, and she released that interest in favour of her husband. On the faith of this deed the creditor entered into arrangements with the husband for his benefit. The wife subsequently, notwithstanding the deed, claimed to receive the income of the property during her life:—

Held, that she could not by admission or estoppel or in any other way by her own act get rid of the protection afforded by the restraint on anticipation, and that her right to receive the income was unaffected by her admission contained in the deed-poll.

Where costs are ordered to be paid by a married woman, suing under the Married Women’s Property Act, 1882, without a next friend, payment of them can be enforced against any separate property to which she is entitled free from restraint on anticipation at the time when the order to pay costs is made. The restraint on anticipation ceases, as to any sums forming part of the income, so soon as they come into the trustees’ hands:—

Held, therefore, that the trustees could pay their costs out of arrears of income detained in their hands by an administration order. Cox v. BENNETT — C. A. [1891] 1 Ch. 617

A wife entitled under a settlement to a life interest in property subject to a restraint from anticipation obtained from the Court, for the purpose of raising money to pay off her husband's debts, two orders under s. 39 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, charging her life interest with the sums of 23,000*l.* and 22,000*l.* She afterwards brought an action against her husband for a declaration that he was liable to indemnify her against the two charges created on her separate property for the payment of his debts, and the action was dismissed by Kekewich J. (see [1897] W. N. 159 (6); [1898] 1 Ch. 47).

Upon appeal, it was held that, under the circumstances of the case, no inference could be drawn in favour of the wife of any right to be indemnified by her husband, and the appeal was dismissed.

The doctrine that if a wife charges her separate property to pay her husband's debt she is primâ facie regarded as lending, and not giving him the money raised, and as entitled to have the property exonerated by him, is purely equitable. It is based upon an inference to be drawn from the circumstances of each case, and there may be circumstances which prevent it from arising: so that until an inference in favour of the wife arises, there is no presumption for the husband to rebut.

In cases where orders have been made under s. 39 of the Act of 1881, it is the order of the Court which binds the estate of the wife, and not what she does when the restraint on anticipation is removed; and although it might be convenient for the order to indicate the husband's liability to indemnify the wife in cases where it is intended he should be liable to do so, the silence of the order in this respect does not negative the existence of the wife's right to indemnity where it can be inferred from the circumstances. *PAGET v. 52. — Judgment after cessation of coverture—Separate property—Restraint upon anticipation—Wife's contracts during coverture—Married Women's Property Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 63), s. 1.

By the Married Women's Property Act, 1893, s. 1, "Every contract hereafter entered into by a married woman . . . (a) shall be deemed to be a contract entered into by her with respect to and to bind her separate property, whether she is or is not in fact possessed of or entitled to any separate property at the time when she enters into such contract; (b) shall bind all separate property which she may at that time or thereafter be possessed of or entitled to; and (c) shall also be enforceable by process of law against all property which she may thereafter while discover be possessed of or entitled to: Provided that nothing in this section contained shall render available to satisfy any liability or obligation arising out of such contract any separate property which at that time or thereafter she is restrained from anticipating."

A married woman, who was possessed of separate property the income of which she was restrained from anticipating, entered into a contract, and was subsequently divorced. Judgment having then been obtained against her, it was sought to enforce it by means of a garnishee order attaching income which had accrued due to her from this property subsequently to the divorce:—

Held, that this income was protected by the proviso to the section, and could not be attached. BARNETT v. HOWARD. UNION BANK OF LONDON, GARNISHEES — — — C. A. [1900] W. N. 179; [1900] 2 Q. B. 784

Held, that the husband was affected with notice of the separate use, and was a trustee of the money for his wife; that the Statute of Limitations was no defence to proceedings by her against his executors; and that the wife was entitled to be paid the amount of the legacy, with interest at 4 per cent. from the date of her husband's death. *WASSELL v. The parties to a wife's suit for judicial separation entered into an agreement for the settlement of it, which provided (inter alia) that a separation deed should be executed; that the husband should pay the wife's taxed "costs of suit"; and that the agreement might be made a rule of Court:—

Held, that the costs of and incident to the preparation and settlement of the deed were not "costs of suit" which the husband was bound to pay.

Where a wife has obtained an order under the Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895, she is entitled to her costs of supporting that order upon appeal, even though she should prove unsuccessful in the Div. Ct.

A husband and wife separated in 1887, when a document headed "Memorandum of Agreement" was signed by them and witnessed by a solicitor. Twelve years later the wife returned from abroad, went to her husband's house, and was refused admission. She thereupon took out a summons against her husband under the Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895, charging her husband with neglect to maintain her, and by such neglect causing her to leave and live separate and apart from him. The husband and wife were the only witnesses before the justices, who made an order for separation and allowance in favour of the wife.

Held, that as the document was conclusive one way or the other, and as the justices had not had all the evidence before them to enable them properly to test its validity, the case must go back for rehearing; but the appellant was ordered to pay the respondent's costs on the appeal. *MEDWAY v. 83. — Summary jurisdiction—Costs of summary proceedings—Separation order—Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895 (58 & 59 Vict. c. 38), ss. 4, 5.

By ss. 4 and 5 of the Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895, any married woman, whose husband shall have been guilty of certain specified kinds of misconduct towards her, may apply to a court of summary jurisdiction for an order under the Act, and the Court may make an order containing various specified provisions for her protection, including (s. 5, sub-s. (d)) "a provision for payment by the applicant or the husband, or both of them, of the costs of the Court, and such reasonable costs of either of the parties as the Court may think fit." The solicitor acting for a married woman in an application, which was unsuccessful, to a court of summary jurisdiction for an order under the Act, brought an action for his costs against the husband. The court of summary jurisdiction had not made, or been asked to make, any provision for the costs:—

Held, that the action could not be maintained, because the Act intended to exclude any remedy in respect of costs other than that specified in s. 5, sub-s. (d). CALE v. JAMES

A false charge of having committed an unnatural criminal offence brought by a wife against her husband, although published to the world and persisted in after she did not believe in its truth, is not sufficient evidence of legal cruelty to entitle the husband to a judicial separation:—

So held, by the majority of the House of Lords (Lords Herschell, Watson, Macnaghten, Shand, and Davey; Lord Halsbury L.C., Lords Hobhouse, Ashbourne, and Morris dissenting).

The effect of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1884, debated, but not decided. EARL RUSSELL v. COUNTESS RUSSELL (No. 2)

For the purpose of proceedings under s. 4 of the Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895, the desertion of a married woman by her husband is a continuing act; an application by the wife for an order under that section need not, therefore, be made within six months of the commencement of the desertion. *HEARD v. 87. — Desertion—Neglect to provide reasonable maintenance—Cohabitation—Jurisdiction of justices—Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895 (58 & 59 Vict. c. 39), s. 4.

In order to give jurisdiction to justices under so much of s. 4 of the Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895, as provides that any married woman, whose husband shall have deserted her, or been guilty of wilful neglect to provide reasonable maintenance for her, and shall by such neglect have caused her to leave and live separately and apart from him, may apply to a court of summary jurisdiction for an order under the Act, it is essential that there should be a cohabitation which is broken by the act of the husband; but such cohabitation does not necessarily imply that the parties must be living together continually under one roof.

A married female domestic servant, who never lived with her husband under the same roof, was visited from time to time by him at the house of her mistress, and a child (which subsequently died) was born of the marriage in a lying-in hospital. The husband refused to receive his wife in the house where he lodged, or to give her any help towards her maintenance:—

Held, that the cohabitation was sufficient to give jurisdiction to the justices under the above section to make an order under the Act.

"Fresh evidence" within the meaning of the Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895, s. 7, to confer jurisdiction to rescind a separation order previously made under s. 4, must be such as would afford ground for a new trial or rehearing in any other class of case. It must be evidence which could not reasonably have been made available at the date of the order, or it must relate to something which has happened since the date of the order, and which affords ground for revision within the terms of the Act under which the order was made. *JOHNSON v. By the Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895 (58 & 59 Vict. c. 39), s. 4, "Any married woman . . . whose husband shall have been guilty of persistent cruelty to her, or wilful neglect to provide reasonable maintenance for her or her infant children whom he is legally liable to maintain, and shall by such cruelty or neglect have caused her to leave and live separately and apart from him, may apply to any court of summary jurisdiction . . . for an order or orders under this Act."

By s. 8, "All applications under this Act shall be made in accordance with the Summary Jurisdiction Acts."

By the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 43), s. 11, "In all cases where no time is already or shall hereafter be specially limited for making any such complaint or laying any such information in the Act or Acts of Parliament relating to each particular case, such complaint shall be made, and such information shall be laid, within six calendar months from the time when the matter of such complaint or information respectively arose."

Persistent cruelty by a husband to a wife, and wilful neglect by him to provide reasonable maintenance for her, in consequence of which he causes her to leave and live separately and apart from him, within the meaning of s. 4 of the Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895, are not continuing offences. The limit of

Upon the hearing by a court of summary jurisdiction of a summons taken out by a married woman under s. 4 of the Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895, charging her husband with wilful neglect to provide reasonable maintenance for her, the Court, before making an order, must be satisfied that the husband either is in receipt of actual earnings, or has the capability of earning a livelihood; evidence of means cannot be entirely dispensed with.

Where a married woman is an unsuccessful respondent in an appeal to the Probate, Divorce, and Admiralty Div. under the Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895, the Court, without laying down any binding rule of practice, will in ordinary cases follow the practice in matrimonial causes, and order her costs of the appeal to be paid by the husband. EARNSHAW v. Under an Inclosure Act, part of a common was allotted to the lord of the manor, in compensation for his right to the soil of the common, and the residue to the commoners; and the Act provided that nothing therein contained should prejudice the right of the lord to the royalties incident to the common, but that he and all persons claiming under him should at all times thereafter hold and enjoy the mines and other royalties "in as full ample and beneficial manner to all intents and purposes as he or they could or might have held and enjoyed the same in case this Act had not been made," provided always that in case the owner for the time being of the royalties, or any person claiming under him, should work any mines lying under any of the allotments, the person working the same should make reasonable satisfaction for the damage and spoil of the 'ground to the person for the time being in possession of such ground:—

Held, that the Act conferred on the owner for the time being of the mines, as incident to the enjoyment thereof, all usual working powers, which included the right of sinking shafts on any of the allotments for the purpose of winning and carrying away minerals under any part of the common.

5. — Unallotted land—Adjoining owner—Lord of the manor—Prescription—Profit a prendre—Pasturage—Surveyor of highways.

An Inclosure Act provided for the allotment of land to the lord of the manor in compensation for all right of soil:—

Held, that the soil of land set out as a private road in pursuance of the Act was vested in the allottees of the adjacent land ad medium flum.

The herbage of a road was by an inclosure award made in 1822 allotted to the surveyor of highways for depasturing sheep only, in aid of rates. For more than fifty years the surveyor had let the pasturage for cattle and horses. The Court presumed an enlargement of the right to depasture by grant from the owners of the soil to the surveyor. NEAVESON V. PETERBOROUGH RURAL COUNCIL adverso the whole estates, and the Crown agreed not to claim damages in respect of the coal worked in the past. Shortly after the proprietor came of age, but in ignorance of his rights, he accepted an assignment of the lease, and also obtained from the Crown a reduction of the royalty payable, and a modification of the mode of working the coal. Fourteen years after the proprietor came of age he raised an action for declarator that the trustees had no right to sign the agreement in respect of the entailed estate, and that their whole agreement with the Crown was null; and, secondly, that his actings while he was ignorant of his rights did not imply adoption of the agreement and lease.

Held, that the agreement to become a member of the society and to be bound by its rules was part of a contract of service into which an infant was competent to enter:—

Held, also, that the contract was an answer to an action against the ry. co. by the infant under the Act, for the restrictive covenants were such as an insurance society might reasonably make for the protection of its funds; and the contract taken as a whole was for the benefit of the infant

A wife had brought an action in England for judicial separation from her husband, a domiciled Scotsman, and had removed the children to England, and the Ct. of Sess. had by interlocutor ordered her to give custody of them. On her undertaking to abandon the proceedings in England and to commence without delay an action in Scotland the H. L. recalled the interlocutor and remitted the cause to the Ct. of Sess. to sist the proceedings pending the decision of such action: the wife to have interim custody of the children, and the husband reasonable access. *GIBBS (or STEVENSON) v. The provisional appointment or nomination by a mother, during the father's lifetime, under s. 3, sub-s. 2, of the Guardianship of Infants Act, 1886, of guardians of her infant child after her death, should be, in form, an appointment of guardians to act "jointly with the father." 13. — Appointment of guardian by mother—Removal—Jurisdiction—Guardianship of Infants Act, 1886 (49 & 50 Vict. c. 27), s. 3, sub-s. 2, s. 13.

The jurisdiction of the Court, so far as it relates to infants not wards of Courts, is limited to the appointment and removal of guardians. The Court has jurisdiction to remove a guardian appointed by the mother under the Act of 1886, if satisfied that it is for the benefit of the infant to do so. The parents of two children were Roman Catholics. After the father's death the mother became a Protestant, and appointed as guardian a Protestant lady, who took care of the children for some time during the mother's lifetime, and brought them up as Protestants. The Court under the circumstances refused to remove the guardian appointed by the mother. In re McGRATH (INFANTS) North J. [1892] 2 Ch. 496; affirm. by C. A. [1893] 1 Ch. 143

Act and of its own jurisdiction, to appoint a guardian to act jointly with the mother, the fact that the mother has married a second husband of a faith different to that which she professes and in which the infant is being educated, is not of itself sufficient to justify the exercise of the power, so long as there is no personal misconduct or interference with the proper bringing up of the infant.

The Court will only interfere where it is shewn that, having regard to the real benefit of the infant, it ought to do so.

15. — Guardianship—Parental authority—Wards of Court—Religious education—Misconduct of father.

Although by law it is the right of the father to have the care and custody of his infant children and to have them brought up in his own religion, the welfare of the infants is the paramount consideration, and the Court has jurisdiction in a proper case to deprive a father of the custody of his children, and to disregard his wishes as to their religious education. The conduct of a living father may be such as to compel the Court to exercise this jurisdiction.

A Roman Catholic father allowed his two infant children by a deceased Protestant wife to be brought up in the Protestant faith until one of them was fifteen and the other eleven years of age, and his conduct to them, in the view of the Court, shewed that he had abdicated his parental rights. The children were wards of Court, and the father, being desirous of resuming his parental authority, applied to the Court for an order that the children might thenceforth be brought up in the Roman Catholic faith:—

Held, by C. A., affirming the judgment of Kekewich J., that it would be injurious to the welfare of the children that their religious training should be altered, and that, having regard to the conduct of the father and the circumstances of the case, his application must be refused. In re NEWTON (INFANTS) C. 16. — Guardianship—Religion.

Where an orphan, the child of a Protestant father and Roman Catholic mother, had been left without a guardian, the Court, considering only the welfare of the child, but having due regard to the wishes of the father as to her religious education, ordered her to be delivered to the mother's cousin, a Protestant, to be brought up as a Protestant, although the child had been, with the father's consent, baptized as a Roman Catholic. An antenuptial agreement as to the religion of the children is not binding on the father nor on the Court. In re VIOLET NEVIN (AN INFANT) - - - Chitty J.

In "having regard to . . . the conduct of the parents and the wishes as well as of the mother as of the father," the Court will not treat the parents in an unequal manner or differently the one from the other, but will take the whole conduct and wishes of both parents into consideration.

24. — Accumulations—Trust—Validity—Remoteness—Discretion of trustees—Time for exercise—Power to resort to past accumulations—Will—Construction.

A testator bequeathed to trustees the residue of his personal estate, upon trust for investment and to apply the whole income, or such part thereof as his trustees or trustee for the time being in their absolute discretion should think fit, in or towards the maintenance, education, apprenticeship, or in any other manner for the benefit of the child or children of the testator's sister, until they should respectively attain the age of twenty-three, and to accumulate and invest as capital any unapplied portion of the income. And upon further trust, as to both capital and income of the investments, to stand possessed thereof upon trust for the child, if only one, or all the children, if more than one, of the sister who, either before or after her decease, should attain twenty-three (such children, if more than one, to take in equal shares as tenants in common), and the issue of such of the children of the sister as might be then dead, such issue taking only as tenants in common the share which their respective parents would have taken if living.

The testator died in Feb., 1888. His sister, who was a widow, had only two children, a daughter who attained twenty-three on March 10, 1892, and a son who was born on May 28, 1874. On Jan. 30, 1889, upon a summons issued by the trustees of the will, the sister's two children being defts., the Court was of opinion that the bequest of the residuary personalty to her children was void for remoteness, but that the persons to take the residuary personalty could not be determined till her death. And it was ordered that the trustees should accumulate the surplus income until further order. The trustees had never applied any part of the income under the discretionary trust for maintenance, &c., but had accumulated the whole in accordance with the order. Upon a summons in 1895 by the sister's two children:—

Held, that the trust for maintenance was distinct from the trust of the capital of the residuary personalty, and was valid; that the trustees could now exercise the discretion given to them by the will; that in their absolute discretion they might now apply all or any part of the income which accrued down to March 10, 1892, and of the accumulations thereof, in or towards the maintenance, &c., of the two plts., and similarly might apply all or any part of the income from March 10, 1892, and of the accumulations thereof, and of the future income and accumulations until the younger plt. should attain twenty-three for his maintenance, &c. *In re WISE. D. 78—namely, that s. 19 of the Married Women's Property Act, 1882, prevents s. 5 of that Act from interfering with any settlement which would have bound the property if the Act had not been passed—applies also to s. 2 and to settlements by which the wife is not bound.

Stevens v. Trevor-Garrick, [1893] 2 Ch. 307, followed.

An ante-nuptial settlement made between the intended husband, the intended wife (an infant), and trustees recited an agreement that property belonging to the wife and then in the hands of the trustees should be settled. By the testatum the wife, in pursuance of the agreement, declared that the trustees should hold the property on certain trusts. There was no declaration or covenant by the husband. On attaining twenty-one the wife repudiated the settlement:—

Held, that there was an agreement between the husband and the trustees, and that the recital of that agreement was operative as between the parties to it, although unaccompanied by any obligation binding on the infant wife. The husband's marital right was affected by the agreement; there was, therefore, a settlement which would have bound the property if the Married Women's Property Act, 1882, had not been passed, and the wife was not entitled to have the trust funds transferred to her as her separate estate. *BUCKLAND v. Covenant to settle after-acquired property. A husband sought, five years after he came of age, to set aside a marriage settlement which had been made when he was an infant. The settlement was for his benefit as an infant, but had not been confirmed by the Court:—

Held, by H. L. (E.) and by C. A. (revers. Romer J.) that (1) the settlement was voidable, not void; (2) the repudiation came too late; (3) in order to establish the invalidity of an infant's repudiation of a contract after he comes of age, it is not necessary to shew his knowledge of the facts and of his rights, as in a case of waiver, acquiescence, or election. *CARTER v. Held, that the sum was effectually included in the settlement by the husband's assignment, and could not be dealt with by the wife, notwithstanding her disavowing the settlement on attaining twenty-one. 1. — *Agreement by infant and adult—Re-

An infant and adult who were joint tenants entered into an agreement with the plt. to grant a lease. The plt. sued for specific performance of the agreement and for an injunction against granting a lease to any other person:—

Held, that an injunction could only be granted where a case was made out for specific performance, that specific performance by the infant was out of the question, and on the evidence could not be had against the adult:
therefore the plt. was not entitled to an injunc-

(A) An injunction ought not to be granted in the case of an agreement which though negative in form is affirmative in substance. An agreement in writing between plt. and deft. provided that deft. should employ plt. and that deft.
would not, except in case of misconduct or breach of the agreement, require plt. to leave his employ:—

Held, that though the clause was negative in form it was affirmative in substance, and that an granted. DAVIS v. FOREMAN — Kekewich J.

Deft., an actor, agreed with plt., a theatrical manager, to act and to understudy as a member of plt.'s co. for a certain time, subject to certain rules, by one of which he was prohibited from acting at any other theatre without permission.
Deft. acted elsewhere without permission. Plt. applied for an injunction to restrain deft. from acting at any theatre other than that where plt.'s company played. Deft. in an affidavit in opposition to the application alleged that plt.
had verbally promised that deft. should act in certain parts, but had not kept the promise:—

Held, that the negative stipulation against acting elsewhere could be enforced by injunction, that the alleged verbal promise could not, without evidence of bad faith on the part of deft., be considered in construing the contract, that the allotting of parts to deft. was no part of the contract, and that an injunction ought to be granted. GRIMSTON v. CUNNINGHAM

The defts. continued to pollute the stream, and in 1893 the chief clerk gave his certificate, certifying the damages up to the date of the certificate, July 24, 1893:—

Before the Court will grant an interlocutory injunction restraining publication of an alleged libel, it must be satisfied that the case is so clear that a verdict for the deft. would be set aside. The plt. had been tried for murder in Scotland, and a verdict of not proven had been found. The defts. exhibited an effigy of the plt. in London, and L. did the same at Birmingham, in both cases in close proximity to the "chamber of horrors," and connected by reference to the scene of the murder:—

Held, by Div. Ct., that the exhibitions were clearly libellous, and that M. was entitled to an injunction till trial. Some evidence of the plt.'s consent was produced before C. A., which held that the case was not clear enough to entitle the plt. to an injunction:—

Held, also, Lord Halsbury diss., that an injunction should only issue in cases where a verdict for the deft. would be set aside as unreasonable:—

At the height of the old wall they set back the new wall half the thickness of the old wall:—

Held, that the deft.'s evasion of the writ brought the case within the principle of Daniel v. Ferguson, [1891] 2 Ch. 27, and that the plt. was entitled to an interlocutory mandatory injunction ordering the deft. to pull down so much of the building as had been erected after the plt. had warned the deft. that he intended to bring an action. VON JOEL v. An injunction to restrain an apprehended future nuisance will not be granted unless the applicant can shew a strong case of probability that the apprehended mischief will in fact arise. The defts. proposed to establish a small-pox hospital in an adjoining district. The plts. contended that the nature of the scheme and the position selected constituted it a public nuisance dangerous to the health of the neighbourhood:—

Held, that the plts. had failed to shew a probability that the apprehended danger would arise.

In an action to restrain the infringement of a patent a deft., on being served with the writ, offered to undertake not to infringe, to give the other relief claimed by the writ, and to pay the plt.'s costs. Notwithstanding this offer the plt. delivered a statement of claim and particulars of breaches. The deft. then delivered a defence; and the plt. moved for judgment in the terms of the statement of claim:—

Held, that the plt. ought to have accepted the undertaking offered; and, on the deft.'s giving the undertaking, the Court declined to grant an injunction, giving to the plt. costs down to the date of the offer and the costs of the day's appearance, and to the deft. the other costs subsequent to the offer. JENKINS v. business in Liverpool to his home outside the town, went into the dining-room of an hotel in Liverpool, kept by the defts., to get a meal, and put his overcoat in a place where coats were ordinarily kept in that room. The coat was missing when he had finished his meal. Sleeping accommodation for guests at the hotel was provided if required; but a great number of people used it every day for the purpose of dining there only:—

Held, that there was sufficient evidence to establish the relation of innkeeper and guest between the defts. and the plt. so as to make them liable for the loss of the coat without proof of negligence on their part. ORCHARD v. BUSH & Co. Div. Ct. [1898] 2 Q. B. 284

To relieve an innkeeper of his statutory liability under 26 & 27 Vict. c. 41, to the extent of 30*l.* for loss of a guest's property, the innkeeper must shew contributory negligence on the part of the guest. To enable the guest to claim more than 30*l.*, he must shew that the loss occurred through the "wilful act, default, or neglect" of the innkeeper:—

Held, by C. A. on the facts, that neither party had proved default by the other:

The deft. at the time they were received into his inn had express notice that the goods were the property of the plt., but he received them as the baggage of the traveller, who subsequently failed to pay for his board and lodging in the inn:—

Held, that the deft. had a lien upon the goods in respect of the debt. ROBBINS & Co. v. GRAY — — — Div. Ct. [1895] 2 Q. B. 78; affirm. by C. A. [1895] 2 Q. B. 601

He made no extra charge either for the use of the piano or for the entertainment thus afforded, nor did he pay or encourage the performers. He was convicted under s. 51 of the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890, for having kept or used the room for public entertainment without a licence for the purpose:—

lodging—Right of innkeeper to give notice to leave.

The common law liability of an innkeeper to receive and lodge a guest attaches only so long as the guest is a traveller, and a person who has been received at an inn as a traveller does not necessarily continue to reside there in that character. Whether at any given time during his residence he is still a traveller is a question of fact, and one of the ingredients for determining this fact is the length of time that has elapsed since his arrival. If the guest has lost the character of traveller the innkeeper is not bound to supply him with lodging, but is entitled, on giving reasonable notice, to require him to leave. LAMOND v. RICHARD C. The plt. was a signalman in the employment of the defts., a ry. co., who entered into a contract of insurance with him, by which they agreed to pay a weekly allowance in case of his being incapacitated from employment by reason of accident sustained in discharge of his duty in the co.'s service, such insurance to be absolute for all accidents, however caused, occurring to the insured in the fair and ordinary discharge of his duty. The plt. in the discharge of his duty endeavoured to prevent an accident to a train by signalling to the driver, and the excitement and fright arising from the danger to the train produced a nervous shock which incapacitated him from employment. 6. — Insurance against burglary — Execution of policy — Retaining possession of policy — Completed contract — Recital — Waiver of prepayment of premium.

A proposal for an insurance of goods against loss by burglary having been made by the plt. to the deft. co. on Dec. 14, 1895, the seal of the co. was affixed to a policy in conformity with the proposal at a meeting of the directors upon Dec. 27, and the policy was signed by two directors of the co. and their secretary. The policy recited that a premium had been paid for an insurance against loss by burglary from Dec. 14, 1895, to Jan. 1897, and purported to insure the plt.'s goods accordingly. It contained a provision that no insurance by way of renewal or otherwise should be held to be effected until the premium due thereon should have been paid. Upon the night of Dec. 26, or early in the morning of Dec. 27, a loss of goods included in the policy by burglary had taken place. The policy remained in the hands of the co., and nothing was paid by way of premium:—

Held, that the policy constituted a completed contract of insurance; that by the recital therein the defts. had waived the condition for prepayment of the premium; and therefore that the policy had attached. Roberts v. Security Co.

A condition in a policy required that where a difference arose as to the amount payable in case of fire, the matter should be referred to arbitrators to be chosen by the parties; and also, that before an award no action should be brought:—

11. — Concealment of material facts—Uberrima fides.

On the application of the appellant the respondent, an underwriter at Lloyd's, underwrote an instrument in the form of a policy whereby he guaranteed the solvency of a person who was surety for the repayment by the borrower of money lent by the appellant. The respondent made no inquiry as to the rate of interest payable by the borrower or as to the circumstances of the loan, and no information was given to him on those points. In fact the interest was over 30 per cent. and the borrower was unable to repay the loan. In an action on the policy the jury found that the transaction was not one of exceptional risk:—

Held, that the non-disclosure of the rate of interest and the circumstances of the loan did not constitute a defence, there being no evidence that those facts were material to the only risk undertaken by the respondent, namely, the solvency of the surety.

The plt., the holder of a debenture in a co. which matured for payment on Nov. 4, 1895, effected a policy of insurance with the defts. which, after reciting that the debenture matured on that day and that the plt. had paid a premium for insurance until that date, guaranteed to the plt. the due payment of the principal money secured by the debenture, if the debtors should make default for more than three calendar months in payment of any principal money due "under the debenture." Subsequently, by a special resolution of the debenture-holders, which was neither assented to nor dissented from by the plt., the date for payment of the debentures of the co. was postponed. The plt.'s debenture was not paid off on Nov. 4, 1895, nor in three calendar months after that date:—

Held, that, assuming the special resolution to be valid, the contract was nevertheless one of insurance against the default of the co. to pay the amount of the debenture on the original date; that there had been a default by the co. to pay money due under the debenture within the meaning of the policy; and that the plt. was therefore entitled to recover the amount of the policy from the defts., who were entitled on payment to be subrogated to the plt.'s rights as modified by the special resolution. FINLAY v. 13. — Securities—Deposit with bank—Insurance or suretyship—Statutory discharge.

By a document headed "policy of insurance" the defts. guaranteed to the plt. the "assured" payment of a deposit with a bank in a Colony if the bank should make default in payment. The bank made default. Subsequently a scheme of arrangement was sanctioned by a meeting of creditors and the Colonial Court. Under a Colonial statute the scheme was binding on the plt. who, however, did not assent to the scheme:—

Held, by C. A. (affirm. Div. Ct.), that the defts. were liable on their contract notwithstanding the scheme of arrangement.

Per Lord Esher M.R. and Lopes L.J., the contract was one of insurance against the default of the bank to pay. Therefore the defts. were liable to pay, but were entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the plt. under the scheme of arrangement.

Per Kay L. J., whether the contract was one of insurance or one of suretyship, the scheme of arrangement operated to discharge the bank under the statute and not by way of accord and satisfaction, and did not defeat the right vested in the plt. under the contract upon default made by the bank. DANE v. 23. — Abandonment—Cash advances for ship's disbursements—Prepaid freight—Rights of underwriter on ship.

The plts. were insurers of the hull and machinery of the defts.' steamship whilst on a voyage from Pensacola to West Hartlepool. The vessel stranded at the entrance to the latter harbour, and was abandoned by the defts. to the plts. as a constructive total loss, but the cargo of timber was subsequently delivered. At Pensacola the sum of 1677l. 19s. 10d. had been advanced to the master by the charterers, under a clause in the charterparty, by which "Sufficient cash for ship's ordinary disbursements at port of loading to be advanced the master by the charterers or their agents at the (agreed) exchange, ship paying 2½ per cent. commission, including insurance. Master to give his draft, on owners or consignees, as required and customary to cover same, which shall be paid out of the first freight collected." The defts. accepted from the consignees of the cargo, who held the master's draft for value, the freight less the above sum; but the plts. claimed the gross freight as a benefit incident to the ship:—

Held, by C. A. (Lord Esher M.R., Lopes and Kay L.J.J.), affirming the decision of Bruce J., [1895] P. 293, that the defts., in accounting to the plts. for the freight, were entitled to deduct the sum of 1677l. 19s. 10d., as, by the terms of the charterparty, the cash advanced at Pensacola was equivalent to prepaid freight, and, as such, did not pass to the plts. on the abandonment of the vessel and subsequent delivery of the cargo. THE "RED SEA" — — C. 24. — Articles of association imported into policy—Alteration not legally passed—Condition.

A. insured a ship with the M. Co. The policy imported the articles of association into the contract. Five years before the contract the co. altered their articles by adding "it shall be a condition of this insurance that the assured shall keep one-fifth (of the value of such ship) uninsured." This article was not legally confirmed, but was registered and printed on the back of the policy. A. also insured his ship with another co., so that altogether he had insured for more than four-fifths of the ship's value:—

Held, that notwithstanding the irregularity in the procedure by which the article had been altered, it was binding on A., and that, having broken the condition, he could not recover on the policy. The plts. declared under the policy a consignment of goods which had in fact, but not to their knowledge, been shipped on a vessel bound to a port east of Gibraltar. The vessel was lost west of Gibraltar before touching any Spanish port:—

Held, that the risk had never attached, and debts. were not liable. SIMON, ISRAEL & Co. v. SEDGWICK - - C. A. affirm. Wright J. [1893] 1 Q. B. 303

26. — Attachment of risk — Policy — Ships "sailing" on or after a specified date.

In an action on a policy of marine insurance on goods in ships "sailing on or after March 1," it appeared that the ship in question had finished loading her cargo before ten o'clock at night on Feb. 29, and, having previously cleared the Custom House, was then ready to proceed to sea; but by a regulation of the port ships were not permitted to go out to sea after dark. At ten o'clock the master, with the object of keeping his crew on board so as to be ready to start early in the morning, moved the ship away from the wharf about five hundred yards out into the river and there anchored. In so moving the ship, he placed her in a slightly more advantageous position for starting than she would have been in if she had remained at the wharf, but the gaining of that advantage was no part of the master's motive in moving her. On the following morning, March 1, she proceeded on her voyage:—

Held (affirming the judgment of Mathew J., [1898] 1 Q. B. 27), that the ship sailed on March 1, and not on Feb. 29, and that the policy attached. SEA INSURANCE Co. v. BLOGG

Upon an advance of money to enable the borrower to carry out an arrangement by which he was to become part-owner of a ship, and to be appointed her captain, which arrangement was afterwards carried out, it was agreed that the advance should be secured by a mortgage of his shares in the ship, and that he should cause an insurance to be effected on the ship to cover the mortgagee's interest. An insurance was effected, upon the instructions of the mortgagor and the co-owners of the ship, by the ship's husbands as well in their own names as for and in the name or names of all and every other person or persons to whom the same should appertain in part, or in all, against, among other things, perils of the sea and barratry of the master and mariners. It being alleged by way of defence to an action upon the policy of insurance by the executors of the mortgagee that the ship had been wilfully cast away by her captain, the mortgagor:—

Held, upon the argument of a preliminary question in the action, that, assuming the ship to have been so cast away, the mortgagee was nevertheless entitled to recover upon the policy of insurance in respect of a loss by perils of the sea, if he had nothing to do with the appointment of the mortgagor as captain; or in respect of a loss by barratry of the master, if he had taken part in his appointment.

A ship, insured under a policy covering war risks, was, whilst carrying contraband of war destined for one of two belligerent governments, captured by a cruiser belonging to the other. Thereupon the shipowners gave to the underwriters notice of abandonment, which was refused; and shortly afterwards they commenced an action on the policy. Subsequently, the war being at an end, the prize court of the captors decreed the ship to be returned to her owners:—

Held, that the return of the ship after the commencement of the action did not disentitle the owners to recover as for a total loss. RUYS v. ROYAL EXCHANGE ASSURANCE CORPORATION

30. — Capture—Property of alien enemy—Existing state of war—Intention to wage war—Seizure by belligerent government of property of its own subjects—Contract of indemnity—Validity.

The principle of law which invalidates insurance of an alien enemy's property does not apply to insurance against seizure by a belligerent government of the property of its own subjects.

Gold, the property of a co. carrying on business in the Transvaal, was insured with British underwriters, by a policy containing a clause against capture, for transit from mines in the Transvaal to the United Kingdom, and during transit was seized by the Transvaal Government. The policy was made, and the loss occurred, before the actual commencement of hostilities between Her Majesty's Government and the Transvaal. The co. sued on the policy, and the underwriters defended on the ground that the plaintiffs were alien enemies, and the loss was by arrest, restraint, or detention by the Transvaal Government, incidental to actual or expected hostilities against Her Majesty, and made for a purpose connected therewith, namely, to supply that Government with funds with which to levy war on Her Majesty. It was agreed that no dilatory plea should be set up based upon the fact that the plt. co. was alien and could not sue while the war lasted, but the case should be dealt with as if the war were over:—

Held, that the intention of the Transvaal Government to wage war subsequently could not be treated as creating an actual state of war, and that the commencement of the war, which took place a few days later, could not have the effect of making the seizure a hostile act:—

Held, also, that the subsequent breaking out of war did not invalidate the contract of insurance, and the plts. were entitled to recover. DRIEFONTAIN CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINES v. JANSON. WEST RAND CENTRAL GOLD MINES Co. v. DE ROUGE MONT Mathew J. [1900] 2 Q. B. 339

A policy of insurance upon freight contained a provision "No claim arising from the cancelling of any charter . . . shall be allowed." The vessel was delayed by perils of the sea; no agreement to set aside the charter was made, but the voyage contemplated by the charter became impossible:—

Held, that the charter had not been cancelled within the meaning of the provision, and that the assured were entitled to recover upon the policy. In re JAMIESON AND NEWCASTLE STEAMSHIP FREIGHT INSURANCE ASSOCIATION

The plts. insured the chartered freight against the ordinary perils, including fire; the ship was damaged by fire, and the hire ceased for 15 days:—

By the policy the insured risks were "of the seas, &c." in the usual form. Payment of hire ceased from an accident caused by sea perils for twenty-eight days. An action was brought on the policy to recover the hire so lost:—

Held, that the deft. was liable as the hire ceased through the peril insured against, that, though the whole freight might eventually be earned, the loss due to the postponement fell on the policy, and that the description on the slip sufficiently gave the deft. notice that he was insuring freight under a time charter containing the twenty-four hours' clause. The "BEDOUIN"

Barges were insured against loss or damage, which the insured should sustain, or become liable to others for, by reason of the collision of the barges with any other vessel. The barges having been damaged by collision, the insured claimed damages for loss in consequence of detention of the barges during repairs:—

35. — Collision clause—Construction—Sum paid "in respect of injury to such other ship or vessel itself"—Expenses of removal of wreck.

By a collision clause in a policy of marine insurance on ship the underwriters agreed that, if the ship assured should come into collision with any other ship or vessel, and the assured should in consequence thereof be found liable to pay, and should pay, any sums, not exceeding the value of the ship assured "in respect of injury to such other ship or vessel itself, or to the goods and effects on board thereof, or for loss of freight then being earned by such other ship or vessel," they would pay the assured a certain proportion of the sums so paid, but it was provided that this agreement should not be construed as extending to any sums the assured might become liable to pay in respect of loss of life or personal injury to individuals from any cause whatever.

The ship assured having come into collision with and sunk a tug in a river, commissioners acting under statutory powers removed the wreck, and claimed the expenses of so doing from the tug-owners, who paid them, and recovered the amount so paid in the Court of Admiralty from the assured:—

Held, that the collision clause did not cover the sum so recovered from the assured, inasmuch as it was not paid "in respect of injury to such other ship or vessel itself." BURGER v. INDEMNITY MUTUAL MARINE ASSURANCE Co.

A proviso to the collision clause in a policy read as follows: "This clause shall in no case extend to any sum which the assured may become liable to pay or shall pay for removal of obstructions under statutory powers consequent on such collision":—

Held, that damages paid to owners of a ship sunk in collision with the assurers' ship in respect of the removal of the sunken ship under statutory powers was covered by the proviso, and not recoverable from the insurers. THE "NORTH BRITAIN" - C. A. reversing G. Barnes J. [1894] P. 77

38. — Collision clause—Proviso—Construction of proviso "that this clause shall in no case extend to any sum which the assured may become liable to pay or shall pay for removal of obstructions under statutory powers."

A collision clause in a policy of marine insurance, covering damages payable in respect of a collision with another vessel, contained a proviso "that this clause shall in no case extend to any sum which the assured may become liable to pay or shall pay for removal of obstructions under statutory powers." The insured vessel came into collision with another vessel, which sank and was removed as an obstruction by commissioners under statutory powers. Both vessels were to blame for the collision. The owners of the insured vessel paid as damages to the owners of the sunken vessel a moiety of the sum which the latter had paid to the commissioners for the expenses of the removal, and made a claim upon the underwriters in respect of the moiety:—

Held, that the proviso must be construed as a business document prepared by men of business for their own use, and as business men would understand it: that it was not confined to payments made directly by the assured to the persons who caused the obstruction to be removed, but included indirect payments such as the moiety in question, and that the underwriters were not liable.

39. — Collision clause—Proximate cause.

A ship was insured against collision with any object, but not against perils of the sea. Her paddle-wheel came into collision with a snag in a river, and the cover of the condenser was broken. The water entered the ejection-pipe and came in through the hole in the condenser. The ejection-pipe was plugged, and so long as the ship was at anchor this stopped any damage; but on her being towed into dock, the wash of the water threw out the plug, and the ship had to be beached to save the crew:—

Held, that the collision was the proximate cause of the injury, and that the hole in the condenser was a continuing cause of damage and the real cause of the loss of the ship, and therefore the policy covered the loss. REISCHER v. BORWICK - C. A. affirm. Kennedy J. [1894] 2 Q. B. 548

40. — Collision clause—Sunken wreck.

A policy of re-insurance covered the risk of loss or damage through "collision with (inter alia) any sunken wreck." The ship ran aground and was found to be resting on the wreck of a steamer, the ribs of which projected through the sand; she subsequently shifted on to a bank of iron ore which had once formed part of a ship's cargo:—

Held, that the damage in both cases was "through collision with sunken wreck" within the clause in the policy. THE "MUNROE"

A policy insuring the ship N. from the Clyde (in tow) to Cardiff, contained a collision clause. While in tow the N.'s tug came into collision with and sunk another vessel, whose owners recovered damages against ship and tug:—

Held, that the collision of the tug with the injured vessel was a collision with the N. within the policy. MCCOWAN v. BAINE. THE "NIOBE"

of the policy, injured through a collision in the Thames whilst making for London, her port of destination, a hole being knocked in her bottom. Her cargo, cotton seed, through the action of the water and mud which came through the hold, became rotten, offensive, and worthless, and neither the cargo owners nor their underwriters would pay freight or take delivery. After the collision part of the cargo was put into lighters in order to allow the ship to be taken into dry dock, where she was temporarily patched. Subsequently she was towed to the Millwall Dock to discharge the rest of the cargo, and thereupon the sanitary authority of the district ordered her to abate the nuisance caused by the offensive condition of the cotton seed and to remove it. The ship accordingly was taken down to Dagenham Pier, and her cargo was there discharged by contractors on to land belonging to them. In an action on the policy by the shipowners to recover from their underwriter the cost of dealing with the cargo between the date of the collision and the date of its arrival at Dagenham, and also the contractors' charges for discharging and disposing of it there:—

Held, that the plts. were not entitled to recover any of such cost or charges.

46. — Deviation — Delay — Clause allowing deviation at premium to be arranged.

The plts. insured with the defts. by a Lloyd's policy a box containing bullion "at and from Boodinni to London," in a P. & O. steamer, "including all risks of every description from the mines by escort to railway station at Raichur (forty miles) thence by rail (400 miles) to Bombay, thence to London." The policy contained a clause covering the assured "in the event of deviation or change of voyage at a premium to be hereafter arranged." At Raichur the station-master improperly refused to receive the box at other than owner's risk rate, and the official in charge of it took it for safety to the plts.' head office at Secunderabad, 170 miles from Raichur, and off the route from that place to Bombay; the box was kept there for a month in the plts.' safe while arrangements were being made with the ry. co. The box was then taken to Raichur and forwarded by the prescribed route to London, where upon arrival a bar of gold was found to be missing; it had in fact been stolen while the box was in the plts.' office at Secunderabad:—

Held, that the taking of the box to Secunderabad was a necessary act done in the prosecution of the insured journey, and was within the scope of the adventure; that the risk was always a transit risk; that the delay at Secunderabad was unreasonably long, and that there was at that place an unjustifiable deviation not covered by the premium paid, but that, being a deviation in the course of the voyage, it was covered by the deviation clause in the policy, and the defts. were therefore liable. *HYDERABAD (DECCAN) CO. v. 47. — Dock expenses—Ship docked for repair of sea damage—Ship surveyed while in dock for Lloyd's classification — Apportionment of dock charges and expenses—Contribution.

There is no principle of law which requires a person to contribute to an outlay merely because he has derived a material benefit from it.

During a voyage covered by a policy of marine insurance a vessel was damaged by a peril insured against and was therefore put into dry dock for the necessary repairs. The survey of the vessel for renewing her classification was not due, but the owners (without causing delay or increase of dock expenses) took advantage of her being in dry dock to have the survey made, and her classification was renewed:—

Held, that the expenses of getting the vessel into and out of the dock, as well as those incurred in the use of the dock, fell upon the underwriters alone, and could not be apportioned between them and the owners.

United Kingdom" the freight was to be covered "from the time of the engagement of the goods."

Goods were engaged for the vessel which was to earn the freight, and were ready for shipment in her at the time of her loss, which occurred before she arrived at her first loading port on the west coast of South America:—

Held, by C. A. (Lord Esher M.R., Kay and A. L. Smith L.J.J.), affirming the decision of G. Barnes J., [1896] P. 154, that the "engagement" clause must be construed with reference to the voyage described in the policy, and, therefore, as the vessel had not arrived at her first loading port on the west coast of South America, the risk had not attached. THE "COPERNICUS"

50. — Freight—Loss of—Time policy—Exception—"Claim consequent on loss of time"—Loss of time arising from peril of the sea.

A time policy of insurance on freight was warranted "free from any claim consequent on loss of time, whether arising from a peril of the sea or otherwise." During a voyage the steamer's main shaft broke through a peril of the sea and the vessel returned to her port of loading. It was there found that the necessary delay for repairs would frustrate the objects of the adventure, and the charterers, as they were entitled to do by the foreign law applicable, put an end to the charter and the freight was lost. In an action on the policy for total loss of freight:—

Held, that the claim was consequent on loss of time within the meaning of the exception, and that the underwriters were not liable.

51. — Freight—Loss of—Exception—"Claim consequent on loss of time."

A policy of insurance was effected on the outward voyage of a steamer from London to Australian ports for freight expected to be earned on the homeward voyage, the subject-matter being described as "upon freight of frozen meat, chartered or as if chartered"; the policy was warranted "free from any claim consequent on loss of time, whether arising from a peril of the sea or otherwise." The ship, which was a general ship, having three of her five holds fitted with refrigerating machinery for frozen meat, arrived at Sydney on her outward voyage, and while discharging her outward cargo a serious fire broke out on board which destroyed the refrigerating apparatus, in consequence of which it became impossible to carry frozen meat upon the return voyage to England. In an action on the policy for total loss of freight on frozen meat:—

Held, that the case could not be distinguished from Bensaude v. Thames and Mersey Marine Insurance Co., [1897] A. C. 609, on the ground that the freight was not chartered freight; that the claim was therefore consequent on loss of time within the meaning of the exception, and that the underwriters were not liable. TURNBULL,

52. — Freight—Loss of—Policy—Construction—Coal cargo—Heating—Discharge and Sale—Peril of "Fire . . . and all other losses and misfortunes."

The plts. chartered their vessel to carry a cargo of coals from Newcastle, New South Wales, to Valparaiso at 15s. per ton payable on delivery, and they effected insurances with the defts. underwriters on the freight upon the ship by policies which insured against fire and "all other perils, losses, and misfortunes that have or shall come to the hurt, detriment, or damage of the subject-matter of the insurance or any part thereof."

The vessel only delivered a portion of the cargo at her port of discharge as, a few days after starting on the voyage, she was compelled to put into Sydney owing to the heating of the coals, and, on the recommendation of surveyors, the larger portion of the cargo was discharged and sold, entailing a consequent loss of freight:—

Held, by G. Barnes J., that the defts. were liable to make good to the plts. the loss of freight as a partial loss under the policies, for, though no part of the coal was ever actually on fire, it was reasonably certain that, if the vessel had continued on her direct voyage, the temperature of the coal would have risen until spontaneous combustion ensued, involving, in all probability, the destruction of ship and cargo by fire, so that there was an existing condition of things producing imminent danger of fire, not merely a fear of fire, or, if it was not a loss by fire, it was a loss ejusdem generis covered by the words "all other losses and misfortunes." *THE "KNIGHT OF ST. 53. — Freight—Lump chartered freight—Loss not by perils insured against—Cesser of liability clause—Loss of bill of lading freight—Waiver of lien for chartered freight.

Shipowners effected a policy of marine insurance on chartered freight under a charterparty, by which a ship was chartered for a voyage at a lump freight, and it was provided that the master should sign bills of lading at any rate of freight the charterers might require, but not under chartered rates, or difference to be settled in cash on signing bills of lading, that the charterers' liability should cease upon shipment of the cargo, provided the cargo was worth the freight, dead freight, and demurrage on arrival at the port of discharge, and that the vessel should have a lien on the cargo for recovery of all freight, dead freight, demurrage, and all other charges whatsoever. The charterers loaded the ship with a general cargo, and the master signed bills of lading, by which the goods mentioned in each bill of lading were made deliverable to the consignees thereof upon payment of the bill of lading freight in respect of those goods. The total amount of the bill of lading freight on the goods shipped exceeded the amount of the chartered freight. On the voyage the ship ran aground, and a certain portion of the cargo was in consequence jettisoned or otherwise lost. The ship, having been floated again, ultimately completed her voyage with the remainder of the cargo, which was worth the freight, dead freight, and demurrage on arrival of the ship. Owing to the loss of cargo as before mentioned, the amount of the bill of lading freight received by the ship-owners was less than that of the chartered freight. The shipowners brought an action against the underwriters on the policy to recover the difference between the two amounts:—

Held, that the action was not maintainable, the loss not having been occasioned by a peril of the sea, but by the plts.' own action in not so framing the bills of lading as to preserve to themselves their lien over the whole cargo for the chartered freight. BRANKELOW STEAMSHIP CO. v. 54. — Freight—Valued policy—Over value.

Plts., whose vessel was on the way to N., insured the homeward freight with defts. for 1500*l.* on "freight valued at 5500*l.*" The value at that time was reasonable, but the ship was unavoidably delayed and freights fell, and she sailed with a full cargo the freight on which was 3250*l.*, of which 952*l.* was paid in advance. The vessel was wrecked and 2298*l.*, the freight at risk, was lost. Plts. collected 3250*l.* from other insurers and claimed 1500*l.* from defts. The defts. contended that the valuation must be opened, and that, on the actual amount of freight at risk, the plts. had been fully indemnified under other policies:—

Held, that the valuation was binding, but that 1611*l.* must be deducted from the 5500*l.*, being a sum proportional to the 952*l.* prepaid freight, leaving 3889*l.* the value at risk, and that as plts. had already received 2298*l.*, so they were entitled to recover 639*l.* and a small return of premium from defts. THE "MAIN"

A policy was granted on chartered homeward freight—general average payable "as per foreign statement if required." Held, that as the ship was under charter outward bound to her loading port, and the only persons interested in the ship and chartered freight were the ship-owners, there could not be any general average loss for which the underwriters were liable under the policy, and, that as there was no need for any foreign adjustment, the foreign statement clause had no effect. THE "BRIGELLA." — G. 57. — General average payable per foreign statement—Adjustment—Dutch law.

Plts. insured a ship and freight with defts. by two policies. Each provided that general average should be payable per foreign statement, and contained a sue and labour clause, and covered loss through negligence of the master. The bills of lading exempted strandings, even if occasioned by the master's negligence. The ship was stranded through such negligence, and expenses were incurred. At the port of discharge in Holland a statement was prepared of the general average expenses, and the proportions due from ship, freight, and cargo. The defts. paid their share of these, but the consignees were held by the Dutch Courts not to be liable for general average:—

Held, that the foreign statement was conclusive between assured and underwriter as to what were general average expenses and as to their apportionment, and that the assured could not select certain items out of the expenses and allege that by English law they were particular average on the ship, or particular charges recoverable under the sue and labour clause. THE "MARY THOMAS"

58. — Goods not in ship at time of stranding—Freight—Valued policy.

A cargo of maize was insured for a fixed sum, including a sum for advance on freight. It was described as consisting of two separate lots to be shipped at different ports. The policy covered all risks in craft, and contained a warranty against particular average unless the ship or craft were stranded. The ship, after taking in the first lot, stranded between the foreign ports, but got off, reached the second port, and took on board the second lot of maize which had been waiting in craft, i.e., in lighters. The whole cargo was damaged on the homeward voyage:—

Held, that particular average could not be adjusted on the maize not on board the ship at the time of the stranding, and that the insurance "in craft" only related to damage done while on craft:—

Held, also, that the policy was to be treated as a policy on valued goods, and not a policy where the advanced freight was separately insured.

Held, also, that a merchant valuing his goods for a valued policy has a right to value them as

Plt. effected a time policy on the hull and machinery of a vessel, warranting a certain part of the value uninsured. He had also effected by “honour” policies insurance on “disbursements”:—

Held, by Kennedy J. and C. A., that the “honour” policies being on “disbursements” did not cover any part of the subject-matter of the policies on the hull and machinery, and therefore did not infringe the warranty.

A barge of plt.’s while in tow of the tug caused a collision, and plts. had to pay damages, costs, &c. Deft. had insured the tug for part only of its value. The insurers refused to pay the damages, costs, &c.; whereon deft. offered to hand the policies over to plts.; but plts. required deft. either to sue the underwriters or to pay the damages, &c., as damages for breach of contract. On deft.’s refusal plts. commenced proceedings and sued deft., who paid into Court the proportion of the damages on the uninsured part of the tug’s value:—

The plts., a mutual insurance association, sued the defts. for contributions or premiums payable in respect of an insurance of the defts.’ ship in the plts.’ club.

By the policy, which was in the form of a Lloyd’s policy, and subject to the plts.’ memorandum and articles of association and rules, the defts.’ manager insured the ship in his own name, and for, and in the names of, all persons to whom the same might appertain. By the memorandum one of the objects of the association was the mutual insurance “of ships which the members may be authorised to insure in their own names.” The articles defined a member as any person who, on behalf of himself, or of any other person, insures any ship in the association, and empowered a committee of the association to assess the members rateably in order to provide a fund to meet losses, and stipulated that the association should not be liable for losses, except to the extent of the fund which it could recover from members or persons liable. The rules provided for payment of premiums, for which the ships were to be assessed.

The defts. authorised the manager of their ship to enter her in the club, which he did, and he so became a member of the club, within the meaning of the plts.’ memorandum and articles of association, and personally liable to pay the contributions or premiums, which, under the articles of association and the rules, might be levied by the committee of the club. He became insolvent, and unable to pay, and the plts. sued the defts., as being the persons on whose behalf, and for whose benefit, the insurance was effected:—

Held, that the defts., being owners of an insurable interest, were the persons for whom the insurance was effected, that there was nothing in the memorandum and articles of association, or the rules, to exclude their liability to pay the premiums, and the plts. were entitled to recover.

F. misappropriated the stock :—

Held, that the intention was to insure a single adventure beginning with the delivery of the certificates to the post office and ending with the delivery to B. of the certificates and coupons, and that the defendants were liable under the policy. BARING BROTHERS & Co. v. A number of underwriters, styling themselves the S. Syndicate, by their manager underwrote a policy of marine insurance, the form of their subscription of which was as follows: "The S. The policy contained a special clause entitling the assured "by way of security for the performance of the obligations of the subscribing underwriters and of each and every of them" to the benefit by way of charge upon any policies of reinsurance that might be effected by them. The policy was in other respects in the form of an ordinary Lloyd's policy, the assurers being thereby expressed to bind themselves "each one for his own part" :—

Held, that on the face of the policy the contract of the assurers was several and not joint, and that they were individually liable only for the proportions standing against their respective names. TYSER v. SHIPOWNERS' SYNDICATE (RE-ASSURED) Mathew J. [1896] 1 Q. B. 135

72. — Re-insurance—Collision clause—Collision with sunken barge—Policy.

The plt. underwrote a time policy on a steamer, containing a clause that if the steamer should come into collision with any other vessel, and the insured should have to pay damages, the insurers would pay.

The deft. underwrote a policy of re-insurance, on the same steamer, for the same period, subject to the same clauses and conditions as the original policy, and to pay as might be paid thereon, but only to pay all claims for loss or damage done or received through collision.

During the period covered the steamer struck a barge, which had just been struck by collision with another vessel, and the steamer was damaged. The barge was raised next day, and sailed to her home port, and was repaired :—

Held, that, although, at the moment when the steamer struck her, the barge could not have been navigated, yet, as she became navigable as soon as she was raised, there was a collision between two navigable vessels, in respect of which the plt. was entitled to recover on the policy of re-insurance. CHANDLER v. The re-insurance policy contained the following clause: "Being a re-insurance applying to the lines of the W. —Sum insured not specified—Contract for sea insurance—Validity—Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), ss. 93, 95.

By a document called an “open cover” the deft., with other underwriters, agreed to re-insure the plts. to the extent of the excess, over certain amounts mentioned in the document, upon risks undertaken by them from time to time, on goods shipped by certain steamship lines therein mentioned. The limit of the excess on any one ship and the proportion of this amount taken by each underwriter were specified. Goods which were insured by the plts. on a steamship of one of the lines, were lost by a peril insured against, and the plts. paid the insurance and sued the deft. for his proportion of the excess:—

Held, that the document was a “contract for sea insurance” with s. 93, sub-s. 1, of the Stamp Act, 1891, which by that sub-section was not valid unless expressed in a policy of sea insurance, and that, as it did not specify “the sum or sums insured” as required by sub-s. 3, it was invalid as a policy of sea insurance, and could not be stamped and sued on as such, nor could it be sued on as a contract to issue a policy.

75. — Re-insurance—“Subject to same terms as original policy”—Policies in existence at date of re-insurance—Policies coming into existence subsequently—Limit of liability of re-insurer.

A time policy of insurance on a ship was expressed to be “a re-insurance of policy or policies” (here there was a blank space not filled in) “and subject to the same terms, conditions, and clauses as original policy or policies and to pay as may be paid thereon.” The assured had underwritten two time policies on the ship, and these were in force when the re-insurance was effected. Subsequently, during the currency of the re-insurance policy, the two other policies came to an end, and he underwrote a fresh time policy of insurance of the same subject-matter, differing as to the valuation of the ship and in other respects from the two earlier policies. A loss occurred and was paid under the fresh policy:—

Held, that the original policies referred to in the re-insurance policy were the policies then in existence, and that the liability of the re-insurer did not extend to losses which might be incurred by the assured under a policy not containing the same terms, conditions, and clauses as the original policies.

By a policy of marine insurance on cattle it was provided that the fittings of the ship were to be approved by Lloyd’s surveyor. The fittings were in fact so approved. During the voyage a large number of the cattle died, owing partly to the insufficiency of the appliances for ventilation and partly to the insufficient number of cattle-men appointed to attend to them:—

Held, that the ship was unseaworthy in both respects, that the implied warranty of seaworthiness was not excluded by the provision as to the approval of the fittings, and that the underwriters were not liable. SLEIGH v. TYSER

A ship was insured by the plts. “at and from Sydney to Newcastle, N.S.W., while there and thence to any port or ports place or places on the West Coast of South America . . . while there and thence to any port or ports” in the United Kingdom. . . . The plts. re-insured with the defts. a portion of their risk by a policy which was expressed to be “at and from Newcastle, N.S.W., to any port or ports place or places in any order on the West Coast of South America and for thirty days after arrival in final port however employed.”

The ship sailed with a cargo of coal from Newcastle, N.S.W., and proceeded to Valparaiso, on the West Coast of South America, where she discharged her cargo; she there loaded a small quantity of ballast and sugar and sailed for Talcahuano, another port on that coast, in order to finish loading there a cargo for the United Kingdom; before reaching Talcahuano she was totally lost, the loss occurring more than thirty days after her arrival at Valparaiso:—

Held, that the expressions in the re-insurance policy, “port or ports place or places” and “final port,” were not limited to ports or places of discharge and final port of discharge respectively, but must be construed to include ports or places of loading and final port of loading for the voyage to the United Kingdom; and that the plts., who had paid the claim of the owner on the original policy, were therefore entitled to recover

79.—Time policy—Repairs to ship—Particular average loss—Subsequent total loss—Assured not liable for cost of repairs—Non-liability of underwriters.

A vessel, under a charter to load home, sustained damage on the outward voyage which was repaired on arrival at the port of loading, and a payment on account of the particular average loss was made to the shipowners by the underwriters on a time policy on hull and machinery.

The repairs were paid for at the port of loading by the charterers as disbursements secured by a draft in their favour (including commission and insurance), signed by the master, pledging the ship for repayment on safe arrival at the port of discharge. This draft was insured by the charterers. The vessel was totally lost on the homeward voyage; and the underwriters on the time policy paid for a total loss, but the shipowners brought an action against them to recover the balance of the particular average loss. The underwriters counter-claimed for a return of the payment on account:—

Held, first, that the shipowners could not recover as they were never personally liable for the cost of the repairs, and had sustained no loss, the amount of the draft, on the loss of the ship, having been paid to the charterers by their insurers; secondly, that the underwriters were entitled to a return of the amount paid on account, as a payment made without prejudice and under a mistake of fact. THE "DORA FORSTER"

80.—Time policy—Warranty—Amount insured.

A warranty in a time policy that a vessel shall not be insured beyond a named amount means that it shall not be effectively insured to a larger amount; such a warranty is not broken by the owner taking out a new policy to cover the probable deficiency upon a policy effected with an underwriter who becomes insolvent, although the total nominal amount insured is thereby made to exceed the amount limited by the warranty.

A time policy upon hull and machinery of a steamship valued at 12,000*l.* contained a proviso, "Warranted 2400*l.* uninsured." The owner effected time policies to the total amount of 9600*l.*, one of the policies being effected with a syndicate to the amount of 5000*l.* During the currency of the policies the syndicate stopped payment, and eventually the large majority of its members became insolvent. The owner, estimating that the syndicate policy was not effective for more than 2000*l.*, took out further policies upon the ship for 3000*l.* The ship was lost, and the total amount that the owner could in the most favourable event recover upon all the policies was less than 9600*l.*:—

Held, that there had been no breach of the warranty. GENERAL INSURANCE CO. OF TRIESTE, LD. (ASSICURAZIONI GENERALI) v. CORY

81.—Valued policy—Constructive total loss.

Where a ship has been sunk in deep water, the underwriters cannot escape liability as for a total constructive loss by gratuitously intervening and taking upon themselves, between the date of notice of abandonment and the time when legal proceedings are commenced under the policy, the expenses of raising the insured vessel and saving her from being a constructive total loss. And such a gratuitous expenditure will not relieve the underwriters from their contractual liability.

The test whether a ship has become a constructive total loss is the same in English as in Scottish law, although these laws may differ in regard to the date at which the test ought to be applied. In considering whether a constructive total loss has occurred, the question is whether a shipowner of ordinary prudence and uninsured would have gone to the expense of raising a sunken ship and repairing her.

A ship insured under a valued policy was struck by a squall and sunk in harbour. The underwriters received notice of abandonment from the insured; but before action brought they, by a large expenditure of their own, raised the ship and claimed that, as the ship could at the date of the action have been repaired by the expenditure of less money than her total value, the loss was not a total but a partial one:—

Held, reversing the decision of Ct. of Sess., (1897) 24 R. 893, that the underwriters could not change a constructive total loss into a partial loss by intervening and raising the ship at their own expense. SAILING SHIP "BLAIRMORE" Co. v. MACBREDIE

82.—Wagering policy—Insurable interest—"P.p.i. clause"—"Ship"—Marine Insurance Act, 1745 (19 Geo. 2, c. 37), s. 1.

A policy of marine insurance whereby the assured is entitled to be indemnified against loss in respect of the non-arrival of a ship at a certain port by a certain date is a policy of insurance on the ship within the meaning of 19 Geo. 2, c. 37, s. 1.

Where, on the trial of an action, the plt.'s case discloses that the transaction which is the basis of his claim is illegal, the Court cannot properly ignore the illegality or give effect to the claim, even if the illegality be not pleaded or relied on by the defts. The Court will, therefore, not enforce a policy of marine insurance which is illegal under 19 Geo. 2, c. 37, s. 1, by reason of its containing a clause that the policy itself is to be deemed a full and sufficient proof of interest, although that defence is not set up by the underwriters. GEDGE v. The plts. made advances to the customer by honouring his overdrafts from time to time down to a period more than six years before the action, but made no advances subsequently to that period, and the customer paid sums in to his account with the bank against his liability from time to time down to a period within six years before the action. At the end of each half-year the plts. debited him in account with the interest for the half-year on the amount owing by him from time to time, and carried forward the balance to his debit as the amount owing at the commencement of the next half-year:—

Held, that the plts.' right of action upon the guarantee in respect of the sums advanced by them to the customer was barred by the Statute of Limitations, but that the action was maintainable in respect of interest which had accrued due from the customer within six years before the action and had not been paid.

The rule with regard to the appropriation of payments by which interest is presumed to be paid before principal is not applicable in the case of interest on an overdrawn account which according to the practice of bankers has been from time to time converted into principal. *PARR'S BANKING CO. v. By a law of the State of New York penalties were inflicted on debtors for "misrepresentation." The penalties were paid to the creditors in satisfaction pro tanto of their debt. The New York Courts had decided that actions for these penalties were criminal actions. An action was brought in an Ontario Court upon a judgment of a New York Court under this statute:—

Held, that these actions, being by a subject to enforce in his own interest a liability for the protection of his private rights, were remedial and not penal within the rule of international law which prohibits the Courts of one state from executing the penal laws of another state:

Held, also, that it was the duty of the Ontario Court to decide whether the New York statute was remedial or fully penal, and that it was not bound by the interpretation of the New York Courts. HUNTINGTON v. ATTRILL

3. — Goods seized in execution—Order for sale—Application of proceeds of sale—"In such manner and upon such terms as may be just"—R. S. C., Order LVII., r. 12.

By Order LVII., r. 12, "When goods or chattels have been seized in execution by a sheriff or other officer charged with the execution of process of the High Court, and any claimant alleges that he is entitled, under a bill of sale or otherwise, to the goods or chattels by way of security for debt, the Court or a judge may order the sale of the whole or a part thereof, and direct the application of the proceeds of the sale in such manner and upon such terms as may be just."

A sheriff seized goods in execution under a judgment of the High Court. The goods were claimed by the grantee of a bill of sale, as security for a debt due to him from the judgment debtor. The debt was payable, with interest at a high rate per cent., by instalments extending over a period of several months, the greater part of which had not expired. The sheriff interpleaded, and a judge at chambers, on the application of the judgment creditor, under Order LVII., r. 12, ordered the sale of the goods, and the payment to the claimant of the balance of his debt with interest at the agreed rate, but only up to the time of such payment. On appeal:—

Held, by Lord Esher M.R. and A. L. Smith L.J., Rigby L.J. dissenting, that the power of the judge to make an order as to the application of the proceeds of the sale upon such terms as may be just was not limited by the practice of the Courts of Equity in suits for redemption, that the judge had power to make the order, and that the order was just. *FORSTER v. A claimant in interpleader deposited the value of the goods to abide the event of the issue. She failed to establish her claim, and the money was paid to the judgment creditor in part satisfaction. The judgment creditor levied again on the same goods:—

The sheriff obtained an interpleader order for an issue to be tried in the county court. The landlord claimed for rent, which the execution creditor did not meet. The sheriff went out of possession, and the issue was not tried. An application was made by the sheriff to discharge the order for trial of the issue, and by the execution creditor that the claim should be barred and the costs and those of the sheriff paid by the claimant:—

In interpleader proceedings an order was made transferring the proceedings to the county court, the claimants to be at liberty to pay a sum of money to the sheriff for the release of the goods seized, "to abide the order of the county court." The execution creditor abandoned his claim, and the claimants had judgment, but the judge refused as unnecessary an order as to the money in the hands of the sheriff. The sheriff refused to pay and the claimants brought an action against him for money had and received:—

Held, that the sheriff was not bound to pay over without an order of the county court. DISCOUNT BANKING CO. OF ENGLAND AND WALES v. LAMBARDE

The co. then went into liquidation in France. An issue was directed to try the title to the net proceeds of the goods as between the liquidator of the co. and the judgment creditors:—

Held, that the receivership order operated as equitable execution, and that the judgment creditors were entitled to the proceeds of the goods. LEYASSEUR v. MASON & BARRY, LD.

The doctrine of Cooper v. France, (1850) 19 L. J. (Ch.) 313—that on the death intestate of a co-parcener, a co-heiress of the purchaser of land, her son, notwithstanding s. 2 of the Inheritance Act, 1833, stands in her place quoad her share—applies equally in favour of her more remote lineal descendants.

Accordingly, on the death intestate of a son of such a co-parcener, it was held that the entire share descended on the nephew of such son (the nephew being a grandson of the co-parcener), and that no part thereof descended to the descendants of a sister of the co-parcener.

The purchase-money of a lunatic's descended moiety of land sold in 1863 under s. 124 of the Lunacy Regulation Act, 1853, held, under s. 135, transmissible, upon his death intestate, in precisely the same manner as the descended moiety if the same had not been sold. In re MATSON. JAMES v. In an action by the respondents for damages in respect of a nuisance committed by the appellants and for an injunction, it was alleged that the appellants, who had a prescriptive right to load, unload, and store coals on their wharf in such manner as to spread their coal dust over the respondents' wharf, had within twenty years so extended the site of their operations and altered the structure of their works and the conduct of their business as to produce injurious effects not covered by any prescriptive right. The question submitted was whether the appellants' works taken as a whole had by their extension been rendered more injurious than before to the respondents' works taken as a whole. The jury found that there had been no increase in inconvenience and discomfort to the respondents, and a verdict was entered for the appellants. On motion before the Full Court judgment was given for the respondents, on the ground that the change in the incidence of the dust produced by the extension and alteration of site and works so altered the nature of the easement as to constitute a new wrong:—

Held, on appeal, that the question whether by this extension and alteration there had been a variation in the kind of servitude imposed on the respondents substantial enough to cause a new and appreciable wrong was a question of fact which had not been submitted to the jury, and that there must be a new trial.

Under s. 438 of the Jamaica Code of Civil Procedure the Court cannot decide a question of fact never submitted to the jury, though it may draw inferences of fact not inconsistent with the findings. ROYAL MAIL STEAM PACKET CO. v. GEORGE & BRANDAY P. C. [1900] A. C. 480 contingent on half-yearly profits. Bonds were then issued in terms of the agreement and not of the law, and by a certificate of the Government were erroneously certified to be according to the law:—

Held, (1) that, reading agreement and law together, the bonds should be treated as yearly bonds, and the accounts should be taken at the end of each year, and not on the footing that there was to be a rest at the end of every half-year; (2) that the costs of the issue of the bonds could not be charged against their income to the prejudice of the holders; (3) that the amount chargeable for stores on the expenditure of any year must be regulated by what was fair in the interest of all concerned. *JAMAICA RY. In an action by the appellant, who had registered his English trade-mark of “Club-Soda,” in Jamaica, under Law 17 of 1888, it appeared that the respondents persisted in selling their goods under the same name in a way calculated to deceive:—

Held, that the appellant was not disentitled to relief merely because he had printed on his label the words “manufactured in Ireland by H.M. Royal Letters Patent.” Those words, explained by the evidence to relate to patented machinery, did not necessarily represent or induce belief contrary to the fact that the ingredients of their article were patented. *COCHRANE v. By the law of Jersey a conveyance of real estate by a husband to his wife, stante matrimonio, to the prejudice of his lawful heirs, is invalid.

Where, by a deed of family arrangement, it appeared that a husband and his wife, separated quant aux biens, each took from her father (subject to a charge of an annuity in his favour) a conjoint interest in the settled lands during their joint lives, with the chance of the fee on survivorship:—

Held, that the deed was in no sense a conveyance by the husband of any interest acquired by him thereunder; and that on his death before his wife his interest ceased and could not pass to his heirs. BROOMER v. ARTHUR P. C. [1898] A. C. 777

By O. in C. dated Feb. 4, 1869, the Consular Court of Madagascar was invested with plenary civil jurisdiction over all British subjects within the area specified by the order, but was not expressly created a Court of Record. The judge of the Court was sued for abuse of his judicial powers:—

Held, that while sitting and acting as judge he was entitled to the same protection as the judge of an English Court of Record, and that an action of damages would not lie against him for dismissing without proof an action which he held to be vexatious, since in so doing, however inadequate his reasons, he was acting within his jurisdiction. *HAGGARD v. A judgment debt is not enforceable as a charge against the judgment debtor's legal remainder in real estate: nor does an order obtained by the judgment creditor appointing a receiver constitute an "actual delivery in execution" within s. 1 of the Judgments Act, 1864, entitling the creditor to a sale of the remainder under s. 4.

appeal to quarter sessions against a conviction under the Act, the justices in quarter sessions are empowered to order the treasurer of "the county, riding, division, or place in which the offence shall have been committed," to pay the prosecutor's costs.

A county borough had a separate commission of the peace, but not a separate court of quarter sessions. An appeal from a conviction under the Act by the borough justices having been successfully brought to the quarter sessions for the county, an order was made by quarter sessions upon the borough treasurer for payment of the prosecutor's costs:—

Held, that the word "place" in the section must be construed as ejusdem generis with "county, riding, division," and meant a place having a separate court of quarter sessions; and that the order of quarter sessions was therefore wrongly made upon the borough treasurer, and should have been made upon the treasurer of the county. *REG. v. Where, therefore, a child apparently under fourteen years of age is charged before a court of summary jurisdiction with larceny, and the charge is dismissed, but evidence is given that he frequents the company of reputed thieves, he may be sent to an industrial school under s. 14 of the Act without being brought afresh before the Court by summons or otherwise upon a substantive charge under that section. REG. v. Where it was proved that a person suffering from such a disorder had proper lodging and accommodation, so far as he himself was concerned, at his father's house, but that he could not be properly isolated and there would be danger of infection to the other inmates of the house if he remained there:—

Held, that there was evidence that he was "without proper lodging or accommodation" within the meaning of s. 124. WARWICK v. GRAHAM

A search-warrant may be issued on an allegation of reasonable suspicion of larceny.

On an application to a justice of the peace for a search-warrant, the sworn information upon which the application was made stated that the informant "hath just and reasonable cause to suspect and doth suspect that W. J. has in his possession certain property belonging to" (the informant), "and that he has requested the said W. J. to allow him to search several boxes which the said W. J. has had packed ready to be taken away, and which he refuses to be looked through." The justice issued his warrant, which was executed. In an action of trespass alleging that the information was insufficient, and that the warrant was consequently illegal and without jurisdiction:—

Held, affirming the judgment of the Lord Chief Justice, [1896] 2 Q. B. 418, that it is not necessary in such an information to allege that a larceny has in fact been committed, but that it is enough to allege a suspicion that a larceny has been committed; that it is not necessary to specify in the information the particular goods for which a search is desired; that the information in question substantially averred that the informant suspected certain property of his to have been stolen; and that it was sufficient to give the justice jurisdiction. JONES v. Application made by a relieving officer of a union for an order under s. 299, sub-s. 1, of the Lunacy Act, 1890, directing him to seize a sum of money standing in the Post Office Savings Bank in the name of a lunatic who had become chargeable to the union for the purpose of paying the expenses of maintenance and incidental expenses incurred or to be incurred in relation to the lunatic. The justices having declined to make the order, the relieving officer applied to them to state a special case for the opinion of the Court. The justices stated a case subject to the question whether they had any power to state it:—

Held, that the justices when acting under s. 299 were not acting as a court of summary jurisdiction, and had consequently no power to state a case under the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 11). In re WILLIAM BETHELL - Div. Ct. [1899] W. N. 47

A certificate of a conviction upon an indictment for felony is in a civil proceeding res inter alios acta, and is not admissible as evidence of the fact that the person charged committed the felony in respect of which he was convicted. This rule has not been affected by recent alterations in the law of evidence at criminal trials.

The Court of Chancery of the County Palatine of Lancaster has jurisdiction under Lord Cairns' Act to direct that any question of fact arising in a suit or proceeding be tried by a special or common jury before the Court itself, and has jurisdiction under Sir John Rolfe's Act to direct an issue to try any question of fact by a jury at the Assizes.

By her will Y. gave, devised, and bequeathed a moiety of her residuary real and personal estate to W., who was tried, convicted, and sentenced to death (though subsequently reprieved) for the wilful murder of Y. In an action by the next of kin of Y. for a declaration that W. had, by reason of his felonious act in wilfully murdering the testatrix, forfeited all his beneficial interest in the moiety of her residuary personal estate (there being no real estate), and for a declaration that the testatrix died intestate as to such moiety, the plts. tendered as conclusive proof that W. murdered the testatrix a certificate under the 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 13, of the trial, conviction, and sentence of W. for the wilful murder of the testatrix:—

Held, that such certificate was not only not conclusive proof of the fact alleged, but was not even admissible as evidence of the fact in the civil proceedings.

Upon summons by W. to have the question of fact of the alleged wilful murder of the testatrix by him tried before the Vice-Chancellor with a jury:—

Held, that the Court had jurisdiction under

Lord Cairns' Act to direct the question of fact to be tried by a jury before itself, and under Sir John Rolt's Act to direct an issue to try the question of fact by a jury at the Assizes; that this was a question of fact which ought to be tried by a jury; and that, under the circumstances, such question would be better tried before a judge and jury at the Assizes. *YATES v. B., one of the defendants in an action commenced in the Chancery Court of the County Palatine of Lancaster (Liverpool District), entered an appearance in that action by his solicitors on May 12, 1897. By the judgment in the action, dated July 8, 1897, it was declared that a payment made by another deft., W., to B., to the knowledge of the latter out of trust moneys in the hands of W., was a breach of trust to which B. was a party, and that the sum paid ought to be considered as money then in the possession or under the control of B. as a trustee or person acting in a fiduciary capacity; and it was thereby ordered and adjudged that W. and B. should within seven days after service of the judgment pay the amount into Court. The judgment was served on B., but neither he nor W. paid the amount in, and on January 17, 1898, on motion by the plts., the Palatine Court gave leave to the plts. to serve a writ of attachment on B. for his disobedience to the judgment. By reason of B. residing at Bishop Auckland, out of the jurisdiction of the Palatine Court, the order could not be enforced without the assistance of the High Court. The plts. moved ex parte to make the order an order of the High Court under s. 15 of the Court of Chancery of Lancaster Act, 1850:—

Held, that notwithstanding s. 7 of the Court of Chancery of Lancaster Act, 1854, this was the proper step to be taken to enforce the order. DUNMORE v. WHARAM

1. — Compensation for crops — “Allotment,” what is—Lease—Allotments and Cottage Gardens Compensation for Crops Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 26), s. 4.

By s. 4 of the Allotments and Cottage Gardens Compensation for Crops Act, 1887, “allotment” means (inter alia) “any parcel of land of not more than two acres in extent held by a tenant under a landlord and cultivated as a garden.”—

Held, that a piece of land less than two acres in extent, occupied by a seedsman for the purpose of his business, and having in it vegetables, fruit trees, and flowering plants which he sold, was not “cultivated as a garden,” and was, therefore, not an “allotment” within the definition in s. 4. *COOPER v. SECT. 57 of the Agricultural Holdings Act, 1883, provides that “a tenant shall not be entitled to claim compensation by custom or otherwise than in manner authorized by this Act in respect of any improvement for which he is entitled to compensation under or in pursuance of this Act.”—

Held, that this provision only applied to a tenant claiming compensation under the Act, and did not exclude the right of a tenant to claim, under an agreement outside the Act, compensation for improvements in respect of which

3. — Compensation for improvements—Agreement—Tenant giving up possession before expiration of term—Agricultural Holdings (England) Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 61), s. 57.

A tenant of agricultural land and his landlord agreed that the land should be given up before the expiration of the term, and that the tenant should receive compensation in respect of feeding stuffs, which is an improvement comprised in the 1st sched. to the Agricultural Holdings Act, 1883, and of three other matters not mentioned in the Act. The amount to be paid was to be ascertained by two valuers appointed by the landlord and the tenant respectively. In an action by the tenant to recover the amount agreed on by the valuers:—

Held, that such an agreement between landlord and tenant is not prohibited by the Agricultural Holdings Act, 1883; that the claim not being for compensation under the Act, the procedure under the Act did not apply to it; and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover in the action. *NEWBY v. Under the Agricultural Holdings Act, 1883, the executors of a landlord, tenant for life, who have been compelled under the Act to pay compensation for improvements to an outgoing tenant, who had claimed compensation and whose tenancy had been determined before the death of the landlord, are entitled to a charge upon the holding in respect of the amount which they have so paid.

year, payable quarterly on the four usual quarters for payment of rent in every year, and the tenant agreed to pay the said rent at the times aforesaid, and to use the said premises as garden ground only, and to manure, crop, and cultivate the same in a husbandlike manner, and it was agreed that the tenancy might be determined by either party giving to the other three calendar months' notice to quit, or of his intention of quitting, as the case might be, on any day of the year. The land so let was used by the tenant as a market-garden. In Oct. 1896, the landlord gave the tenant notice to quit. The tenant claimed compensation for improvements under s. 4 of the Market Gardeners' Compensation Act, 1895, which is to be read as part of the Agricultural Holdings Act, 1883:—

Held, that the agreement created a tenancy from year to year, and therefore the tenant came within s. 4 of the Market Gardeners' Compensation Act, 1895, as having held under a "contract of tenancy" as defined by s. 61 of the Agricultural Holdings Act, 1883.

An outgoing tenant of a farm gave due notice of intention to claim from the lessor compensation for improvements under the Agricultural Holdings Act, 1883, and the lessor gave due notice of intention to counter-claim against the tenant for breaches of covenant. After the expiration of the time for giving notices of claim prescribed by the Act, both parties gave notices of further claims, some of which were in respect of matters not within the Act. Referees and an umpire having been appointed in pursuance of the Act, before the reference proceeded, an agreement in writing was made between the parties by which all matters in difference as stated in the claims and counter-claims were referred to the referees and umpire already appointed under the Act, and it was agreed that all the said matters shall be dealt with in one award only of the said referees or umpire. The referees disagreeing, the umpire made an award by which he found that a certain amount was due from the lessor to the tenant, and a larger amount was due from the tenant to the lessor, and awarded that the tenant should pay the balance to the lessor. The amount not being paid:—

Held, that leave might be given to the lessor to enforce the award in the same manner as a judgment or order to the same effect under s. 12 of the Arbitration Act, 1889. In re LLOYD AND TROTH - C. A. [1899] 1 Q. B. 559

Holdings (England) Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 61), s. 7.

A tenant of a farm on a yearly tenancy was by the terms of his lease to hold the land from Feb. 2 and the buildings from May 1. In June, 1896, he gave notice to the landlord of his intention to deliver up the land on Feb. 2, 1897, on which latter date he duly delivered up possession of the land. On Feb. 26, 1897, he gave notice to the landlord under the Agricultural Holdings Act, 1883, claiming compensation for unexhausted improvements; and on May 1, 1897, he gave up possession of the buildings.

By s. 7 of the said Act notice of claim for compensation must be given two months at least before the determination of the tenancy:—

Held, that the tenancy determined within the meaning of the Act on Feb. 2 and not on May 1, and that the notice of claim was consequently too late. MORLEY v. CARTER - Div. Ct. [1897]

A lessee assigned the lease to assignee No. 1, who assigned it to assignee No. 2, each assignment containing a covenant by the assignee to pay the rent, and keep his assignor indemnified against the covenants in the lease.

Assignee No. 1 became bankrupt, assignee No. 2 died, and the lessee, who had been called upon to pay the rent, bought from the bankrupt's trustee, and took an assignment of, the bankrupt's right to indemnity, withdrawing a proof he (the lessee) had carried in, and releasing the estate of the bankrupt:—

Held, that the right of the trustee in bankruptcy of assignee No. 1 to sue the executors of assignee No. 2 upon his covenant to indemnify was "property" within the meaning of s. 168 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, and assignable by the trustee; and that damages in an action by the trustee against the executors would not be confined to the dividend payable to the lessee in respect of his proof against the estate of assignee No. 1, but extended to the whole amount of the obligation under the covenants to pay and indemnify entered into by such assignee:

And held also, upon the construction of the deed of assignment and release, that the lessee had acquired the right of the trustee to sue the executors of assignee No. 2, and that the release did not extend to all the estate of the bankrupt, but that the asset assigned to the lessee must be excluded from it.

On a house being erected on an adjoining plot 20 feet from the lessee's boundary and facing it, the lessee put a trellis-work screen 12 feet high on the top of the boundary wall which was 8 feet high:—

Held, (1) that on the construction of the deed "building" therein included any erection, and that therefore the screen was a breach of the covenant against building; (2) that on the facts the screen interfered with the adjoining tenant's pleasurable enjoyment of his house, and was

A lease by a wine merchant of an hotel for thirty years at a rent of 1500*l.* a year contained a covenant by the lessee with the lessor, his heirs and assigns, that he, the lessee, would not during the term buy or sell on the premises any foreign wines other than should have been supplied by the lessor, his successors or assigns; and it was provided that so long as the lessee should observe this covenant the lessor should allow the lessee an abatement of 75*l.* from each quarter's rent.

The lessor died during the term. The plts., who were his executors, sold his wine business to the firm of W. & P.; and the lessee assigned the lease of the hotel to the defts. The defts. claimed that, so long as they continued to buy wines from W. & P., they were entitled to the abatement from each quarter's rent; but the plts. insisted that, when the ownership of the wine business and the ownership of the reversion upon the lease were severed, the covenant to buy wines ceased to be operative, and consequently that the defts. were not entitled to the benefit of the proviso:—

Held, (1.) that, although the covenant to buy wines did not in terms include the assigns of the lessee, the burden of it ran with the tenant's interest under the lease, and (2.) that the assigns of the lessee were still bound by the covenant and entitled to the benefit of the proviso for abatement of rent.

By lease made in 1889 between A. The lease contained the following covenant: "And the lessee hereby covenants with the lessor" "that he, the lessee, his executors, administrators, lessees, tenants, and assigns, and all other persons for the time being carrying on the business of a beer retailer or publican upon the said premises will and shall during the said term of years hereby granted deal exclusively with the lessor or his firm of H. & Sons or his or their successors in business for all beers, ales, porter, stout (except bottled stout), and other like articles which shall be sold or consumed upon the said hereby demised premises, or shall be brought thereon to be so sold or consumed; and will not nor shall during the said term on any pretence whatsoever purchase, take in, or receive, or have in his or their possession, or directly or indirectly sell or dispose of, or permit the sale, disposal, or consumption, in or upon the said premises of any such articles other than such as shall have been purchased or taken of the lessor or his firm or his or their successors in business, provided that he or they shall be willing to supply the same at the price and terms usually charged by the lessor or his firm to his or their tenants." The lease also contained a declaration that "where the context allows the expressions 'the lessor' and 'the lessee' used in these premises include besides the said A. H. his executors, administrators, and assigns, besides the said N. his executors, administrators, and assigns." The lease was afterwards assigned to the deft. J., who carried on on the premises the business of a beer retailer and publican. A. H., in 1891, assigned the reversion expectant on the lease to a co., which, in 1896, assigned such reversion to the plt. co. H. & Sons were still carrying on their business at the brewery at Nechells. The deft. refused to deal exclusively with the plt. co. for his beers, and that co. brought an action for an injunction to restrain him from buying his beers elsewhere. He was willing to buy his beers from H. & Sons:—

Held, that the covenant, as explained by the interpretation clause, restricted the dealings in beer to dealings with the lessor, his executors, administrators, or his firm while he was a member thereof; that the lessor, his executors, administrators, or assigns were the persons to dictate to the tenant as to where he was to purchase his beers; and that the plt. co. was entitled to the injunction. BIRMINGHAM BREWERIES, LD. v. borough, and published a list of tolls. The salesman was convicted of selling cattle on the said premises, which were within the borough, but not within the limits of the market:—

Held, (1.) that the creation of the borough market was not a derogation from the grant of the leases; (2.) that the leases gave no right to sell cattle within s. 166 of the Public Health Act, 1875, with which the corporation could not interfere by establishing a market; (3.) that the salesman was liable to a penalty under s. 13 of the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847. SPURLING v. The deft. was the lessee of a shop, the lease containing a covenant by him not to assign or underlet the premises. There was a condition for re-entry upon breach of any of the covenants in the lease. The deft. let the premises to the plt. for the remainder of the term, this lease containing a covenant by the deft. for quiet enjoyment of the premises by the plt. without any interruption by the deft. or any person lawfully claiming through him. Subsequently the original lessor assigned the reversion, and the assignees of the reversion brought an action against the deft. to recover possession of the premises as upon the breach of covenant against assignment. The deft. gave the plt. notice of the action, telling him that there was no defence, and signed a consent to judgment for possession, under which the plt. was evicted:—

Held, that, as the deft. had a good defence to the action, the breach of covenant having occurred before the assignment of the reversion, the act of the deft. in consenting to judgment for possession was the cause of the interruption of the plt.'s enjoyment, and was therefore a breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment. COHEN v. 27. — Repairs—Damages, Measure of—Breach of covenant.

The proper measure of damages in an action, brought after the expiration of the term for a breach of covenant to repair, is the cost of putting the premises into the state of repair required by the covenant. The fact that the incoming tenant has effected the repairs at his own cost will not deprive the lessor of his right to recover the full damages. JOYNER v. WEEKS

C. A. [1891] 2 Q. B. 31

28. — Repairs—Damages—Measure of—Breach of covenant.

Principle upon which damages for non-repair of premises should be assessed in an action brought after the termination of the lease, where the lessor had in a previous action for the same object obtained money as damages from the lessee, but no repairs had been effected. HENDERSON v. THORN Div. Ct. [1893] 2 Q. B. 161

29. — Repairs—Damages—Measure of—Lease and sub-lease—Covenants to keep and yield up in repair.

Where a lease contains covenants to keep the demised premises in repair and to deliver them up in good repair, and a sub-lease is granted containing similar covenants with notice to the sub-lessee of the original lease, and the lessee brings an action against the sub-lessee for breach of his covenant to keep in repair, it is right in assessing the damages to take into account the liability of the lessee upon the covenants in the original lease.

30. — Repairs—Indemnity—Mesne assignment—Covenant by assignee to indemnify assignor—Breach of covenant before assignment—Liability.

A lease, the reversion on which was vested in the plt., contained a covenant by the lessee to repair and keep in repair the demised premises. By virtue of divers mesne assignments and other acts in the law the term had become vested in the defts., the executors of a deceased assignee of the lease. They, as "trustees," assigned the premises, which were then out of repair, for the residue of the term to an assignee, who covenanted with them thenceforth to pay the rent reserved by the lease, and perform the lessee's covenants therein contained, and to keep them indemnified from the payment and performance thereof respectively. The premises remaining out of repair, the plt. subsequently brought an action against the defts. for breach of the covenant to repair, and they brought in their assignee as third party. The plt. having recovered damages against the defts. in the action:—

Held, that the third party was liable under his covenant to indemnify them against those damages. GOOCH v. CLUTTERBUCK.

31. — Repairs—Lease to trustee—Covenant by lessee to repair—Occupation by cestui que trust—Liability of cestui que trust for breach of trustee's covenant.

A lease of a house contained a covenant by the lessee for himself and his assigns to repair, and also a declaration that the lessee held the premises in trust for the deft. The deft. occupied the premises during the whole of the term, as it was intended by the parties that she should do, and she paid the rent. Upon the expiry of the term the premises were out of repair:—

Held, that the fact of the deft. having the beneficial interest in the lease did not, either by itself or coupled with the fact of occupation by her, create any equitable liability in her for the breach of the lessee's covenant. RAMAGE v. WOMACK Wright J. [1899] W. N. 246; [1900] 1 Q. B. 116

32. — Repairs—Notice of breach—Continuing breach—Breach after expiration of notice—Right to re-enter—Rent due before action—Joinder of claim for possession and claim for rent—Conveyancing Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), s. 14, sub-s. 1.

A lease contained a general covenant to repair and a covenant to repair within three months after notice. The premises being out of repair, the lessor gave notice to the lessee under the Conveyancing Act, 1881, to repair within a given time. Three days after the expiration of the notice a quarter's rent became due. No repairs having been done by the tenant, the lessor brought an action to recover possession, and in the action claimed the quarter's rent:—

Held, that, the breach of covenant being a continuing one, no new notice was required in respect of the non-repair after the expiration of the time specified in the notice, and that the claim for rent did not affect the right to possession in respect of non-repair after the date when the rent fell due. *PENTON v. An underlessee (even though of the whole premises in the head lease) is not as between himself and the original lessor a "lessee" within s. 2 (1) of the Conveyancing Act, 1892, and therefore the lessor is not entitled to recover from him the costs of solicitor and surveyor incurred in preparing a schedule of defects in repair.

A lessee, in breach of his covenant not to sublet without the written consent of the lessor, sublet his premises to a turpentine distiller. The house was burnt down:—

The deft. W., the owner of a row of houses, let No. 3 to H. as a shop for carrying on a specified business. The lessee covenanted to use the premises for that business only, and the lessor covenanted not to let any of the other houses for the purposes of the same business. The plt. was the assignee of H.'s lease, continuing the business.

Afterwards W. let No. 1 to the deft. B., taking a covenant from B. to use the premises only for the purposes of another specified business.

The deft. B. sold various articles which, as the Court found, were comprised in the plt.'s business:—

Held, that W. had broken no covenant of his own, and was not bound to sue B. for the breach of his covenant with W. at the request of the plt., who was neither covenantee nor assignee of B.'s covenant; and the plt., therefore, could sue neither W. nor B.

Held, that the tenancy commenced on May 19 and not on June 24, and expired at midnight on May 18:

Held, also (A. L. Smith L.J. doubting), that the notice for the anniversary of the commencement of the tenancy was sufficient, and that there was no distinction between tenancies commencing “at” a particular time or “on” a particular day and “from” the same day:

Held, also, that an oral agreement to continue the tenancy beyond a year was invalid under the Statute of Frauds, there being no fresh demise.

On the faith of this agreement the plt., with the deft.'s knowledge and assent, sold the premises to a purchaser with the right to possession at Midsummer. At Midsummer the deft. refused to give up possession; whereupon the plt. brought ejectment:—

Held, that the action was maintainable upon the grounds: (1.) that the agreement of Dec., although bad as an agreement to surrender by reason of its not being in writing, as required by the Statute of Frauds, amounted to an acceptance of a new tenancy to end at Midsummer, and that the acceptance of that new tenancy worked a surrender of the old one by operation of law; and (2.) that the deft. by his conduct in allowing the plt. to contract an obligation to his purchaser on the faith of the agreement was estopped from disputing that his original tenancy was one which terminated at Midsummer. FENNER v. 41. — Holding over—Implied yearly tenancy—Implication of law.

If a tenant remain in possession by consent after the expiration of a lease, and there is no stipulation to the contrary, the law implies a yearly tenancy on such of the terms of the former lease as are not inconsistent with such a tenancy.

The implication in this case was confirmed by the terms of a letter containing a notice to quit, sent after the expiration of the original lease. DOUGAL v. MCCARTHY C. A. [1893] 1 Q. B. 736

42. — Holding over—Telephone wire—Notice determining tenancy—Acceptance of rent—Waiver of notice.

In 1889 the N. Co. supplied a telephone wire and apparatus to K. for three years at a rent payable quarterly; upon the expiration of the term the parties continued the agreement by mutual consent. On Dec. 30, 1893, the last day of a quarter, the N. Co. gave notice terminating the agreement forthwith and demanded rent up to Dec. 31, being one day beyond the quarter. The rent was paid and accepted by the N. Co. On motion to restrain the N. Co. from cutting the wire:—

Held, that the agreement created the relation of landlord and tenant between the N. Co. and K., and therefore the acceptance of rent for a day beyond the notice determining the tenancy acted as a waiver of that notice. An injunction granted restraining the N. Co. from interfering with the wire and apparatus.

Held, that the notice must be construed in accordance with the intention of the landlord, and that since it was impossible to suppose that it was intended to be a notice to quit on March 25, 1898, when the current year's tenancy expired, it must be taken to be a good notice to quit the premises on March 25, 1899.

By a lease the lessee covenanted not to assign or underlet the demised premises without the consent of the lessor, and there was a proviso for re-entry on breach of any of the covenants, or if the lessee should (inter alia) execute an assignment for the benefit of his creditors. The lessee executed an assignment of all his real and personal property, except that of a leasehold tenure, to a trustee for the benefit of his creditors, and he declared that he would stand possessed of all his leasehold property upon trust for the trustee and to assign and dispose of the same in such manner as the trustee should direct for the purposes of the deed. The trustee entered into possession of the demised premises, but no legal assignment of them was executed. The lessor served upon the trustee a notice alleging as ground of forfeiture the execution by the lessee of the assignment. In an action against the lessee to recover possession of the premises:—

Held, that, as there had been no legal assignment of the premises, there had been no breach of the covenant against assignment:

Held, also, that the condition against assignment for the benefit of creditors was not a condition against disposing of the land leased within the meaning of s. 14, sub-s. 6 (i), of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, and therefore service of notice on the lessee under s. 14, sub-s. 1, was necessary before the lessor could enforce his right of re-entry; and that service of the notice on the trustee under the deed was not a sufficient compliance with the provisions of s. 14, sub-s. 1, and s. 67, sub-s. 2, of the Act.

A condition against the disposing of the land leased within the meaning of s. 14, sub-s. 6 (i), of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, means a condition which on its face is against the disposing of the land leased. GENTLE v. FAULKNER

The p<sup>l</sup>ts. demised to the defts. a piece of land, and the defts. covenanted within twelve months to erect certain buildings thereon, and also at all times during the term of the lease to keep the premises "so to be erected as aforesaid in good and substantial repair, and the same in good and substantial repair" to deliver up at the expiration of the term. The lease contained a proviso for re-entry on breach of any of the lessees' covenants. The buildings were never erected, but the p<sup>l</sup>ts. accepted the quarter's rent which accrued next after the expiration of the twelve months limited for the erection of the buildings. The p<sup>l</sup>ts. afterwards served upon the defts. a notice under the Conveyancing Act, 1881, s. 14, referring to the building covenant only, and calling upon the defts. to erect the buildings. In an action for recovery of possession:—

Held, that the building covenant was broken once for all at the expiration of the twelve months, and was not a continuing covenant; that the repairing covenant implied an obligation to erect the buildings, and there was, therefore, a continuing breach of it; but that inasmuch as the notice under the Conveyancing Act only referred to the building covenant as to the breach of which there was a waiver, and did not mention the breach of the repairing covenant, the notice was insufficient and the action failed. *JACOB v. The notice to be served by a lessor on his lessee, under s. 14, sub-s. 1, of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, "specifying the particular breach of covenant complained of," to entitle the lessor to enforce by action a right of re-entry for the breach, must be given in such detail as will enable the lessee to understand what is complained of, so that he may have an opportunity of remedying the breach before action brought.

A mere general notice of breach of a specified covenant is not sufficient.

The reversion on the lease was conveyed to the plts. and the lease was assigned by the lessees with the plts.' consent to the defts., an individual and a joint stock co. The deft. co. subsequently passed a resolution for a voluntary winding-up, not by reason of insolvency, but for the purpose of reconstruction with additional capital:—

Held, that the deft. co. had entered into liquidation within the meaning of the condition contained in the lease; and,

Semble, that the condition ran with the land.

But held, also, that a sufficient notice under s. 14, sub-s. 1, of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, was a condition precedent to enforcing the forfeiture, the effect of s. 2, sub-s. 2, of the Conveyancing Act, 1892, being to take the case of a forfeiture on bankruptcy or liquidation out of sub-s. 6 of s. 14 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, for a year from the date of the bankruptcy or liquidation; and that the notice given was not sufficient, and therefore the action was not maintainable.

A lease contained a covenant by the lessees for themselves and their assigns not to assign or underlet the premises without the consent of the lessors, which was not to be unreasonably withheld. Assignees of the lease entered into an agreement for the sale thereof by which it was provided that at a certain period, though the purchase might not then be completed, the purchasers should be let into possession of the premises, and should from that day pay the rents and outgoings in respect of the same. The purchasers were let into possession under that agreement, the purchase remaining uncompleted:—

Held, that so letting them into possession was not a breach of the covenant against assignment or underletting without the consent of the lessors.

In a lease for years the lessees covenanted not to underlet, assign, or part with the possession of the premises, or any part thereof, without the consent in writing of the lessors, such consent not to be unreasonably withheld. The lease contained a power to re-enter upon breach of any of the covenants. The lessees, without asking for the consent of the lessors, underlet a part of the premises to a tenant who already occupied under the lessors, and to whom no objection could have been reasonably taken. In an action by the lessors to recover possession of the premises for breach of covenant:—

Held, that the fact that the breach of covenant had been committed through forgetfulness, or because the lessees thought it unimportant, did not form a ground for giving them equitable relief against forfeiture for breach of the covenant, and that the plts. were entitled to succeed in the action.

The Court has jurisdiction under the Conveyancing Act, 1892, to relieve an underlessee against a forfeiture of the original lease, though such forfeiture was occasioned by breach of a covenant not to assign or underlet without licence, and therefore could not be relieved against in favour of the lessee under the Conveyancing Act, 1881, with which the later Act is to be read together. This jurisdiction, however, will be exercised with caution and sparingly, and the underlessee asking for its exercise must shew that he is blameless, and has taken all precautions which a reasonably cautious and careful person would use.

Where, therefore, L. purchased an underlease under a contract which did not give him a right to call for the title of the original lessee, who was bound by covenant not to assign or underlet without licence, and he purchased with the intention of laying out a considerable sum upon the property:—

Held, that L. had been guilty of negligence in entering into such a contract, that he was precluded from properly investigating the title, and that relief against a forfeiture by the original lessee for breach of the covenant ought not to be granted to him. IMRAY v. OAKSHETTE

63. — Relief—Underlease—Protection of underlessee—Vesting order—Public-house—Discretion of Court—Variation in amount of rent—Conveyancing Act, 1892 (55 & 56 Vict. c. 13), s. 4.

Action by lessors to recover possession of a tavern let on lease to C. & Co. for a term of years at a yearly rent of 300*l.* The lease gave a power of re-entry to the lessors if and whenever the lessees or their assigns being a co. should enter into liquidation whether compulsory or voluntary. By underlease C. & Co., in consideration of a premium of 8000*l.*, sub-let the tavern to the deft. F. for a period of years at a yearly rent of 800*l.*, reducible to 300*l.* so long as he should get his beers from C. & Co. This the deft. F. had always done.

Subsequently C. & Co. and two other brewing cos. amalgamated, and for this purpose each of the amalgamating cos. went into voluntary liquidation.

Plts. claimed that the liquidation of C. & Co.,

was a forfeiture of the lease. Deft. F. counter-claimed for an order under the Conveyancing Act, 1892, vesting in him the demised premises for the residue of the underlease:—

Held, on the authority of Horsey Estate, Ltd. v. Steiger, [1899] 2 Q. B. 79, that there was a forfeiture, and that the lease and the underlease were absolutely gone. The Legislature by s. 4 of the Conveyancing Act, 1892, did not revive the underlease, but vested a new estate in the underlessee. The vesting might be for part of the term or of part of the property, but it could not be for any longer term than the original subdemise. The section conferred upon the Court a very wide discretion as to the conditions upon which a vesting order should be granted, and enabled it to impose such conditions as the circumstances of each particular case might require. The covenant as to buying beer from C. & Co. would, of course, not be inserted in the new lease. Upon the evidence the rent of 300l. was too small a rent to pay for the tavern if it was not a tied house. There would be a reference to chambers to consider what was a fair rent. *EWART v. The lessee counter-claimed for damages from a nuisance caused by the lessor, who worked a pump on land adjacent to that leased, and caused a house on it to be useless. The house was old at the commencement of the term, and the vibration would not have injured a reasonably solid house:—

Held, that the lessor was liable under an implied obligation not to derogate from his grant, and could not therefore rely upon any defence by user of adjoining property so as to interfere with the stability of the demised premises founded on the state of the house at the commencement of the term:—

Held, also, that the lessee was entitled to damages, not only for the value of the term, but also for expenses which were a natural consequence of the lessor's tort, such as the expense of removing his business. GROSVENOR HOTEL CO. v. HAMILTON C. A. [1894] 2 Q. B. 836

A leakage from the cistern having been noticed by the plt., he informed the deft., who instructed a competent plumber to remedy it. In consequence of the negligence of the plumber an overflow occurred, which damaged the plt.'s goods:—

Held, that the deft. was not liable, since the plt. had assented to the water being on the premises, and therefore the deft., by instructing a competent plumber to remedy the leakage, had discharged his duty to the plt. BLAKE v. WOOLF

Where in a grant or devise the description of parcels is made up of more than one part, and one part is true and the other false, there, if the part which is true describes the subject with sufficient legal certainty, the untrue part will be rejected as falsa demonstratio, and will not vitiate the grant or devise. The doctrine is not to be confined to cases where the first part of the description is true and the latter untrue, it being immaterial in what part of the description the falsa demonstratio occurs.

Rooms on the second floor of Nos. 13 and 14, Old Bond Street were demised, together with free ingress and egress for the lessee "through the staircase and passages of No. 13" to and from the demised premises: there was no staircase in No. 13 leading to the demised premises, but there was a staircase in No. 14:—

Held, upon the evidence, that there had been a common mistake, the intention of the parties being that the lessee should have the use of the staircase of No. 14, and that accordingly the doctrine of falsa demonstratio did not apply; but the Court ordered the lease to be rectified by the substitution of the staircase of "No. 14" for that of "No. 13," thus in effect affirming the order of Romer J., [1898] W. The plt. being dissatisfied with the slow progress made by the deft., gave him notice to determine the agreement; but the deft. having previously given notice to the plt. of his intention to exercise the option to purchase, declined to give up possession. On an action by the plt. to restrain the deft. from trespassing on or interfering with the plt.'s possession of the land:—

Held, on the evidence, that the deft. had made default in not "forthwith proceeding" to carry out the stipulations of the agreement; but that as there was no condition precedent that the deft. should not have committed any breach of the conditions contained in the building agreement, the option to purchase was well exercised, and a binding contract was thereby made for the sale and purchase of the property; that the determination of the leasing part of the building agreement by the notice given to the deft. for breach of its conditions, did not destroy or affect the contract for sale created by the exercise of the option to purchase; and that the plt.'s action must therefore be dismissed.

After B. had bought the land the sub-leases were discovered, and B. claimed damages from S. for breach of covenant against incumbrances implied in his conveyance as beneficial owner:—

Held, by C. A., that the sub-lessees claimed through S.; that the term had not been merged by the surrender so as to exclude the sub-leases, and consequently, as S.'s covenant ran with the land, and B.'s fraud did not, S. was liable to the plt. for damages.

A. by the freeholder, his heirs or assigns. D. A. died, and his reversion became vested in the deft., who surrendered his term to the freeholder and obtained from him a new lease for an extended term, subject to existing underleases. F. having died, the plt. acquired from his executors his interest in the premises, and then claimed specific performance of D. A.'s covenant with F.:—

Held, (1) on the construction of the covenant, that it was personal to D. A. alone, and did not bind his representatives; (2) that the covenant was not strictly a covenant for renewal, and did not on that account run with the land; but, assuming that it did run with the land, the doctrine of perpetuity had no application; and (3), following *Brereton v. A dispute arose between the parties as to whether the purchase-money ought to be paid into court. They paid the money into court, as under s. 76 of the Lands Clauses Act, 1845.

During the currency of the notice the ry. took possession. The compensation was assessed by a metropolitan magistrate :—

Held, that assuming that N. was entitled to compensation for damage to the residue of the term in respect of the adjoining lands, the magistrate had no jurisdiction under s. 121 to assess it, and that he had only jurisdiction to assess compensation for the value of N.'s interest in the land taken and for damage to the adjoining lands during the currency of the notice. *BEXLEY HEATH RY. under a specified acreage of adjoining land the surface of which was not included in the demise contained a proviso that the lessee might at any time during the term sink a pit or pits in any part of the lands the surface of which was not demised, but so that the position of the pits should be subject to the reasonable approval of the lessor. The lessor having contracted to sell a portion of the surface to a ry. co., the co. gave to the lessee a notice to treat in respect of his interest in the surface of the land taken by them, and the lessee gave to the lessor notice under the lease of his intention to sink a pit in the land so taken :

Held, that the right to sink a pit in the land the surface of which was not included in the demise, although subject to the reasonable approval of the lessor, gave the lessee an interest in land which was the subject of compensation under s. 68 of the Lands Clauses Act, 1845. In re MASTERS AND GREAT WESTERN RY. Held, that the arbitrator was entitled, in determining whether there would be “material detriment” to the remainder of the property arising from the taking of a portion, to take into consideration all the circumstances of the case, including the sufficiency of the proposed access :

A ry. co. seeking to acquire land under the provisions of the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, an arbitration took place under that Act to determine the amount of compensation to be paid by them to the owner of the land. The co. had previously made an offer of the sum of 11,000*l.* Part of the landowner's claim was in respect of damage that would be caused to the residue of his land, which was building land, by cutting it off from the natural outfall for its drainage. When the parties came before the arbitrator, it was agreed between them that a right should be reserved to the landowner of making a sewer, for the purpose of draining his land, under the ry. and land of the company; and consequently no claim in respect of such damage as before mentioned was ultimately submitted to the arbitrator. The arbitrator awarded the sum of 10,029*l.* to the landowner:—

Held, that, although the sum awarded was less than the amount of the co.'s offer, the co. were liable under s. 34 of the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, to pay the costs of the arbitration to the landowner on the ground that the award was not in respect of the same subject-matter as that in respect of which the offer was made. *MILES v. The general rule, that the costs of reinvestment in land of funds paid into court under the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, by different public bodies are to be borne equally by the different bodies, does not apply when there is great inequality in the amounts as paid by the different bodies, but the scale fee, surveyor's fee, and ad valorem stamp duty will be apportioned rateably between the different bodies. In re BISHOPSGATE FOUNDATION

Three sums of Consols in court represented the investment of purchase-money received from three ry. cos., A., B., and C., in respect of lands of a charity taken by them. The A. co., in whose case the amount exceeded 1000*l.*, had agreed to pay 40*l.* in lieu of costs. On petition for the transfer of the Consols to the official trustees of charitable funds:—

Held, that the costs of the B. and C. cos. must be limited to the amount which would have been payable on a summons. ATT.-GEN. v. ST. JOHN'S HOSPITAL, BATH

Where the special Act of a ry. co. gave them the right to make a tunnel and to "appropriate and use" the subsoil of plt.'s land for that purpose without wholly taking the land:—

Land acquired by the A. ry. co. for the purposes of their undertaking was, within the period prescribed by statute for the sale by that co. of their superfluous lands, compulsorily purchased by the B. ry. co.:—

Held, that such compulsory sale afforded no ground for inferring that the land was not required by the A. co. for the purposes of their undertaking and was thus superfluous land within the Lands Clauses Act, 1845; and accordingly that the right of pre-emption under s. 128 of that Act did not arise.

The adjoining landowner claimed the land as "superfluous land" within the meaning of s. 120 of the Lands Clauses (Scotland) Act, 1845:—

By s. 37 of the Licensing Act, 1872, a grant of a new licence in counties by licensing justices is not valid unless confirmed by the county licensing committee. By s. 43, any person who opposes before licensing justices the grant of a new licence, and no other person, may oppose the confirmation of the grant by the confirming authority; by the same section power is given in counties to the justices in quarter sessions to make rules as to the proceedings to be adopted for confirmation of new licences.

A court of quarter sessions, acting under s. 43, made a rule that every person intending to oppose the confirmation of any provisional licence before the county licensing committee must, within seven days after the grant of the provisional licence, give notice to the applicant and to the clerk of the peace of his intention to oppose the confirmation :—

Held, that the rule was ultra vires, as imposing a condition upon the statutory right to oppose the confirmation of the licence not imposed or authorized by the statute. REG. v. BRID. Ex parte NEEDLES - - Div. Ct. [1898] 2 Q. B. 340

The holder of a licence in respect of a house about to be pulled down for a public purpose gave the notices required by s. 14 of the Alehouse Act, 1828, of his intention to apply for a licence in respect of another house not then licensed. The notices given did not comply with the provisions of s. 40 of the Licensing Act, 1872. The licensing justices at a special session granted the application upon information that the notices were in order. A rule nisi having been obtained for a writ of mandamus to the justices to hear and determine the application according to law:—

Held, by a Div. Ct., that the notices were not in order, and that the justices had acted without jurisdiction, but that, as they had heard and determined the application, a mandamus ought not to issue:

Held, by C. A., that the notices were good, as the specific provisions with regard to them in s. 14 of the Alehouse Act, 1828, had not been expressly or impliedly repealed by s. 40 of the Licensing Act, 1872. REG. v. NICHOLSON

The holder of an “off licence” for the sale of beer, wine and spirits in respect of certain premises applied at the general annual licensing meeting for a renewal of that licence. He also applied for a new licence of a similar description in respect of other premises, having given the notices requisite in applications for new licences, but not those requisite in applications for orders for removal. The licensing justices granted the application for the new licence on condition that he gave up the licence for the first-mentioned premises and ceased forthwith to carry on the sale of beer, wine and spirits there. The applicant agreed to do this and the new licence was granted:—

Held, that this was neither in form nor in substance an order sanctioning the removal of a licence, and that the justices had an absolute discretion to grant the new licence.

A beerhouse licence had been continuously renewed in respect of premises which had been licensed prior to May, 1869; but the licence had not been exercised and no beer had been sold on the premises for a long period:—

Held, that this fact gave the justices no jurisdiction to refuse to renew the licence to a new tenant who intended to carry on the premises as bona fide licensed premises, but that they were still limited to the four grounds of objection specified in s. 8 of the Wine and Beerhouse Act, 1869.

May 1, 1869, and the licence had since been renewed from time to time, and therefore a renewal or transfer of the licence could only be refused on one or more of the four grounds specified in the Wine and Beerhouse Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 27), ss. 8, 19.

The Court of summary jurisdiction, however, heard evidence on other grounds of objection than the four specified in that Act, and refused the application on such other grounds, but at the direction of the Court stated this special case for their opinion:—

Held, that the Court of summary jurisdiction could only refuse the application on one of the four specified grounds, and that, as they had not done so, they had no power to refuse to the owner of the premises authority to carry on the same business upon the same premises until the next special sessions for licensing purposes under s. 15 of the Licensing Act, 1874. The discretion of justices as to granting or refusing a licence by way of renewal under the Licensing Acts, 1828, 1872, and 1874, in respect of exciseable liquors to be drunk on the premises is absolute, provided it be exercised judicially.

The licensing justices have a discretion to refuse the renewal on the ground of remoteness from police supervision, and the character and necessities of the neighbourhood.

Licensing justices are “a court of summary jurisdiction” (Interpretation Act, 1889, s. 13, sub-s. 11), and appeals from them are governed by s. 31 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879. Licensing justices have therefore power to state a case. A notice of appeal by case stated to quarter sessions was served on the justices’ clerk,

On appeal from refusal of a licence all the objections which were open before the justices are open before the quarter sessions. The holder of a licence, the renewal of which could only be refused on one or more of four grounds specified in the Wine and Beerhouse Acts, 1869, 1870, had been served with notice of objection in due time. The justices refused the renewal, but omitted to state on what ground. The holder appealed to quarter sessions, and was not served with fresh notice of objection. At the appeal he contended that as the justices had stated no ground for their decision the appeal should be granted. The Court overruled this contention, and proceeded to hear the case on its merits. The appellant then withdrew, declining to take further part in the proceedings. The Court heard the appeal and dismissed it, giving no ground for the refusal:—

Held, that the appeal had been heard and determined. Ex parte GORMAN

That a notice given under s. 42 of the Licensing Act, 1872, does not state on its face that it is given by direction of the justices is an irregularity which is waived by the appearance of the appellant. An appeal in such a case to quarter sessions is a rehearing; and that Court can entertain and decide on any objection raised by the notice. WHIFFEN v. MALLING JUSTICES

At the general annual licensing meeting for a borough, a request was made by the head constable that the renewal of the licence of a beerhouse which had been licensed prior to May, 1869, should be withheld until the adjourned meeting, and the justices accordingly adjourned the granting of the renewal:—

Held, that this request amounted to the making of an objection within the meaning of the proviso to s. 42, sub-s. 2, of the Licensing Act, 1872, and gave the justices jurisdiction to refuse the renewal at the adjourned meeting on one of the four grounds specified in s. 8 of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 27. *HAWKINS v. An objection to the renewal of a licence made in open court at the general annual licensing meeting is a good "objection made" within the meaning of the proviso to s. 42 of the Licensing Act, 1872, although neither the grounds nor the nature of the objection are stated by the objector, and upon such an objection being made the justices have power to postpone the application to an adjourned meeting.

Where a person, who has successfully opposed the granting of a licence, subsequently successfully shews cause against the making absolute of a rule nisi for a mandamus to the licensing justices or to quarter sessions, the Court has a discretion to grant him the costs of shewing cause against the rule, although licensing justices are not a court of summary jurisdiction.

Justices refused to renew a licence, dating from before May 1, 1869, in consequence of a conviction for permitting drunkenness on the premises. Before the licence expired on Oct. 10 the tenant gave up his house, and the new tenant applied for a transfer of the licence. His notice of application was given on Oct. 9, and his application was made on Nov. 17, under s. 14 of the Alehouse Act, 1828:—

Held, that the licence had not been continuously “in force” from before May 1, 1869, to the date of the application within s. 19 of the Wine and Beerhouse Act, 1869, and therefore a refusal to transfer need not be confined to one of the four grounds mentioned in that section.

In order to constitute the offence of opening or keeping open licensed premises for the sale of intoxicating liquor during prohibited hours, within the meaning of s. 9 of the Licensing Act, 1874, there must be means of access to customers to the interior of the premises from the outside. If therefore the outer doors are closed at the closing hour, so as to prevent access from the outside, the offence of keeping open the premises during prohibited hours is not proved by evidence that customers, who were on the premises before closing time, remained there and were supplied with liquor afterwards, although such evidence might justify a conviction under the same section for selling intoxicating liquor during prohibited hours. *JEFFREY v. The Licensing Act, 1874 (which is to be read as one with the Licensing Act, 1872), provides (ss. 3, 9) that all premises in which intoxicating liquors are sold by retail shall be closed at certain specified times; and penalties are imposed on persons keeping open such premises during the prohibited times. Sect. 72 of the Licensing Act, 1872, provides that "nothing in this Act shall affect or apply to the sale of intoxicating liquors by proprietors of theatres, in pursuance of the Acts in that behalf":—

Held, that s. 72 of the Act of 1872 did not apply to exempt the proprietor of a theatre, who held an excise licence to sell intoxicating liquors by retail at his theatre, from the provisions, with respect to closing, contained in the Act of 1874. GALLAGHER v. RUDD — — — Div. Ct.

A brewer at Burnley, having an off-licence for the sale of beer by retail, sent round a traveller to obtain orders at Accrington. The traveller handed to the consumer at whose house he called a printed and stamped post-card, addressed to the brewery; the traveller wrote on the post-card the quantity of ale required, and the customer signed the post-card, which was then posted by the traveller. The post-card contained a request to the brewer to supply the quantity of ale named weekly until further notice, and concluded as follows: "I assent to the appropriation by you to this order at your brewery of goods of the above description and in a deliverable state." The brewer's carter selected at the brewery, in accordance with such an order, six bottles of ale, one of which he labelled with the customer's name and address, and placed them in a coop or box together with six other bottles for another customer, one of which was also labelled. The goods (with others) were then placed on a lorry, and ultimately delivered at the customer's house, where they were paid for on delivery:—

Held, that there had been a complete sale and appropriation of the goods at the brewery at Burnley, and that the brewer could not be convicted under s. 3 of the Licensing Act, 1872, of selling intoxicating liquor at a place where he was not authorized by his licence to sell the same.

ing any licence for the sale of intoxicating liquors.”

By the Licensing Act, 1874, s. 15, “Where any licensed person is convicted for the first time of” (inter alia) “selling spirits without a spirit licence . . . and in consequence either becomes personally disqualified or has his licence forfeited,” the owner of the premises may apply for authority to carry on the business.

A licensed person was convicted on the same day of two separate offences, for selling spirits without a spirit licence on two different days, and, on the second conviction, was ordered to be disqualified from holding a licence. The owner applied for authority to carry on the business. The justices held that they had no jurisdiction to hear and determine the application.

Held, that the words in s. 15 of the Act of 1874, “for the first time,” govern the words “becomes personally disqualified or has his licence forfeited,” as well as the words specifying the offences, and therefore the owner was entitled to apply, and the justices had jurisdiction to make an order. Ex parte FLINN & SONS.

43. — Without licence—Sale—House of Commons—Sale by servant of the House—Charge against servant—Licensing Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 94), s. 3.

The provisions of s. 3 of the Licensing Act, 1872, imposing penalties for unlawful sale of liquor without a licence, do not apply to a servant selling liquor, the property of his master, by his master's order.

The respondent, a servant of the House of Commons, sold liquor, the property of the House, at a bar within the precincts of the House. The purchaser of the liquor was not a member of either House of Parliament, and the place where it was sold was not licensed for the sale of liquor.

On a case stated on an information charging the respondent with unlawfully selling liquor which he was not licensed to sell, contrary to s. 3 of the Licensing Act, 1872:—

Held, that the respondent was not guilty of an offence against the Act, and could not be convicted. WILLIAMSON v. NORRIS

Justices at a licensing meeting are not a court of summary jurisdiction; a refusal of licensing justices to renew a licence is not "a conviction or order"; and appeals to quarter sessions against the refusal to grant a licence are not regulated by s. 31 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879.

At a licensing meeting a person objected to the renewal of a licence, and it was refused. On appeal to quarter sessions the objector did not appear, and the renewal was granted:—

renew a licence, s. 29 of the Alehouse Act, 1828, has not been repealed; but it does not apply to the costs of justices who make themselves "parties" within the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, s. 31, sub-s. 5, to an appeal by taking an active part in opposing the appeal.

When an appeal is dismissed quarter sessions have a discretion as to the costs of justices who thus make themselves "parties" to the appeal, and if they have exercised their discretion by refusing to give the justices their costs, the High Court cannot interfere by mandamus.

Appeals to quarter sessions from justices acting in their jurisdiction under the Licensing Acts are now regulated by the Summary Jurisdiction Acts, 1848, 1879, and 1884. But these Acts do not repeal s. 29 of the Alehouse Act, 1828.

judgment of licensing justices is reversed upon appeal, to order "that the treasurer of the county or place in and for which such justice whose judgment shall have been so reversed shall have acted on the occasion when he shall have given such judgment shall pay to such justice or to whomsoever he shall appoint such sum as shall in the opinion of such Court be sufficient to indemnify such justice from all costs and charges whatsoever to which such justice may have been put" in consequence of his having had served upon him notice of the intention of the party to appeal.

An order of quarter sessions, made upon the allowance of an appeal from the licensing justices of a borough, and directing the borough treasurer to pay to the clerk of the borough justices a certain sum of money for the reasonable costs, charges, and expenses to which he has been put in supporting the order of the licensing justices is bad, it not being an order for payment of a sum which in the opinion of the Court will "indemnify the justices" from the costs to which they have been put.

Where an order is made under the above section, the amount of the costs, if not ascertained by the Court itself, should be ascertained by the taxation of the clerk of the peace, and his taxation should be adopted by the Court, during the currency of the sessions; the costs can only be taxed out of sessions by consent. *REG. v. 54. — Jurisdiction—Excess of—Certiorari—Mandamus.

At a general annual licensing meeting an application was made for a licence to sell in toxicating liquors. The justices granted the licence upon the applicant paying to them a sum of money, which money they intended to apply in reduction of the rates of the borough, or for some other similar public purpose. Certain persons, who had appeared before the justices in opposition to the application, then obtained a rule for a certiorari to bring up the licence to be quashed, and also a rule for a mandamus to hear and determine the application for a licence according to law:—

Held, that the rule for a mandamus must be made absolute, on the ground that the objectors had a right to be heard before the licensing justices according to law, that the justices in annexing to the grant of the licence the condition of the payment of money shewed that they had allowed their decision to be influenced by extraneous considerations, and that the hearing under such circumstances was equivalent to no hearing at all; but that the rule for a certiorari must, on the authority of Reg. v. Sharman, [1898] 1 Q. B. 578 [see No. 56, below], be discharged on the ground that the grant by licensing justices of a licence to sell intoxicating liquor is not a judicial order. *REG. v. On an application for a certiorari, or for a mandamus to the justices to hear and determine:—

Held, that the certiorari ought not to be

LIGHT AND AIR—"Adjoining"—Conveyance—Covenant against overlooking lights—Buildings "adjoining" vendors' land.

The deft. by deed covenanted with the plts. that from time to time and at all times thereafter, "in the erection of any buildings adjoining the hereditaments of the vendors edged blue in the said plan," he would not "insert or permit to be inserted any lights overlooking such other hereditaments of the vendors." The deft. laid out the land conveyed for building purposes and built houses on it, the backs of which were from twenty to twenty-six feet from the boundary fence separating the two properties, the intervening space being used as gardens or areas belonging to the houses. There were windows in the backs of the houses from which a bowling green on the plt.'s land, let to a first-class bowling club, could be seen. The plts. sought an injunction to restrain the alleged breaches of covenant and damages.

Held, that the deft.'s houses did not "adjoin" the plts.' property in the sense of the particular covenant in question, which related to "buildings"—not "houses"—adjoining. For the covenant to apply, there must have been buildings "adjoining" in the ordinary sense of the word.

4. — Building agreement—Right to light—Equitable easement.

On July 25, 1883, Earl Cadogan entered into a building agreement with S., by which it was agreed that during the period therein mentioned S. might enter upon the six plots of land mentioned in the first schedule and should build upon plot 1, at an expense of not less than 1000*l.* each, three houses to be fit for occupation by Christmas, 1890. Plans and elevations were to be submitted to the Earl; separate leases to be granted of the houses when roofed in and drained. Clause 25 prohibited S. from sub-letting the land or any part of it except by way of agreement to builders before the leases were granted; and clause 32 provided that the agreement was intended to operate as an agreement only and not as an actual demise, or to give S. any legal interest in such parts of the land as for the time being remained unleased. S. was not bound to commence building before Sept. 29, 1887, when an existing lease would expire. On March 25, 1889, before any house had been built pursuant to the above agreement, Earl Cadogan sold and conveyed to C. and others some adjoining land without their having notice of the agreement. In 1891 a lease of a house on plot 1 was granted to the personal representative of S., who in the same year granted a long underlease of it to the plt. The land sold to C. and others was now vested in the defts., who were building thereon in such a way as seriously to obstruct the access of light to the plt.'s premises.

Kekewich J. held that the building agreement gave S. a legal right which prevented the Earl from dealing with his other property in derogation of that right:—

Held, on appeal, that the agreement gave S. no legal easement over any other part of the Earl's property, and that the defts., being purchasers for value without notice, were not affected by any equitable right. The injunction was therefore dissolved. PRINSEP v. BELGRAVIAN ESTATE, LD. - C. A. [1896] W. N. 39 (1)

16. — Obstruction — Injunction — Declaration — Rebuilding — Evidence of intention to preserve ancient lights — User — Interruption — Abandonment — Prescription Act, 1832 (2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71), ss. 3, 4.

In an action to restrain the obstruction of ancient lights in respect of premises which have been rebuilt, evidence of the plt.'s intention to preserve ancient lights upon the rebuilding is unnecessary.

"Interruption" in s. 3 of the Prescription Act bears the same meaning as in s. 4, and refers to an adverse obstruction, and not to a mere discontinuance of user.

The question whether there has been an actual enjoyment of the use of light under the Prescription Act for the statutory period is a question of fact to be determined according to the circumstances of each case.

The plts., who had rebuilt their premises, claimed a right to ancient lights in respect of portions of three windows in the new building which coincided with portions of three windows in the old building. A great part of the coincident area had been, in the case of two of the windows, boarded up, and, in the case of the third window, covered with shelving, for more than a year before action brought; but the shelving allowed a substantial amount of light to pass through into the building:—

Held, that, as to the two first windows, there had been such a discontinuance of user as to prevent the acquisition of any right by the plts.; secus as to the third.

In the circumstances of the case the Court made a declaration of the plts.' right in lieu of granting an injunction, the deft. undertaking to submit the plans of his proposed building to the plts. SMITH v. BAXTER - [1900] W. N. 87; [1900] 2 Ch. 138

After service of writ the deft. hurried on with his buildings in the hope that when once up the Court might decline to order them to be pulled down. The Court, without entering into the merits of the case, ordered the wall to be pulled down, being satisfied that the plt. would have been entitled to an injunction for the purpose of keeping matters in statu quo.

LIGHT AND AIR—continued.*19. — Obstruction—Mandatory injunction—Evading service of writ—Pulling down.

The deft. was erecting a building near the plt.'s house. The plt. warned the deft. that if the building were continued he would sue to restrain it as an obstruction of his ancient lights. After action brought the deft. evaded service of the writ for several days, and in the meantime continued the building till substituted service on him was effected:—

Held, that the deft.'s evasion of the writ brought the case within the principle of Daniel v. Ferguson, [1891] 2 Ch. 27, and that the plt. was entitled to an interlocutory mandatory injunction ordering the deft. to pull down so much of the building as had been erected after the plt. had warned the deft. that he intended to bring an action.

4. — Part payment—Payment of interest—Presumption of payment—Money charged on land—Devisee also tenant for life of money charged—Real Property Limitation Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 57), s. 8.

A testator, by his will dated Jan. 11, 1845, devised his real estate and bequeathed his personal estate to trustees, upon trust for sale and to hold the proceeds of sale upon trust to pay his debts, and to hold the residue on trust to pay the income to his wife for her life, with remainder in trust for his children living at her death, or the issue of those then dead leaving issue then living. By a codicil dated Jan. 30, 1855, the testator revoked the devise of real estate contained in his will so far as regarded certain specified closes of land, and he devised those closes to his wife for her life, with remainder to his two sons in equal shares as tenants in common in fee. The whole of the real estate was subject to a charge of 3000*l.* created by a predecessor of the testator. In 1865 the trustees sold the greater part of the real estate (other than that specifically devised by the codicil), and out of the proceeds paid the 3000*l.*, and some of the testator's own debts. The widow died in 1895. After the sale until her death she received the income of the residue of the proceeds of sale and also the rents of the unsold land, including those of the specifically devised land. She never gave to the trustees any acknowledgment of the liability of the specifically devised land to bear a proportionate part of the 3000*l.*, or paid to them any part of the 3000*l.*, or any interest thereon:—

Held, that In re England, [1895] 2 Ch. 820, applied, and that the widow being under no legal obligation to pay any part of the 3000*l.* or any interest thereon, the right of the persons interested in the real estate (other than that specifically devised) to compel contribution out of the specifically devised estate to the payment of the 3000*l.* was barred by s. 8 of the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874. *In re ALLEN. The money was never raised, nor any interest actually paid in respect of it, but the son entered into possession of the land, and for more than twelve years received the rents and profits:—

Held, that the son not being liable to pay the interest no presumption of payment by him, on the ground of any duty to keep down the charge, could be made; and therefore that the claim of the trustees under the covenant against the testator's personal estate was barred by the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874, s. 8.

A., the first mortgagee of property, sold under his power of sale in 1878. S., a solicitor, conducted the sale for him. S. received the sale money, paid A.'s debt, and retained the surplus, accounting for it by a receipt purporting to be on behalf of the second mortgagee. S. applied the surplus to his own use and paid interest until 1891 thereon to the second mortgagee, as if the second mortgage was still in existence. In 1891 S. became bankrupt, when the second mortgagee discovered the true facts and brought an action against A. for an account of the sale money and payment to him of what was due on the second mortgage:—

Held, by Romer J. (1) that S. did not pay the interest as A.'s agent, and therefore the payments did not keep alive B.'s claim against A.; (2) that A. was not privy to S.'s fraud, though he had been negligent in not seeing that S. applied the surplus property; (3) therefore that B.'s claim against A. was barred by the Statute of Limitations and the Trustee Act, 1888, s. 8:

Held, by C. A. and H. L. (E.), that B.'s cause of action accrued in 1878, when A. committed an innocent breach of trust; that A. was not liable under the exception in s. 8 of the Trustee Act, 1888, either as having been "party or privy" to the fraud, or as having "still retained" the money sought to be recovered:

Held, also, that the fraud of S. was not committed as A.'s agent or for A.'s benefit, so as to render A., although innocent, responsible for the fraud. The exception in s. 8 as to property "still retained" by the trustee is confined to cases where the trustee has actually under his control the trust property or its proceeds when the action is brought:

Held, by H. L. (E.), that fraud or non-discovery of fraud cannot be relied on to take a case out of the Statute of Limitations unless it is the fraud of or in some way imputable to the person who invokes the aid of the statute.

Held, first, that although the old partnership was terminated by the death of the father, the Statute of Limitations was no bar to taking the accounts before that date, the accounts having been carried on into the new partnership without interruption or settlement; secondly, that if the statute had applied, the concealed fraud would have been a bar to its operation, although such fraud might have been discovered at the time by the use of due caution; a partner being entitled

In this case it was held that the conduct of the mother in wilfully keeping from her daughter the knowledge that she was entitled to property amounted to a concealed fraud within s. 26 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, and that the statute did not begin to run until after the death of the mother. This case exactly fell within the definition of concealed fraud given by Kindersley V.-C. in Petre v. Petre, (1852) 1 Drew. 371, at p. 397, except that the Vice-Chancellor was there dealing with a fraud committed by the person who was to benefit by it; but if the concealment was for the purpose of benefiting some other person, or for the purpose of preventing the rightful owner from exercising his rights, it would fall within the substance of the definition. That definition had been adopted by Stirling J. in Lawrance v. Lord Norreys, (1888) 39 Ch. D. 213, 224, and the definition of Lord Herschell in the same case, (1890) 15 App. Cas. 210, 214, was entirely in harmony with it. The daughter was, therefore, entitled to possession. In re McCallum. McCALLUM v. McCALLUM

A conveyance of land to trustees for a term of years upon trust to raise specific sums of money is an express trust within s. 10 of the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874.

Where land is conveyed to trustees for a term of years upon trust to raise two sums of money, and it is held, in an action brought to recover both sums, that they are entitled to enter and raise one of these sums, but that the other is barred by the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874, the right to raise the second sum is not preserved by the success of the action in respect of the first sum.

Where a power of appointment is exercised by a general bequest in a will the property appointed is included in and passes by the bequest according to the terms of the will, and not as if a separate execution of the power were read into the will. The property is therefore not necessarily postponed, as a fund liable for payment of his debts, to other assets of the testator. WILLIAMS v. WILLIAMS. In re HARTLEY. WILLIAMS v. JONES — North J. A. died in 1891 without any further payment or acknowledgment:—

Held, that the cause of action in respect of the whole of the debt accrued in 1883 and not in 1889, and therefore that a claim for the difference by the lender against the estate of the borrower was barred by the Statute of Limitations. *In re McHENRY. Sect. 34 of the Act of 1833 applies as between a mortgagee and a mortgagor in possession, and in favour of the latter, although a prior mortgage has been in existence during the earlier part of such statutory period. The effect of barring the mortgagee's title is to vest the legal estate in the mortgagor, and therefore, if he afterwards grants a mortgage to another person, that person may rely on such extinguishment of title in support of his own claim as first mortgagee, although the

In 1886 the owner of one undivided moiety of premises, which had been during the previous eleven years in the sole possession of the owners of the other moiety, mortgaged his moiety; and in 1890, the premises having in the meantime continued and still continuing to be in the sole possession of the owners of the other moiety, he executed a conveyance of his moiety, subject to the mortgage, to the plt., who subsequently paid off the mortgage:—

Held, that the plt. did not, on paying off the mortgage, become a “person claiming under a mortgage” within the meaning of the Real Property Limitation Act, 1837, which, as modified by the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874, s. 9, give such a person a period of twelve years from the last payment of any part of the principal money or interest secured by the mortgage for bringing an action to recover the land:—

Held, also, that the Real Property Limitation Act, 1837, does not confer a new right of entry on the mortgagee where at the date of the mortgage a person is in possession adversely to the mortgagor, and the Statute of Limitations has already begun to run in his favour against the mortgageor.

The mortgage contained the usual covenants for payment of the principal and interest with power of sale and surrender of the policy. A. never made any payment in respect of the principal or interest of the mortgage debt, nor paid any of the premiums on the policy, which was kept up by the mortgagee. In 1893 the mortgagee surrendered the policy to the office for the sum of 1468l. 14s. A. had no notice of the surrender. The mortgagee died in 1895 and A. died in 1899:—

Held, in an action by the representative of the mortgagee against the representatives of A., claiming that the security might be enforced, that the receipt by the mortgagee of the surrender value of the policy was not a payment of principal or interest within the meaning of s. 8 of the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874, so as to entitle the plaintiff to recover on the covenant contained in the mortgage.

rent, and in fact no lease was ever applied for or granted:—

Held, that the statute did not begin to run against the landlord, since they had not an effective right of entry or action for the recovery of land, as any attempt to recover possession would have been immediately defeated by an application to a Court of Equity to enforce the performance of the agreement for a lease.

Semble, per Kay L.J., that a person let in under such an agreement is a cestui que trust within the meaning of the proviso to s. 7 of the Real Property Limitation Act, 1833, and that therefore the section does not apply. WARREN v. MURRAY C. A. [1894] 2 Q. B. 648

The defts. were the owners of two fields between which was a strip of land separated from them by hedges. This strip had been conveyed to the defts. with the fields, but the plts. had a right of way over it to a field belonging to them. The strip was originally open at both ends, the end farthest from the plts.' field communicating with a public road. More than twelve years before the commencement of the action the plts. had erected a gate at each end of the strip, and had since kept these gates locked, the keys being retained by themselves or their tenants. The gate at the road end of the strip was placed upon the strip; it was not clear whether the other gate was placed on the strip or on the plts.' own land. The action was brought to restrain the defts. from trespassing on the strip. There was no evidence that the plts. had erected the gates with the intention of excluding the defts. from the strip:—

Held, that, as the act of the plts. in erecting and locking the gates was in its nature equivocal and might have been done merely with the intention of protecting the plts.' right of way from invasion by the public, the defts. had not been dispossessed of the strip of land, and the plts. had not acquired a title to it under the Statute of Limitations. The action was accordingly dismissed. LITLEDALE v. LIVERPOOL COLLEGE

In 1805 A. granted a freehold lease to B. for lives; the last of such lives dropped in 1874. In 1807 B. granted a sub-lease to C. of part of the property for ninety-nine years, determinable on the dropping of the same lives as in the over lease. The sub-lease therefore ran out in 1874. In 1832 the representatives of B. surrendered the 1805 lease to A., who granted a new freehold lease for lives; the last of these lives dropped in 1891. The plts. claiming through A. had since 1839 received the rents under the lease of 1832; defts. claiming through C. had since 1874 been in actual possession without title:—

Held, that as the lease of 1832 was valid under s. 6 of Geo. 2, c. 28, the plts.' right to sue did not accrue till 1891, and therefore defts. were not

At and prior to Lady Day, 1876, a plot of land then forming part of the Devon settled estates was held by S. as tenant from year to year under an agreement dated in 1852. S. continued in possession down to his death in 1889, and after that date his representatives continued in possession. No rent was ever paid in respect of this plot of land after Lady Day, 1876.

Under a settlement dated in 1857 the Devon estates, including the reversion in the plot of land expectant on the tenancy of S., stood limited in the events which happened to the use of the eleventh Earl of Devon for life, remainder to the use of the twelfth Earl for life, remainder to such uses as the eleventh Earl should by deed or will appoint. This power was exercised by the eleventh Earl by his will, whereby he appointed the estates to H. and others as trustees. The eleventh Earl died in 1888, and on his death the twelfth Earl succeeded to the possession of the estates, and died in 1891 without having recovered the land in question. On the death of the twelfth Earl the remainder limited to H. and his co-trustees fell into possession, and the question was whether their estate was barred by the Statutes of Limitations:—

Held, that the case fell within the latter part of s. 2 of the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874, and that the twelfth Earl, being the person last entitled to a particular estate, and not being in possession or receipt of the profits of the land in question when his interest determined by his death in 1891, H. and his co-trustees had a further period of six years from that time to bring their action, and therefore that their estate was not barred. In re EARL OF DEVON'S SETTLED ESTATES. Appeal from an interlocutory order made by the judge of the Court of Passage, Liverpool, ordering further particulars; leave to appeal had been granted by the judge of the Court of Passage.

Upon objection taken that s. 9 of the Liverpool Court of Passage Act, 1893, by implication limited the right of appeal from the judge of the Court of Passage, Liverpool, to appeals from the issues at the trial:—

Held, that ss. 6 and 10 of the Act taken together give a right of appeal in all cases, which is not cut down by s. 9. HUNTER v. JACOBSON

Held, that any such adjustment must be made between the two unions, and not between the union from which the transfer had been made and the area transferred:

Held, also, that any consideration which bore on the question whether, and to what extent, the union from which the area had been taken had been injured financially by the change, would be properly taken into consideration in making an adjustment.

(A) Sect. 3 of the Common Lodging Houses Act, 1853, provides that "a person shall not keep a common lodging-house, unless his name as the keeper thereof be entered in the register kept under" the Common Lodging Houses Act, 1851.

The respondent kept a house or "shelter" for the reception of male lodgers as part of a social scheme carried on by a body called the Salvation Army, the lodgers being admitted by the officials in charge under certain regulations made for the carrying out of the objects of the scheme. The lodgers were charged 4d. a night or 2s. a week for a bed or bunk in an open dormitory and the use in common with the other occupants of a sitting or meeting room and a kitchen; the occupants provided their own food, which they might cook at the kitchen fire. The officials in charge had a discretionary power to admit persons for a less payment or for no payment at all. Drunken or disorderly men were not admitted, or, if admitted, were turned out, the occupants being of the same class as the occupants of common lodging-houses, except that some of those received were so dirty that they would not be received in a common lodging-house. The shelter was kept for charitable or religious objects, and not for purposes of gain; the charges were the same as at common lodging-houses kept for commercial profit, but no profit was in fact made out of the shelters carried on under the scheme. The respondent's name was not entered in the register of common lodging-houses as the keeper of the shelter:—

Held, that the fact that the shelter was kept for charitable or religious objects and not for purposes of gain did not take it out of the operation of the Common Lodging Houses Acts, 1851 and 1853; that the shelter was a common lodging-house within the meaning of those Acts, and that the respondent had been guilty of the offence of keeping a common lodging-house without having his name registered as the keeper thereof.

Div. Ct. [1900] W. N. 5; [1900] 1 Q. B. 401

(B) The respondent kept a house for the reception of male lodgers which was not carried on for the sake of making a profit, but solely for the purpose of assisting the poorer classes. The lodgers were charged 6d. or 8d. a night, and for this each lodger got the use of a common dining-hall and sitting-room and the right to the exclusive occupation of a cubicle which contained a bed, and which was separated from the rest of the dormitory by walls about 6½ feet high made of tiles. A certain number of the lodgers were of a better class than the inhabitants of an ordinary common lodging-house, but substantially the lodgers were of that description. Drunken and disorderly men, and men who were suspected of being criminals or verminous, were not admitted, but all other men were admitted on payment. The house was not registered as a common lodging-house:—

Held, that since the inmates of the house were persons of the poorer class who were likely to be in a dirty and insanitary condition, and since they occupied at least part of the house in common, it was a common lodging-house within the meaning of the Common Lodging Houses Acts, 1851 and 1853, and ought to have been registered. *LOGSDON v. (A) A. deposited with the vestry plans for a shop adjoining a newly laid out street, and made the footings for the external walls on two sides of the shop, one of which faced the street, and raised the wall to 12 ft. on that side. At that date there were no other buildings on either side of the street. Two years after he built a row of buildings on the same side of the street 10 ft. further back. He then leased the site of the shop to B., who continued the erection of the shop without consent of the London County Council. Two months later the superintending architect decided that the building line was that of the row of houses.

Held, by C. A., that what B.'s lessor had put up did not amount to a building, structure or erection within s. 75 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1862, and that B.'s acts amounted to the first erection of such a building, and that an order that B. should demolish so much of the building as he had erected in front of the building line was rightly made.

Semble (per Esher M.R. and Davey L.J.), that s. 75 does not prevent the subsequent completion of a building existing in an unfinished state when the building line is established.

5. — Building line—“Building, structure, or erection”—Metropolis Management Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 102), s. 75.

The question whether a wall is a “building, structure, or erection,” within s. 75 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1862, depends on the height of the wall and the purpose for which it is built. A forecourt of a house had been for many years bounded by a dwarf wall about 3 ft. high. The owner pulled this down and built a wall 11 ft. high, which was to be used for exhibiting advertisements and also as boundary to the forecourt:—

Held, that the original dwarf wall was not a

"building, structure, or erection," and that so long as it existed the site on which it stood was to be regarded as vacant land; but that the substituted wall was a building, structure, or erection, and that the magistrate had jurisdiction to order its demolition.

A new street was formed in the metropolis, opening at a right angle into an existing street in which there was a continuous row of houses with forecourts in front and gardens behind. The plan for the new street submitted to the London County Council contained a note stating that two of the above-mentioned houses were (among others) to be pulled down, and the new street, as shewn by the plan, occupied the whole site of one of them with the forecourt and garden belonging thereto, and part of the site of the other and of the forecourt and garden belonging thereto, which were respectively 48 and 90 ft. in depth. These houses having been pulled down, the owner of the last-mentioned of them was erecting on so much of its site and the forecourt and garden on each side of it as was not thrown into the new street a block of buildings fronting to the new street, which projected beyond the general line of buildings in that street as fixed by the superintending architect of the county council:—

Held, that he was not building on the site of a previously existing building within the meaning of s. 74 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1862, and therefore was infringing the provisions of s. 75 of that Act, which forbids the erection of buildings beyond the general line of buildings in the street.

F. built shops on the side of a public street more than 30 ft. wide, and erected pillars projecting more than 9 inches beyond the building line on to the footway. For this he was convicted under s. 72 of Michael Angelo Taylor's Act:—

A new house had been built on the site of some old buildings, with an open space in front. This new house was pulled down, and the plt. wished to build fresh houses up to the line of the old building:—

Held, that the site of the old buildings was open ground and subject to s. 75 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1862, and that plt. must conform to the building line of the street. WORLEY v. VESTRY OF ST. MARY ABBOTTS, KENSINGTON — North J. [1892] 2 Ch. 404

Held, that the provisions of the appellants' special Act, relating to their powers for erecting stations, were inconsistent with those of s. 75 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1862, and so far repealed that section. The magistrate had therefore no jurisdiction to make an order on the appellants to pull down so much of their station as projected beyond the "general line" of buildings. *CITY AND SOUTH LONDON RY. Acts, may be served, if no person be found on the premises to which it relates, by fixing a copy on some conspicuous part of the building to which it relates. By s. 1 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848, a summons issued upon any information or complaint shall be served by delivering it to the person to whom it is directed, or by leaving it with some person for him at his last or most usual place of abode. A summons issued upon a complaint made under the London Building Act, 1894, and addressed "To the owner" of a building alleged to be in a dangerous condition, was served by fixing a copy of the summons on a conspicuous part of the building. The premises were said to be unoccupied. The owner did not appear on the summons:—

By s. 145 of the London Building Act, 1894, “Where a building or structure or work is about to be begun . . . the builder or other person causing or directing the work to be executed shall serve on the district surveyor a building notice respecting the building or structure or work.”

The owners of a certain large building situate in London called the Agricultural Hall, which was used for the purpose of public exhibitions or shows, were possessed of certain movable seating consisting of tiers of wooden platforms and capable of accommodating upwards of 3000 persons, which seating they from time to time erected for the accommodation of the spectators at such of the exhibitions as required it:—

Held, that such seating was not a “building structure or work” within the meaning of the above section; and that the owners of the hall were not thereby required to serve a building notice on the district surveyor upon each occasion on which they re-erected the seating. *VENNER v. The appellants, coal merchants, were in the habit of having coal consigned to them by ry. to London, where it was delivered to them at a wharf in the coal yard of the ry. co. By the permission of the ry. co. the appellants erected in the coal yard a small wooden structure which they used as a coal office. The use of this coal office by the appellants was a matter of convenience to the ry. co. in that it contributed to the speedy clearing of the coal trucks from the co.’s sidings:—

Held, that the structure in question was “used in connection with the traffic of the ry. co.,” within the meaning of s. 86 of the London Building Act, 1894, and that its erection did not require the licence of the respondents under s. 84. ELLIOT v. LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL

The deft., who was the lessee of the plt., covenanted to "pay the land tax, sewers rate, and all other taxes, rates, duties, assessments, and impositions, parliamentary, parochial, or otherwise, which now are or shall at any time during this demise be assessed or imposed on or in respect of the said demised premises." Very shortly after the commencement of the lease the sanitary authority served a notice on the plt., as owner, under the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, directing him to abate a nuisance on the premises, and for that purpose to take up a defective drain and lay a new drain throughout the premises. The plt. incurred expenses in complying with the notice, and sued the deft. to recover the amount:—

Four houses in the metropolis were in 1874 drained by a combined operation under an order of the vestry. A drain from the stable of an adjoining house was afterwards, without the knowledge of the vestry, connected with this drain, and the drainage from the stable turned into it. Subsequently a nuisance arose owing to the defective drainage of the four houses, and the then owner of the houses, who had not authorized or known of the making of the connection with the drain from the stable, was required by the vestry to abate the nuisance :—

Held, that the unauthorized connection of the drainage from the stable with the drain from the four houses converted the latter into a sewer, and that therefore the owner was not liable to abate the nuisance. GEEN v. NEWINGTON VESTRY Div. Ct. [1898] 2 Q. B. 1

In 1879 an order of the vestry was obtained under the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855, for draining a group of eleven houses by a combined operation. It was subsequently discovered that there had been a deviation in the course of the drain from the plan signed by the surveyor, but there was no evidence that any houses other than those on the plan were drained by the combined operation :—

Held, that a mere deviation in the course of the drain was not sufficient to convert it into a sewer, and that the vestry was not therefore liable for its repair. GREATER LONDON PROPERTY CO. v. FOOT — Div. Ct. [1899] 1 Q. B. 972

In 1894 the plt. had purchased two freehold houses in Paddington; shortly afterwards he received from the defts. a notice to repair a defective drain; the plt. accordingly opened up his drain, when he for the first time discovered that it had been connected with and received the drainage from other premises at the rear, belonging to a different owner. The plt. thereupon claimed repayment by the defts. of what he had expended upon the work, on the ground that the drain was a “sewer” within the meaning of the Local Management Act, 1855. It appeared that the connection with the plt.'s drain had been made some thirty years ago, without the authority of the vestry, and that the plt. when he purchased had made no special inquiry as to the drainage :—

Held, that the plt.'s drain was a “sewer,” and that he was entitled to be repaid the money he had expended in repairing it. FLORENCE v. PADDINGTON VESTRY

(A) P. owned two blocks of apartments divided by a causeway 20 ft. wide, of which one end was closed by a wall and the other opened into a public thoroughfare. Access to one block was from the causeway—to the other from the street; in the causeway was a dustbin for the common use of the apartments. The premises were drained by branch drains from the several apartments running into a main drain which ran into a sewer :—

Held, that the two blocks were premises within the same curtilage, and the main drain was therefore a “drain” and not a “sewer” within s. 250.

(B) B. owned an arcade consisting of a central passage with shops and houses on both sides. There was no right of way along the passage, which was roofed and closed by gates at either end. The premises were drained by a construction which ran down the centre and received in its course the drainage of the houses.

Held, that the construction was not a drain "used for the drainage of premises within the same curtilage," and was therefore a "sewer" within s. 250 and not a "drain," and was vested in and repairable by the vestry. ST. MARTIN-IN-THE-FIELDS VESTRY v. BIRD

The fact that the requisite sanction and approval for the making of a sewer in the metropolis was not obtained from the vestry or Metropolitan Board of Works does not prevent it, when made, from being a sewer within the meaning of the Metropolis Management Acts, and as such vested in the vestry and repairable by them.

In 1866 the owner of a block of houses in the metropolis laid down a pipe to carry off the drainage from them, and connected the pipe with a sewer belonging to the vestry in a neighbouring street. There was no evidence of any notice having been given to the vestry, or of any order having been made by them, or of their sanction or of the approval of the Metropolitan Board of Works having been obtained, under the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, or the Amendment Act, 1862:—

Held, that the probable inference of fact was that the pipe was laid with the sanction of the vestry and the approval of the Metropolitan Board of Works required by the Acts; but that whether that was so or not the pipe was a sewer within the meaning of s. 250 of the Act of 1855, and was consequently vested in the vestry and repairable by them. Where the plts., the vestry of a parish within the metropolitan area, made an arrangement with certain landowners of a district without the metropolitan area (now represented by the defts., the urban district council) whereby the discharge of some sewage from the defts.' district into a sewer belonging to the plts. had been permitted for many years, and this additional sewage had increased so as periodically to choke up the plts.' sewer:—

Held, that this arrangement operated in law merely as a revocable licence, and that the plts., being a public body with public duties to perform, were not estopped or precluded by laches or acquiescence from bringing an action for an injunction to restrain the defts. from using the sewer; but

Held, that, having regard to the conduct of the plts. and to the difficulty in which an injunction would place the defts. by compelling them to close their sewers, the Court ought only to make a declaration that the defts. were not entitled to send sewage from their district into the plts.' sewer without the consent of the plts.

By the London County Council (Improvements) Act, 1897, the London County Council were empowered (inter alia) to widen Tottenham Court Road, and to place an “improvement charge” on property included within an “improvement area,” which was for this purpose defined, by s. 42, sub-s. 1 (c), as meaning “the lands all or any part of which front or abut upon the west side of Tottenham Court Road between Oxford Street and Hanway Street.”

A music-hall which had a frontage on Oxford Street, where the principal entrance was, had also an entrance from Tottenham Court Road to the pit and gallery, the proprietors of the hall having acquired a leasehold interest in a house in Tottenham Court Road for the purpose of making that entrance. In order to make it they removed the lower portion of the party wall which separated the house from the hall, but they entered into a covenant to replace the wall at the end of the lease. They were owners in fee of part of the land on which the hall stood, and were leaseholders of the remainder:—

Held, that, as the whole of the property, including the entrance to the pit and gallery, was occupied for one purpose, it could not be said that only the house in Tottenham Court Road abutted on that road, and that consequently the power of the London County Council to place an improvement charge on the music-hall was not limited to the house in Tottenham Court Road. *THE OXFORD, LD. v. In order that a road or carriageway may be a street within the meaning of s. 7 of the London

Building Act, 1894, it is not necessary that it should be intended or used for public carriage traffic.

The owner of a building estate, of about four acres in extent, commenced to lay out a road which communicated at one end with a public carriageway; the other end of the road ran into a square, about which it was intended to build a continuous line of houses or flats; houses or blocks of flats were also to be built along each side of the road itself, the total length of the road being about 600 ft. It was further intended to erect gates at the point where the road ran out of the public carriageway, and to keep a porter to open and shut the gates. The road was not intended for public use, but solely for the use of the occupiers of the houses in the road and square, and of their visitors and tradespeople. The owner had not obtained the consent of the London County Council before commencing the work:—

Held, that the road was a street within the meaning of s. 7 of the London Building Act, 1894, and that the owner was properly convicted under that section of having commenced to form or lay out a street for carriage traffic without having first obtained the sanction of the London County Council.

A row of houses having been erected along the side of a street forming part of a building estate, the respondent erected a shop on land purchased from the freeholder of the estate on the same side of the street and fronting to it, but separated from the end house of the row by an intervening vacant space of the width of 40 ft., which is the statutory width of a street intended for carriage traffic. There was a side door leading from the shop into the vacant space. At the back of the shop he also erected a stable, the only access to which for carriages and horses was along the vacant space. This space, which was the property of the freeholder of the estate, was marked on the estate plan as a proposed street, but at the time of the erection of the shop and stable it had not been in fact laid out by the freeholder as a street; and, although the respondent expected that it would be laid out as a street, there was no contract by the freeholder that it should be so laid out:—

Held, that, as the respondent had no control over the soil of the vacant space, he did not by erecting the shop and stable commence to form a street within the meaning of s. 8 of the London Building Act, 1894. LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. DIXON - - Div. Ct. [1899] 1 Q. B. 496

A road, which was a turnpike road down to 1865 and previously to 1869 of a rural character, subsequently became a new street in the ordinary sense of the term by the erection of buildings alongside it:—

Held, also, that the fact that slight temporary repairs had been previously done by the district board to the footway of the road by tar-painting it did not prevent them from exercising the powers given by the section.

The principle on which the expenses of paving a new street have been apportioned by a district board amongst the owners liable in respect thereof cannot be questioned in any court.

By a covenant in a lease of land in the metropolis the tenant was liable to bear, pay, and discharge, charges, duties, assessments, and impositions, charged, assessed, or imposed, upon the premises, or upon the landlord in respect thereof. The lease was determinable by six months' notice. The landlords gave notice to determine it, and contracted to sell the property. The district board of works gave notice to the landlords of apportionment of expenses of paving a new street, under the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, s. 77, fixing no date for payment. The landlords paid the amount claimed. The work was commenced after the notice to determine the lease had expired.

Held, that the words of the covenant included the expenses of paving the new street, and that, when the district board gave notice to the landlords of the apportionment and charge, the charge became operative, and the landlords became liable to pay the amount, and were entitled to recover it from the tenant under the covenant:

Held, also, that the landlords were owners of the premises, within the meaning of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, s. 250, until the date fixed by the contract of sale for completion.

A road was made through agricultural land in the year 1877, under statutory powers. The statute provided that when the road was completed it should be a public highway of the parish, and repairable in like manner as any other highway of the parish should from time to time be repairable. The road was accordingly taken over and the carriage-way kept in repair by the local authority. No houses were built adjoining the road until 1890, when houses were erected on one side. In 1896 houses were erected on the other side of the road, and the local authority declared the road to be a new street, directed that it should be paved, and apportioned the estimated expense between the appellants and other frontagers. The appellants were summoned for non-payment of their contributions. The magistrate who heard the summonses found as a fact that the road became a new street for the first time after the erection of houses therein. On a case stated:—

Held, that s. 105 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, as amended by s. 77 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1862, had not the effect of making the road a new street on its construction in 1877; that the magistrate was justified in finding that it became a new street for the first time after the erection of houses therein; and that the local authority had power to pave it and to apportion the estimated expense between the frontagers. *ALLEN v. In 1883 a highway, the greater part of which was then paved, became a "new street" within the meaning of s. 105 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, which enables a metropolitan vestry or district board to pave any "new street" not paved to their satisfaction, and to charge the expense on the owners of the houses forming the street. From 1883 to 1899 the district board, and the vestry who succeeded them, repaired the footways and carriageway of the street as surveyors of highways. In 1899 the vestry resolved to exercise their powers under s. 105, and required the owners to pay the apportioned expenses of paving the street:—

Held, distinguishing Bonella v. Twickenham Local Board, (1887) 20 Q. B. D. 63, that, as neither the board nor the vestry had exercised their powers under s. 105 before 1899, the vestry were then entitled to exercise them, notwithstanding the time which had elapsed since the road became a new street.

Held, that a magistrate was justified in finding that the road was not a new street for the purposes of s. 105 of the Act of 1855 or s. 77 of the Act of 1862, and that the local authority could not, therefore, recover from the frontagers the expenses of paving the road. *ST. Sect. 60, sub-s. 7, of the Metropolitan Police Act, 1839, renders liable to a penalty every person who exposes anything for sale upon any carriage-way or footway so as to cause an annoyance or obstruction in any thoroughfare within the metropolitan police district. By police regulations made under the Metropolitan Streets Act Amendment Act, 1867, and issued on December 28, 1869, costermongers, street hawkers, itinerant traders, and their barrows, carts, and stalls, are made liable to be removed from any street and public way in which they create an obstruction to the traffic or are an annoyance to the inhabitants :—

The issuing of a summons in lunacy does not withdraw the property of the lunatic from legal process by a creditor until an order is made shewing that the Crown has actually taken the property under its protection.

Sect. 299 of the Lunacy Act, 1890—which enables a justice to order the application to the expenses of maintenance of a lunatic chargeable to any union or local authority of any property of the lunatic more than sufficient to maintain his family, if any—does not affect the jurisdiction of the Court in Lunacy as to the application of the lunatic's property.

A man who was taken in charge as a wandering lunatic, and placed in a pauper lunatic asylum, had in his possession a sum of about 337*l.* His only other property was a 10*l.* share in a co-operative society and some furniture of small value. He had carried on business as a market gardener. He had not been found lunatic by inquisition. He was sixty-four years of age and his wife was sixty. He had a daughter aged twenty, who lived with her mother, and seven grown-up sons, who did not contribute to their mother's support:—

Held, that the discretion of the Court as to the application of the lunatic's property would be properly exercised by allowing out of the fund (the capital being used for the purpose) the sum of 26*l.* a year to the guardians as the cost of his maintenance in the asylum, and the sum of 25*l.* a year to the wife, and an order was made accordingly.

A lunatic can accept a devise imposing an onerous condition if it be for his benefit so to do.

In considering whether or not it is for the benefit of a lunatic to comply with a condition, the Court should act for the lunatic as if he were a person of sound mind and guided by reasonable motives.

The main purpose of the Act De Prerogativa Regis is to preserve the lands and tenements of a lunatic, and the provision therein restricting alienation ought not to be construed as prohibiting the Court from giving up, on behalf of a lunatic, an interest in his real estate in order thereby to preserve or to acquire for him a larger and more beneficial interest.

The jurisdiction of the Court in Lunacy is not confined to the cases enumerated in the Lunacy Act, 1890, and the specific provisions in Part IV. of the Act are enabling and not restrictive clauses.

The object of s. 124 of the Act is to remove any possible doubt as to the jurisdiction of the Court to order subsidiary acts to be done when exercising its statutory jurisdiction.

A lunatic entitled to a base fee in estate C. had other lands of value devised to him for life with remainder to his issue in tail on condition that he should within a certain period resettle estate C. to the uses of the devised estates.

In the opinion of the Court it was for the benefit of the lunatic that the condition should be performed :—

Held, that although the statutory powers conferred by the Lunacy Act, 1890, did not in terms authorize the Court to direct the committee of the lunatic's estate to elect on behalf of the lunatic in such a case, the Court in Lunacy had under its general jurisdiction power to direct the committee to perform the condition on his behalf and to resettle estate C., and under the circumstances ought to exercise such power, notwithstanding that the resettlement of estate C. would cut down the interest of the lunatic therein. In re EARL OF SEFTON

Held, that a justice having jurisdiction in the union to which the workhouse belonged had power to deal with the case, since s. 56 of the Poor Law Amendment Act, 1844, applied, and the workhouse must, therefore, be considered as situated in the parish to which the lunatic was chargeable. *REG. v. No one is allowed to inspect documents in the custody of the Court in Lunacy without an order of one of the masters or of a judge in Lunacy. But, with this exception, liberty to inspect documents will be given to any person who can satisfy the master or a judge that he wants it for a reasonable and proper purpose, provided that the lunatic, if living, is not injured thereby. After the death of the lunatic, the general rule is to allow inspection to any person claiming an interest in his property who can satisfy the Court as above mentioned. As a matter of law, privilege is no bar to inspection in Lunacy. Inspection will not be permitted to a litigating party who applies for it before the trial of the litigation in order to find out his adversary's case. The judge or Master in Lunacy has jurisdiction under s. 46 of the Act of 1890 to make an order appointing a receiver of dividends on stock standing in the Bank of England in the name of a person incapable "through mental infirmity arising from disease or age," and the Bank may safely act on such an order; but as it is unusual to appoint a receiver of dividends on bank stock, the better course is to bring the stock into court. The Court has, under that section and its general jurisdiction in Lunacy over the personal property of a lunatic, a discretion as to making or refusing the order, and, therefore, as a condition for obtaining the order, the curator must first satisfy the Court by evidence that the property is required for the maintenance or other purposes of the lunatic.

A person of unsound mind not so found being sole trustee of a sum of Consols, the Judge in Lunacy, upon the application of A. B., made an order under the Acts of 1890 and 1891, that the right to call for a transfer of, and to transfer into his own name the Consols standing in the name of the lunatic, and to receive the dividends thereon, should vest in A. B., and that he should transfer the Consols into his own name to be held by him upon the trusts applicable thereon. The Bank of England refused to act upon an order in this form upon the ground that under s. 137 of the Lunacy Act of 1890 some proper officer of the bank should have been appointed to make the transfer:—

A mandamus will not lie against the Secretary of State for War to compel him to carry out the terms of a royal warrant regulating the pay and retiring allowances of the officers and soldiers of the army, inasmuch as no legal duty towards such officers and soldiers is imposed upon the Secretary of State either by statute or at common law, and his position is merely that of agent to the Crown, and he is only liable to answer to the Crown. *Reg. v. The Diseases of Animals Act, 1894, s. 32, sub-s. 2, incorporated with the said Act the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, and s. 42 of the latter Act provides that the undertakers (authorized by the special Act to regulate a market or fair) may, from time to time, make such by-laws as they think fit (inter alia) "For regulating the use of the market-place and fair, and the buildings, stalls, pens, and standings therein; and for preventing nuisances or obstructions therein, or in the immediate approaches thereto."

A local authority purporting to act in the exercise of the powers of the above Acts made a by-law to the effect that sale-rings at a public market belonging to it should not "be used for private sales, or for sales to any limited number of persons, or for sales in which any class of the public are excluded from bidding or buying":—

A cattle salesman occupied premises under leases granted by a municipal corporation with covenants for quiet enjoyment, and used the premises for the sale of cattle. The corporation, after the grant of the leases, acting as urban authority, established a cattle market in the borough, and published a list of tolls. The salesman was convicted of selling cattle on the said premises, which were within the borough, but not within the limits of the market:—

Held, that the premises did not come within the above exception, that the plts.' statutory rights were being infringed, and an injunction granted. BIRMINGHAM CORPORATION v. FOSTER

The petitioner, an officer in Her Majesty's army, was married in 1884 to the respondent, also a British subject, on board one of Her Majesty's ships, then lying at Limasol, in Cyprus, where the petitioner was stationed. The ceremony was performed by the chaplain of the vessel, a clergyman of the Established Church. There had been no publication of banns, and no licence had been obtained :—

Held, that there had been a valid marriage according to the common law of this country, and that, upon proof of the respondent's adultery, the petitioner was entitled to a decree nisi for dissolution of the marriage. CULLING v. CULLING

Compensation.

1. — "Accident"—Injury by accident—Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c. 37), s. 1, sub-s. 1.

The word "accident," as used in the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, involves the idea of something fortuitous and unexpected.

Where a workman suffers injury while doing his ordinary work in his ordinary way, and the primary and efficient cause of the injury is his diseased or impaired physical condition at the time, the injury is not caused by accident within the meaning of the Act. Where, however, injury is caused to a workman by some fortuitous and external event, it is caused by accident within the meaning of the Act, although the injury may be aggravated by his physical condition at the time of the accident. *HENSEY v. B. 1018, and restored the award of the county court judge, the respondents to pay the appellant her costs here and below, to be taxed in the manner usual when the appellant sues in formâ pauperis, Lords Shand and Lindley dissenting. *HODDINOTT v. 3. — Building—Height of—Personal injury to workman—Construction or repair—Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c. 37), s. 7, sub-s. 1.

A building, which measured twenty-eight feet in height from the ground to the parapet and thirty-six feet to the ridge of the roof, was erected as stables for an omnibus company. Six months after its completion and after the commencement of its use as stables the company employed a firm of ironmasters to strengthen the building by introducing iron stays which were fastened to the girders and the upright iron columns supporting the building. A workman in the employ of the ironmasters, while standing inside the building at a height of eight feet from the ground upon a structure composed of scaffold boards resting on ledgers secured to the iron columns and supported in the middle by trestles, fell while lifting one of the iron stays and received injuries which proved fatal:—

Held, that the building was a building exceeding thirty feet in height within the meaning of s. 7, sub-s. 1, of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897; that for the purposes of that section it was immaterial whether the scaffolding was inside or outside the building; but that the building was not being "constructed or repaired," and that therefore the employment was not "an employment on, in or about a building which exceeds thirty feet in height and is either being constructed or repaired by means of a scaffolding," within the meaning of that section. HODDINOTT v. NEWTON, CHAMBERS & Co.

Internal communication between a building over thirty feet high and an adjoining building less than that height, coupled with the fact that the same business is carried on in both buildings, is not evidence to justify a finding that the lower building is a part of the higher and that a workman injured while engaged in demolishing the lower building is employed on the demolition of a building exceeding thirty feet in height within the meaning of s. 7, sub-s. 1, of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897. *RIXSON v. Where an accident happens to a workman employed on, in, or about a building in the course of construction which, although intended when completed to exceed thirty feet in height, does not at the time of the accident exceed that height, the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, does not apply. *BILLINGS v. The Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, applies to employment on, in, or about a building on which machinery driven by steam, water, or other mechanical power, is being used for the purpose of the construction, repair, or demolition thereof, although the building does not exceed thirty feet in height. *MELLOR v. 7. — Building repaired by means of a "scaffolding"—"Repairs"—Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c. 37), s. 7, sub-s. 1.

The outside of a house, more than thirty feet high, was being painted by workmen using ladders for the purpose; one of the men was killed by the breaking of the rung of the ladder on which he was standing. There was a board, one end of which was tied to a rung of one of the ladders, the other end resting on the sill of a window:—

Held, that the house was not being constructed or repaired by means of a scaffolding, and that the Act did not apply.

Painting the outside of a house is not "repair," nor are ladders "scaffolding" within the meaning of the above section. WOOD v. WALSH & SONS — C. A. [1899] W. N. 35 (8); [1899] 1 Q. B. 1009

8. — Contractor—Independent contractor—Plumber—Negligence—Liability of employer—Dangerous work on highway—Collateral negligence.

The defendants, a telephone co., were lawfully engaged in laying telephone wires along a street. They passed the wires through tubes which they laid in a trench under the level of the pavement. The defendants contracted with a plumber to connect these tubes at the joints with lead and solder to the satisfaction of the defendants' foreman at the sum of 12s. per joint. There was evidence that the work was done by the plumber under the supervision of the defendants' foreman, and that one of their men was assisting him in it. In order to make the connections between the tubes, it was necessary to obtain a flare from a benzoline lamp, which could not be done without the application of heat to the lamp. The lamp used for the purpose was provided with a safety-valve. The plumber, for the purpose of obtaining the necessary flare, dipped the lamp into a caldron of melted solder, which was placed over a fire on the footway for the purpose of the work, and which was unprotected by any screen or tent. Dipping the lamp into the solder would have been a proper and usual mode of obtaining the flare provided the lamp had been in good order. The safety-valve of the lamp not being in working order, as the plumber ought to have known, the lamp exploded, with the result that the plt. who was passing on the highway was splashed by the molten solder and thereby injured. In an action by him against the defts. in the City of London Court for damages in respect of the injuries so occasioned to him, the deputy judge held that the plumber was not doing the work as an independent contractor, but under the defts.' supervision and control, and that the defts. were responsible for his negligence as above mentioned. —

Held (reversing the Div. Ct., [1899] 1 Q. B. 221), that the judgment of the deputy judge was right on the grounds, first, that there was evidence that the defts. and the plumber were jointly engaged in the performance of the work under such circumstances as to render the defts. liable for the negligence of which the plumber had been guilty; and, secondly, that, even if the plumber were an independent contractor, the defts., having authorized the performance upon a highway of work, which from its nature was likely to involve danger to persons using the highway, were bound to take care that those who executed the work for them did not negligently cause injury to such persons. *HOLLIDAY v. 9. — “Dependants”—Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c. 37), s. 7, sub-s. 2.

Held, that, in order to bring himself within the Act as a “dependant,” an applicant for compensation must shew that he was to some extent dependent upon the earnings of the deceased workman for the ordinary necessities of life, having regard to his class and position in life; it is insufficient that he merely derived pecuniary benefit from such earnings. Whether an applicant is in that sense a dependant is a question of fact in each particular case. SIMMONS v. WHITE BROTHERS — C. A. [1899] W. N. 32 (2); [1899] 1 Q. B. 1005

10. — Dependants—Evidence of dependency on child's earnings—Standard of living—Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c. 37), s. 7, sub-s. 2.

A father earning wages may be in part dependent upon the earnings of his child within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, and there is evidence upon which the father may be found to be in fact so dependent and to be entitled to compensation for the death of the child, where it is proved that the child contributed to the family wages fund, that the father received the contribution and spent it in maintaining himself and his family.

Whether there is dependency is entirely a question of fact in each case, irrespective of the standard of living in the neighbourhood or the class to which the family belong. The Act sets up no such standard; the actual means of living and expenditure need alone be regarded. (See the judgments of Earl of Halsbury L.C. and Lord Davey; Lord Shand contra.)

By s. 7, sub-s. 2, of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, “factory . . . includes any . . . machinery or plant to which any provision of the Factory Acts is applied by the Factory and Workshop Act, 1895.”

By s. 23, sub-s. 1, of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1895, certain provisions of the Factory Acts are to have effect “as if every dock, wharf, quay, and warehouse, and, so far as relates to the process of loading or unloading therefrom or thereto, all machinery and plant used in that process . . . were included in the word factory.”

A stevedore's labourer sustained injury by an accident while employed on board a steamer lying in dock in loading cargo on to the steamer from a lighter lying alongside; the cargo was lifted out of the lighter and lowered into the hold by means of a steam-winch on the ship's deck:—

Held, that loading from the lighter into the ship was not loading from the dock; that the steam-winch was not a factory, it not being machinery used in the process of loading from a dock, wharf, quay or warehouse within the meaning of s. 23 of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1895, and that the workman was not entitled to compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897. *HENNESSEY v. Sched. A workman was employed for a period of twelve months by the same employer. During that period the character of his employment was altered and the amount of his wages increased. At the end of the twelve months he met with an accident which partially incapacitated him:—

Held, that the change in the character of the employment did not affect the compensation to which he was entitled under the first schedule to the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, which should be arrived at from his average weekly earnings during the whole of the previous twelve months. *PRICE v. A workman met with an accident which incapacitated him from work for eleven months; he then went back to work with the same master, being employed on a different class of work and at lower wages. About eighteen months after resuming work he met with a fatal accident arising out of and in the course of his employment:—

Held, that in ascertaining the workman's average weekly earnings for the purpose of assessing the compensation payable to his dependants under Sched. I., clause 1 (a), (i), of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, regard could only be had to the period of employment between his

17. — Earnings—Average weekly earnings—Break in employment—Strike—Personal injury by accident—Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c. 37), Sched. I., clause 1 (b).

A workman was employed by a firm of coal-owners from Oct. 3, 1897, to March 31, 1898, when the workman went out on strike and the contract of employment was duly determined by notice. He remained on strike for five months, and on Sept. 12, 1898, again entered the service of the same employers under a fresh contract of employment containing different terms; on Oct. 3, 1898, he was injured by an accident arising out of and in the course of his employment:—

Held, that the period of employment contemplated by Sched. I., clause 1 (b), was a substantially continuous employment during which the relation of master and servant substantially existed between the employer and workman, and that therefore, in ascertaining the workman's average weekly earnings, regard could only be had to the period of employment between the end of the strike and the date of the accident, the employment before the strike having been duly determined by the act of the parties. *JONES v. A workman was under an agreement to work for his employers on the nights of Thursday and Friday in each week, for a period extending over two weeks, and at a fixed rate of wages for each night. During the rest of each week he worked at times for the same employers, when they had work to give him, and at other times for other firms carrying on a similar business to that of the employers. The workman was injured during the third week of his employment under the agreement. He claimed compensation, and an award was made in his favour based on the weekly wages earned by him in respect of the two nights a week during which he worked under the agreement. On appeal:—

Held, that the employment for two nights a week was a continuous one, and that the earnings on those two nights were properly taken into account in determining the weekly payment to be made to the applicant:—

man who met with his death by an accident while working in a colliery. His full wages were 1l. 10s. 11d. a week, but from this sum was deducted 6d. a week for lamp oil supplied by the employers. The award was made on the basis of the wages as they stood without the deduction:—

Held, that the principle on which the award was based was correct. HOUGHTON v. SUTTON HEATH AND LEE GREEN COLLIERIES Co.

20. — Earnings — Average weekly earnings before accident — Average amount — Review of weekly payment — Workman able to earn after accident — Apprenticeship — Value of tuition — Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c. 37), 1st Sched. (2), (12).

An apprentice sustained an injury to his right hand which prevented his working as a skilled artisan, and the indenture of apprenticeship was cancelled. On an application for compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, he obtained an award of a weekly payment based on his wages for the previous year. He returned to the employment of the same employers as a workman, at weekly wages higher than his wages at the time of the accident, but less than those that would be ordinarily paid to a workman employed on the same class of work, since the injury he had sustained affected his ability to earn full wages. On an application by the employers for the review and termination of the weekly payment, the county court judge dismissed the application, on the ground that the workman was earning less, by a sum equal to the amount of the weekly payment awarded than if he had had the use of his right hand. On appeal:—

Held, that, on a review of a weekly payment made by award under the Act, the test to be applied is the difference between the amount of the average earnings before the accident and the average amount which the workman is able to earn after the accident; that in the absence of evidence of advantages incidental to the employment, and capable of being appraised at a money value, the earnings before the accident must be determined by the wages received; that the decision of the county court judge was wrong, and that the weekly payment should be reduced to a nominal sum.

Semble, that the value of the tuition given to an apprentice should not be taken into account in arriving at the amount of his average weekly earnings. POMPHREY v. SOUTHWARK PRESS

By the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, s. 3, the amount of compensation recoverable under the Act is limited to a sum equivalent to the estimated earnings, during the three years preceding the injury, of a person in the same grade, employed during those years in the like employment, and in the district in which the workman is employed.

The plt. was apprenticed to the defts., and received a salary of 1s. a week for the first year, increasing 1s. a week each year. In the fifth year, when he was earning 5s. a week, he was injured, and brought an action to recover compensation under the Act. Evidence was given that at the end of the fifth year, when the plt. would be out of his apprenticeship, he would be able to earn from 14s. to 18s. a week, and the compensation was assessed at 80l.:—

Held, that the amount which the plt. could earn when out of his apprenticeship could not be taken into consideration, but only the amount of his actual earnings as an apprentice; and the amount of the judgment must therefore be reduced. NOEL v. REDBUTH FOUNDRY Co.

A fireman employed in a coal-mine was in the course of his duty carrying a report of the state of the mine from the pit's mouth to the office; the horse drawing the tramway truck in which he was riding ran away, and in endeavouring to stop it he fell and was killed:—

One of the workmen so employed by the commrs. on the dredger went in his turn on a hopper full of mud to sea to help in discharging it, and was drowned:—

Held, that, while employment "about" a factory included employment in close proximity to a factory, the county court judge had rightly

Employment "about" a factory means employment about the locality of the factory, and does not include employment about the business of the factory at a distance from the factory itself.

A builder was erecting houses on a building estate which was in course of development; on the estate was a barn containing a steam-engine and mortar-mill, which were used for the purposes of the building operations, and which constituted a factory within the meaning of s. 7, sub-s. 1, of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897. The respondent, a labourer in the builder's employment, whose duty it was to fetch water in a cart from a brook at some distance along the main road for the mortar-mill and buildings, was injured while returning with the cart at a spot about 110 to 160 yards distant from the engine and mortar-mill owing to the horse running away:—

Held, that there was no evidence upon which the county court judge could properly find that the employment of the respondent was employment "about" a factory within the meaning of the Act. FENN v. MILLER

A workman was employed in a shed to look after a steam-engine connected with a mortar pan for mixing mortar for use on a building near at hand. While so employed he sustained personal injuries through an accident:—

Held, that, as the engine was being temporarily used for the purpose of the construction of a building, the provisions mentioned in s. 23 of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1895, had effect as if the shed were a factory; so that a provision of the Act, namely s. 4 relating to the power to make an order as to a dangerous machine used in a factory, applied to the engine, which therefore came within the definition of a factory in s. 7 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, and compensation could be claimed under that section. *McNICHOLAS v. The employers had provided no ladder or other safe means of ascending to and descending from the tramway. In an action brought by the widow of the deceased against his employers under the Fatal Accidents Act, 1846, to recover damages in respect of his death, the jury found (1.) that the defts. had not exercised due care to have the tramway in a safe and proper condition so as to protect their servants working upon it against unnecessary risks; (2.) that it was dangerous to descend from the tramway without a ladder; (3.) that the deceased had the same means of knowing that it was dangerous as the defts. had; and (4.) that the deceased did know that it was dangerous:—

Held, that, in the absence of any finding by the jury that the deceased had agreed to undertake the risk of descending from the tramway without a ladder or other safe means of descent, the plt. was entitled to judgment upon the findings of the jury.

Where therefore a workman, although put to a different class of work after the accident, receives from his employers the same wages that he previously received from them, he is not entitled to a weekly payment in respect of partial incapacity after his return to work, his right to compensation being limited to a weekly payment in respect of total incapacity (after the second week) during his absence from work occasioned by the accident. *IRONS v. A workman was employed as foreman in a carpet-weaving factory; his principal duty was to supervise the hands, but he also to the knowledge of his employer used to set up and adjust the machines. While adjusting a machine he received an injury necessitating the amputation of his thumb; he continued however to attend regularly to his work, only absenting himself from the factory for a sufficient time to enable him to have his hand dressed. He was incapacitated by the accident from setting up and adjusting the machines, and his work was afterwards confined to the supervision of the hands. His employer continued to pay his wages at the same rate after as before the accident; but it was admitted that, should he leave his employer's service, his wage-earning power as a foreman in any other factory would be materially decreased:—

Held, that as the workman had been prevented by reason of the accident from doing a substantial part of the work at which he had previously earned his wages, he had been disabled for two weeks from earning full wages "at the work at which he was employed" within the meaning of s. 1, sub-s. 2 (a), of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897:

Held, further, that, as the workman had hitherto suffered no pecuniary loss, the proper course was to make a declaration of the liability of the employer, leaving the amount and duration of the compensation to be fixed upon an application under Sched. I., clause 12, to vary the award, should the workman at any future time be unable by reason of the accident to earn the same wages.

While crossing the line at the station at H. in order to get to his work in the engine-shed, and shortly before the hour at which work began, he was killed by a passing train:—

Held, that the employment of the workman commenced when he got into the train to be conveyed to his work, and not on his arrival at the engine-shed, and that the accident arose out of and in the course of his employment within the meaning of s. 1, sub-s. 1, of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897. 38. — Railway—Workman going to work—Accident arising out of and in course of employment—Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c. 37), s. 1, sub-s. 1.

A firm of contractors, under a contract with a ry. co. for the widening of their line, were ballasting a siding which was separated from the main line by several lines of rail. The siding could only be reached by walking for a considerable distance through the premises of the ry. co., and the workmen were advised by the contractors, with the authority of the ry. co., to enter the premises by a gate, from which a path led by the side of the ry. to the siding which was being ballasted; it was not necessary, while following this route, to go upon the main line. On a foggy morning, seven minutes before the hour for the commencement of the day's work, a workman in the employ of the contractors, while on his way to his work at the siding, was run over and killed on the main line about 150 yards from the locality of his work:—

Held, by A. L. Smith L.J. and V. Williams L.J. (Romer L.J. dissenting), that it was no part of the contract of employment that the employment should include the time taken in getting to and from the work, that under the circumstances the contractors owed no duty to the workman while proceeding to his work, and that therefore the accident did not arise out of and in the course of the employment of the workman within the meaning of s. 1, sub-s. 1, of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

Per A. L. Smith L.J.: A workman who is injured in a place not under his employer's control while going to or returning from his work is not within the provisions of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897. HOLNESS v. MACKAY & DAVIS C. A. [1899] W. N. 65; [1899] 2 Q. B. 319

Employment by a ry. co. in a ry. refreshment room, to which the only entrance for the public is from the station platform, is not employment on or in or about a ry. within the meaning of s. 7, sub-s. 1, of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897. MILNER v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. CO.

The erection of a ry. station is work "which is merely ancillary or incidental to, and is no part of, or process in, the trade or business" of a ry. co. within the meaning of s. 4 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897; and therefore the ry. co. are not liable to pay compensation under that Act to the workman of a contractor, who has contracted with them to do such work, in respect of an injury occasioned to the workman in the execution of it. By s. 7, sub-s. 1, of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, the Act is to apply (inter alia) to employment "on, in, or about any building which exceeds thirty feet in height, and is either being constructed or repaired by means of a scaffolding."

A new house more than thirty feet high had been roofed in and the external scaffolding removed. The applicant was engaged in plastering the walls and ceiling in one of the rooms, and in order to reach his work was standing on a structure of trestles with boards on them. While at work in this manner, he met with an accident, for which he claimed compensation. An arbitrator appointed by a county court judge decided that the structure was not a scaffolding and refused to make an award of compensation, but referred the matter to the county court judge, who reversed the decision of the arbitrator and awarded the compensation provisionally settled by the arbitrator. On appeal:—

Held, that the question whether the structure was a scaffolding or not was a question of fact for the arbitrator, and that his finding was not open to review. FERGUSON v. GREEN

42. — Scaffolding—Building constructed by means of a—Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c. 37), s. 7, sub-s. 1.

By s. 7, sub-s. 1, of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, the Act is to apply (inter alia) to employment "on, in, or about any building which exceeds thirty feet in height, and is either being constructed or repaired by means of a scaffolding."

A new house more than thirty feet high had been roofed in, and workmen employed by the builder were plastering the walls and ceilings inside the house, for which purpose trestles and boards were being used. One of the men, while standing on the floor of the top landing plastering the wall, fell down the well of the staircase, there being no railing, and was killed. At that time other workmen were at work plastering some of the rooms, and were standing on boards placed across trestles four feet high in order to enable them to reach the ceilings and upper part of the walls. A county court judge having awarded compensation to the widow of the deceased:—

Held (Collins L.J. dissenting), that there was evidence to justify a finding of the county court judge that the arrangement of trestles and boards was a scaffolding within the meaning of s. 7, sub-s. 1, of the Act, and that the employment of the deceased was therefore one to which the Act applied. MAUDE v. Where a ship was unloading in a dock by means of a crane on the quay hired by her owners, and a workman employed by them in unloading her was killed by the explosion of a case of percussion-caps which he was placing in a basket attached to the chain of the crane for the purpose of its being hoisted out of the ship on to the quay:—

Held, that the accident arose out of and in the course of the workman's employment on or about machinery used in the process of unloading to a quay within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, and therefore the Act applied to it. WOODHAM v. An employer who, under a contract with a firm engaged in building operations on their own premises, supplies the labour for the brickwork, the workmen so supplied, although paid by him, being under the control while at work of the foreman of the building owners, is not an undertaker within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897. PERCIVAL v. Every workman employed by the undertaker upon the building is within the Act, whatever may be the nature of his own particular work. MASON v. A. R. DEAN, LD.

Where the owners of a ship moored alongside of a quay, who acted as their own stevedores, had the use of the portion of the quay, alongside of which their ship lay, for the purpose of unloading the ship’s cargo on to the quay, and a workman employed by them was killed through an accident arising out of and in the course of his employment on the quay :—

Held, that the shipowners, having the “actual use” of a portion of the quay within the meaning of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1895, s. 23, sub-s. 1, were “undertakers” in respect of a factory within the meaning of the Workmen’s Compensation Act, 1897, s. 7, and liable to make compensation to the dependants of the workman under that Act. *MERRILL v. A person using machinery in the process of loading a ship from a quay is an occupier of a factory within s. 23, sub-s. 1, of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1895, and therefore an “undertaker” within the Workmen’s Compensation Act, 1897, s. 7. CARRINGTON v. BANNISTER & CO.

For the purpose of unloading timber from timber-ships a dock board provided quay or wharf space running inland for 150 yards from the water’s edge; at the further end of this space was a fence with gates at intervals, behind which came a series of yards leased by the dock board to different timber merchants for storing their timber, the whole being the property of the dock board, and separated by a wall from the surrounding property. A workman employed by a firm of carpenters was killed while moving a log of timber in one of the yards leased to a firm of timber merchants :—

Held (Rigby L.J. dissenting), that the word “wharf” as used in s. 23 of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1895, and s. 7, sub-s. 2. of the Workmen’s Compensation Act, 1897, must be construed in its ordinary and popular signification of a place contiguous to water over which goods pass in the process of loading and unloading, that the yard where the accident happened was not a wharf within the meaning of those sections, and that the employment of the deceased was therefore not one to which the Workmen’s Compensation Act, 1897, applied. HADDOCK v. HUMPHREY C. A. [1900] 1 Q. B. 609

53. — “Workman” — Person employed in coal mine by contractor — Liability of mine-owner — Working “under a contract with an employer” — Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 58) — Employers and Workmen Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 90), s. 10 — Employers’ Liability Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 42), s. 8.

By s. 8 of the Employers’ Liability Act, 1880 the expression “workman” means any person to whom the Employers and Workmen Act, 1875, applies; and by s. 10 of the Act of 1875 a “workman” means “any person who, being a labourer, . . . miner, or otherwise engaged in manual labour, . . . has entered into or works under a contract with an employer,” whether the contract be express or implied.

By the special rules of a colliery made under s. 51 of the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887, the manager of the mine was made responsible for the control, management, and direction of the mine, and was to appoint such competent persons as might be necessary for carrying out the provisions of the Act, and all persons employed in or about the mine were to obey his directions; and the chargeman in each shift was to have charge of the sinking operations.

E. entered into a contract with the owners of the colliery to sink a shaft in their coal mine. By the contract E. (who was therein called the contractor) was to provide such sinkers, &c. as might be necessary for the execution of the work, and was to be paid a certain sum per fathom sunk. E. employed and paid the sinkers, he himself acting as “chargeman” in charge of the sinking operations. One of the sinkers, while engaged upon the work, was killed by a block of wood falling upon him, and his administratrix brought an action against the colliery owners under the Employers’ Liability Act, 1880, to recover damages for his death :—

Held, that E. was an independent contractor that the deceased was not a “workman” who had entered into or worked under a contract with the colliery owners as his employers within the meaning of s. 10 of the Employers and Workmen Act, 1875; and that therefore the Employers’ Liability Act, 1880, did not apply;

Held, also, that the control given by the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887, and by the special rules of the mine, to the manager over all persons in the mine, did not make E. and the sinkers employed by him “workmen” in the employ-

The defts., who were workmen belonging to a union, refused to go down a pit in cages with non-union men, but offered a few minutes afterwards to go down by themselves, which was not permitted by the under-manager of the master:—

Held, that the refusal to go down was a breach of contract, and that the defts.' action, being preconcerted, entitled the plt. to substantial damages:—

Held, also, that the master's refusal to let them go down when they offered to do so was not a breach of contract. BOWES AND PARTNERS, LD. v. PRESS - C. A. [1894] 1 Q. B. 202

An agreement made in 1894 between the plt., a hardware manufacturer at Dudley, and the deft., a young man of twenty-four, on the deft. entering the plt.'s service, contained a restrictive clause, that the deft. would not, during his service or after the determination thereof, divulge to any person the secrets of the plt. or the mode of conducting his business, or any part thereof, or any information with regard to the same, or after the determination of such service work for or serve any other person or firm carrying on the same kind of business, or any part thereof, within a radius of twenty-five miles from the plt.'s works at Dudley, without his consent. In 1897 the deft. left the plt.'s service, and in 1899, without his consent, entered the service of a firm carrying on a business similar to that of the plt. about three miles from his works:—

Held, affirming Stirling J., that the plt. was entitled to an injunction, since the restrictive clause was not void either as being unreasonable for the plt.'s protection, or as being unlimited in point of time and so binding the deft. during his whole life.

In an action by a trader against his servant for breach of a contract restricting him from serving a rival trader, evidence from persons in the trade giving their views as to the reasonableness or unreasonableness of the contract is inadmissible, since the reasonableness of a contract depends on its true construction and legal effect and is consequently a question for the Court alone. *HAYNES v. The occupier of a workshop, wherein young persons and women of the Jewish religion were employed on Sunday, carried on there the business of making button-holes for tailors on garments delivered to him by them for that purpose.

The workshop was open to his customers on Sunday for the purpose of enabling them to send or fetch away garments in pursuance of contracts previously made, but not for the purpose of their giving fresh orders:—

By s. 5, sub-s. 3, of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1878, as amended by s. 6, sub-s. 2, of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1891, "all dangerous parts of the machinery" in a factory shall be securely fenced or otherwise rendered safe.

The occupier of a cotton factory was summoned under the above section for neglecting to fence the shuttles of his looms. It appeared that shuttles do occasionally in the process of weaving fly out from the bed upon which they slide to and fro (called the shuttle-race) under circumstances which render them dangerous to any persons who happen to be in the line of flight. The flying out of the shuttles may be caused by the negligence of the weaver in charge of the machine, or by reason of some foreign substance getting accidentally into the shuttle-race, or by defect in the yarn:—

Held, that the obligation to fence under the above section was not confined to machinery which was dangerous in itself in the ordinary course of careful working; and that the shuttles, even though not in themselves defective, were "dangerous parts of the machinery" if any of the above-mentioned causes of their flying out of the shuttle-race were likely to occur with any degree of frequency. HINDLE v. Held, that, where a person has been injured

The deft.'s servant in the course of his employment assaulted the plt. and was fined for the assault. The plt. brought an action against the deft. for the assault:—

Held, that the mere fact of the assault being criminal and not merely tortious did not affect the deft.'s liability for the acts of his servant, and that the relief given under s. 45 of the Offences Against the Person Act, 1861, from civil proceedings for the assault was personal to the servant and did not extend to the deft.

The plt. was employed at the deft.'s saw mills to assist one of their sawyers who was engaged at a circular saw. The deft. had provided the saw with a sufficient guard or fence under the bench for the prevention of accidents. The guard was moveable for the purpose of removing the sawdust which collected under the bench. The sawyer for his own purposes improperly removed the guard, and whilst the guard was off the plt. fell against the saw and was injured :—

Held, that the absence of the guard was a defect in the condition of the machinery within s. 1, sub-s. 1, of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880.

78. — Driver—Negligence—Employer and Workman—"Person in charge or control of locomotive engine or train upon a railway"—Employers' Liability Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 42), s. 1, sub-s. 5.

The Employers' Liability Act, 1880, by s. 1, sub-s. 5, enacts that where personal injury is caused to a workman by reason of the negligence of any person in the service of the employer "who has the charge or control of any . . . locomotive engine or train upon a ry.," there shall be the same right of compensation against the employer as if the workman had not been in his service :—

A "person who has the charge or control of a train" does not necessarily cease to have charge of it, within the meaning of the Act, because some of the carriages are uncoupled from one another and from the engine in order that they may be separately dealt with. And those words do not necessarily point only to one person who is in charge of the whole train, but may include persons who have duties to perform in respect of parts of the train.

An engine-driver, employed with his fireman in the discharge of loaded wagons on a ry., took a locomotive engine and several wagons to a point on an incline, and there proceeded with the engine and one of the wagons to the place of discharge, intending to return for the other wagons in due course. The fireman uncoupled the remaining wagons and scotched them to prevent them running down the incline. One of the wagons broke away, ran down the incline, and killed a workman in the service of the same employers. There was evidence that the method of scotching adopted was unsafe and was known to and approved by the engine-driver. The representative of the deceased having brought an action for compensation against the employers:—

Held, reversing the decision of the Q. B. D. and C. A., that there was evidence for the jury that the death was caused by reason of the negligence of a person who had the charge or control of a train within the meaning of the Act, since either the engine-driver had the charge or control, or the fireman had, and there was evidence of negligence in both. MCCORD v. 79. — Driver—Negligence of servant—Liability of master—Intervening act of third party—Effective cause of damage.

There is no rule of law to prevent a master being liable for negligence of his servant whereby opportunity was given for a third person to commit a wrongful or negligent act immediately producing the damage complained of. Whether the original negligence was an effective cause of the damage is a question of fact in each case.

The deft. employed a man to drive a cart, with instructions not to leave it, and a lad, who had nothing to do with the driving, to go in the cart and deliver parcels to the customers of the defts. The driver left the cart, in which the lad was, and went into a house. While the driver was absent the lad drove on and came into collision with the plt.'s carriage. In an action to recover for the damage caused by the collision:—

Held, that the negligence of the driver in so leaving the cart was the effective cause of the damage, and that the deft. was liable. ENGELHART v. FARRANT & Co. C. A. [1897] 1 Q. B. 240

80. — Driver—Omnibus driven by conductor—Onus of proving authority—Negligence of servant.

At the end of a journey the conductor of an omnibus belonging to the deft., in the absence of the driver, and apparently for the purpose of turning the omnibus in the right direction for the next journey, drove it through some by-streets at a considerable pace, and while so doing negligently ran into and injured the plt. At the trial the plt. gave no evidence that the conductor was authorized by the defts. to drive the omnibus in the absence of the driver. At the close of the plt.'s case judgment was entered for the defts. On appeal:—

Held, by A. L. Smith and Romer L.J.J., that the plt. had not discharged himself from the burden cast upon him of shewing that the injury was due to the negligence of a servant of the defts. acting within the scope of his employment, and that the defts. were entitled to judgment.

By V. Williams L.J., that in general, if, in the absence of the driver of an omnibus, an accident occurs while the conductor is driving, it would be for the proprietor to shew that the act was unauthorized, but that the facts of the particular case negatived the giving of authority,

The deft. was the owner of a brougham, horses, and harness which he kept at a livery-stable. The keeper of the livery-stable was in the habit of supplying the deft. with one of his own servants to drive the brougham. One day, whilst the brougham was being driven with one of the deft.'s horses, the driver, owing to his negligence, as the jury found, lost control of the horse, which dashed through the window of the plt.'s shop and did damage. The man who was driving the brougham at the time of the accident had continuously driven the deft. for the preceding six weeks, and at the time of the accident was wearing a suit of livery which had been supplied to him by the deft.:—

Held, that upon these facts there was evidence on which a jury might find that the driver at the time of the accident was acting as the servant of the deft., so as to render the deft. responsible for the consequences of his negligence. JONES v. On Oct. 22 the respondents agreed to employ the appellant, and he agreed to serve them, for fifty-two weeks, at specified weekly wages. On Nov. 16 the appellant left his work, and did not return.

On Dec. 16 the respondents took proceedings, under the Act, in a court of summary jurisdiction, against the appellant, and recovered 10*l.* damages for his absence from Nov. 16 to 28. “The claim for compensation” means, not the initiation of proceedings before the tribunal by which the compensation is to be assessed, but a notice of a claim for compensation sent to the workman's employer.

A workman who had been injured in the course of his employment sent to his employers within six months a notice of the accident, and also a notice stating that he claimed compensation for the injury received by him. The provision of s. 2, sub-s. 1, of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, which requires the claim for compensation to be made within six months of the occurrence of the accident causing the injury, is not necessarily an absolute bar to proceedings for the assessment of compensation commenced after six months by an injured workman, and the county court judge or other arbitrator has jurisdiction to inquire whether there are any circumstances in the case to debar the employer from raising that defence. An agreement arrived at between the parties shortly after the accident that there is a statutory liability on the employer to pay compensation, the amount of compensation being left open for future settlement, is evidence upon which the judge or arbitrator may properly find that the employer is estopped from setting up the defence that the request for arbitration was not filed within six months of the accident. WRIGHT v JOHN BAGNALL & SONS, LD.

98. — Time for making claim for compensation—Claim made more than six months after accident—Estoppel—Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c. 37), s. 2, sub-s. 1.

A workman having been injured by an accident, his employers paid him weekly through an insurance company one-half the amount of his wages, taking a receipt which expressed that the money was received "on account of compensation which may be or become due to me under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897"; the payments continued to be made for ten months after the accident, when they ceased. The workman then filed a request for arbitration in the county court:—

Held, that there being no evidence of any admission on the part of the employers of their liability under the Act to pay compensation, they were not estopped from taking the objection that the request for arbitration was out of time.

Where a workman, who has been injured by an accident arising out of and in the course of his employment, brings an unsuccessful action to recover damages against his employer, and is desirous of having compensation for his injury assessed under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, he must follow the procedure prescribed by s. 1, sub-s. 4, of that Act, and must apply then and there to the judge trying the action for an assessment of compensation; he cannot at a subsequent date initiate independent proceedings against his employer by a request for arbitration under that Act. *EDWARDS v. A payment made by a master at the instance of a servant, to discharge an obligation of the servant, or to place the money in the hands of a person in whose hands the servant desires it to be placed, is a payment to the servant as much as if current coin had been placed in the servant's hands. H. entered into the service of A., and signed an agreement to conform to all regulations of A.'s works. One regulation was that all servants were to become members of a sick and accident club. By the rules of this club weekly payments were made to the club, and relief given to members in case of sickness or accident. H. received each week a ticket shewing the wages due, and the weekly deduction for the club, and the balance was paid to H. H. never required or received relief from the club:—

Held, that within ss. 3 and 4 of the Truck Act, 1831, H. had been paid the entire amount of wages in current coin, and that H. was not entitled to recover from A. the amount of the weekly deductions:

Held, also, that even assuming (but without deciding) that there was a contract avoided by s. 2 of the Act, A., by making the weekly payments to the club with H.'s assent, had discharged his obligations to H.

MERGER—Agreement for lease—Life estate—Intention—Benefit—Tenant for life.

The principle applicable to the merger of charges in equity applies also to the merger of leases. The Court is guided by the intention; and, in the absence of express intention, either in the instrument or by parol, the Court looks to the benefit of the person in whom the two estates become vested.

If a tenant for life in remainder takes a beneficial lease or an agreement therefor, and subsequently becomes tenant for life in possession, the presumption is against merger in equity.

H. was entitled to certain houses for a term of ninety-nine years (less one day) by way of mortgage from W. W. was entitled to the property for the original term subject to the mortgage, and H. was entitled to the reversion in fee expectant on the determination of the original term. Under these circumstances W. conveyed the property to H. for the unexpired residue of the original term, and H. covenanted to indemnify W. against the rents and covenants in the lease and the principal and interest secured by the mortgage. H. afterwards conveyed by way of sale to W. in fee, the conveyance being expressly "subject to and with benefit of the lease," and W. then conveyed to the plts. in fee "subject to and with benefit of the lease." H. subsequently purported to convey by way of mortgage in fee to the deft., who had no notice of the plt.'s title:—

Held, that whether the original term had merged in the reversion or not, yet, inasmuch as H. and W. had dealt with one another on the footing that the term was to be deemed in existence, it would be inequitable to allow it to be treated as at an end. H. had therefore, when he purported to convey the fee to the deft., an equitable estate to the extent of the leasehold interest, which, under s. 63 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, passed to the deft., and the plts. were bound to give effect to it.

The question whether two equitable estates are merged or not is one of intention. Whether this rule applies where a merger of legal estate

A remainderman claimed that there had been a merger of the life estate and the estate pur autre vie, and that he took the estate discharged of the rent-charge:—

Held, that s. 25, sub-s. 4, of the Judicature Act, 1873, applied, and that having regard to the intention of the parties manifest on the face of the deed of grant there was no merger of the estates of the first and second tenant for life.

1. — Mounds of refuse produced in iron manufacture—Minerals—Chattels.

Plt. demised coal and iron mines to a co., which, in manufacturing iron from ironstone, produced large quantities of refuse (consisting principally of protoxide of iron and silica) called “tap-cinder” or “puddlers' taps.” This refuse, which was at the time unsaleable, was thrown on the demised land and accumulated in large mounds. On the determination of the lease plts. demised the land and minerals to defts., who only worked the coal, and did not add to the mounds. Afterwards defts. purchased the “stores and other effects” on the land from plts. The tap cinder in the meantime had acquired a commercial value, and large quantities of it were sold by defts. :—

Held, that plts. were entitled to the mounds and to an account of the proceeds of sale, inasmuch as the mounds, although they might have been removed by the company during its lease, were not chattels passing under the sale of the stores and effects, and were not iron, or ironstone mines, seams, veins, or beds, opened or unopened, or minerals within the meaning of the defts.' lease. BOILEAU v. (35 & 36 Vict. c. 76), s. 17; 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 58), s. 12, sub-s. 1.

The plts. were employed in the defts.' collieries to cut large coal at wages which depended on the weight gotten. The coal was cut as large coal, but a considerable amount of small coal was produced in the conveyance of the coal to the pit's mouth and screening it. The coal raised was screened at the pit's mouth, and the defts. made deductions from the plts.' wages in respect of the small coal found in it. The plts. sued the defts. for the amounts so deducted :—

Held, that the small coal was part of "the mineral contracted to be gotten" within s. 12, sub-s. 1, of the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887, and that the deductions were illegal, and the plts. were therefore entitled to recover :—

Held, also, that the sums allowed for the small coal were to be at the same rate as that paid for the large coal.

The contract contained among other things a clause allowing deductions in respect of dirt sent up with the coal, and special regulations as to testing the amount of coal sent up which deprived the miner of payment for coal where the tub sent up contained over a certain proportion of dirt :—

Held, (1.) that the stipulation was contrary to s. 12 of the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887, because in certain events the miner would not get any wage for the amount of mineral gotten by him; (2.) that the illegality of the stipulation as to the deductions did not vitiate the whole contract, nor prevent the co. from enforcing the other stipulations of the contract. KEARNEY v. A mining co. (now in liquidation) were lessees, from separate lessors, at certain rents and royalties, of two adjoining coal-mines A and B. There was no shaft on mine B, and the company worked both mines by means of a shaft on mine A. In each of the leases the lessor reserved to himself express power to distrain for rent in arrear, not only upon chattels belonging to the lessees on the demised premises, but also upon chattels belonging to the lessees in or about "any adjoining or neighbouring collieries." In Oct., 1896, the lessors of mine B levied a distress upon chattels belonging to the lessees on mine A:—

Held, reversing the decision of Stirling J., [1896] W. N. 166 (3), (1.) that having regard to the nature of the demise and the manner in which the minerals were worked, the power to distrain upon chattels belonging to the lessees upon adjoining or neighbouring mines did not constitute the mining lease a bill of sale within the meaning of the Bills of Sale Act, 1878, so as to require registration under the Bills of Sale Acts; and held also (2.) that the distress, having been levied before the commencement of the winding-up of the company, and before a receiver was effectively appointed on behalf of the debenture-holders of the company, was valid against the debenture-holders.

Per the C. A.: This last decision is in accordance with Biggerstaff v. Rowatt's Wharf Co., [1896] 2 Ch. 93, and not inconsistent with In re Opera, Limited, [1891] 3 Ch. 260.

Per Stirling J.: The Court will not at the instance of the liquidator restrain further proceeding under a distress levied by the landlord of a limited company before the commencement of the winding-up, but not completed by sale, unless there are special reasons rendering it inequitable to allow the distress to go on; but semble, the Court has jurisdiction under the Companies Act, 1862, both in a compulsory and a voluntary winding-up, to restrain by injunction further proceedings under such distress.

The fact that a distress had been levied between the passing and confirmation of a special resolution for a voluntary winding-up is not a ground for such injunction.

The doctrine of Tennent v. City of Glasgow Bank, (1879) 4 App. Cas. 615, does not apply to a contest between different classes of creditors.

The doctrine of possession by prescriptive working of minerals applicable to the foreshore ex adverso of a barony, granted with parts and pertinents, cannot be extended to a barony granted with power to work minerals infra fluxum maris, because these words shew that the grant is limited to the minerals under the foreshore only. Nor can such prescriptive use be extended to a third barony where a barony with a bounding charter lies between.

Quære, whether the doctrine can be extended to cover minerals running from the foreshore under the sea-bed.

Adoption—Minor—Lease of coal.

The right of a proprietor of estates adjoining the sea to work the coal below low-water mark was challenged by the Crown during the proprietor's minority. The estates to which the minor had succeeded consisted in part of entailed and in part of unentailed lands. The administration of the unentailed lands was vested in the testamentary trustees of the minor's father, who were also curators of the minor. These trustees, without the concurrence of the minor, entered into a transaction with the Crown whereby they on their part accepted a lease of the whole coal below low-water mark ex adverso of both the entailed and unentailed lands, and the Crown agreed not to claim damages in respect of coal which had been worked in the past. After the proprietor came of age, he accepted an assignment of the lease, and subsequently applied for and obtained from the Crown a reduction of the royalty payable under the lease, and a modification of the whole mode of working the coal. When the proprietor so acted in regard to the lease, he was unaware that he had a claim to some of the coal below low-water mark. In an action brought by the proprietor fourteen years after he had reached majority, concluding, inter alia, for a declarator that he was not bound by the lease:—

Held, reversing the decision of the Ct. of Sess., (1897), 24 R. 216, that the actings of the proprietor after he came of age barred him from challenging the lease. LORD ADVOCATE v. WEMYSS - - H. L. (Sc.) [1900] A. C. 48

13. — Compensation clause—Subsidence—Injury to land and buildings—Liability of lessee—Damage caused by act of lessee's predecessor in title.

Mines were granted by deed, with power to the grantee and his assigns to work, making reasonable compensation for all damage occasioned to the surface of the lands, or to buildings thereon, by the exercise of the powers by the indenture granted:—

Held, following Davis v. Treharne, (1881) 6 App. Cas. 460, that damage by subsidence was not covered by the compensation clause, and therefore the assigns of the grantee were liable to an action to recover damages for injury done to the surface of the land by subsidence caused by working the mines.

A lessee of underground strata is not liable in damages to the owner of buildings on the surface, who has acquired a right to have the buildings uninjured by underground workings, for injury occasioned to the buildings by reason of subsidence happening during the currency of the lease, caused, not by any act of commission on the part of the lessee, but resulting from an excavation made in the underground strata by the lessee's predecessor in title prior to the date of the lease.

Therefore, where the plts.' buildings, erected more than twenty years before action, on land, the mines under which were worked by the defts. under a lease, were injured, during the currency of the lease, and within six years before action, by subsidence caused, not by the acts of the defts., but by the acts of their predecessor in title, done prior to the date of the lease:—

convey, her estate to trustees. The settlement contained the usual power of sale, and in the meantime the trustees were to lease the unsold parts, and to hold the net proceeds of such sales, as well as net rents and profits of the estate until sold, upon trusts thereafter declared, "with such powers of leasing the lands and hereditaments and other powers necessary and expedient in the execution of the trust." The trusts were declared, and it was provided that until the estate should be sold the trustees were to apply the rents and profits to the persons and for the purposes to which the annual income of the money arising from the sale of the estate would be paid under the trust. Under the trust the annual income of the proceeds of the sale of the estate was to be paid to G. during her life, and after her death to her husband, and after their deaths the trustees were to hold the trust premises and the annual income thereof for the children of the marriage as the parents should appoint. There was one child of the marriage. Stone quarries on a portion of the estate had been worked at intervals for about a century; but during 1882, and for four years before 1882, no quarries had been worked. In 1895, the estate not having been sold, the trustees leased the stone in forty-five acres, including the portion already worked, at a fixed rent with a royalty on the amount of stone sold:—

Held, reversing the decision of the Ct. of Sess., (1898) 25 R. 475, that the quarries at the date of the marriage settlement were "opened mines," and the rent and royalty fell to be paid to G. as annual income from the estate, and did not fall to be accumulated for the benefit of the child of the marriage. GREVILLE-NUGENT v. 15. — Open or unopened mine—Pieces of land separated by narrow strip belonging to different owner—Settled Estates Act, 1877 (40 & 41 Vict. c. 18), s. 4.

An estate settled by the will of a testator comprised two pieces of land separated by a narrow intervening strip of land which belonged to different owners. Under the whole of the lands there was a valuable seam of coal. The piece of land on the north side of the strip had been demised by the settlor to a colliery co., who had worked the coal. The piece of land on the south side of the strip had not been demised by the settlor, nor had the coal thereunder been worked in any way; but it appeared that if the intervening strip had belonged to the testator the coal could have been worked from the pit or shaft sunk by the colliery co. On a petition by the tenant for life under the will for the sanction of the Court, under the Settled Estates Act, 1877, to a proposed mining lease of a portion of the land on the south side of the strip:—

Held, that, by reason of the intervention of the strip of land, the mine to be leased must be deemed to be a separate unopened mine, and that therefore three-fourths of the rent under the lease must be set apart and invested. In re MAYNARD'S SETTLED ESTATE - Kekewich J. 21. — Licence to work minerals—Construction of deed—Right, whether exclusive—Setting aside lease.

In 1783, by a deed of exchange, lands were granted in fee to the plt.'s predecessor in title with a reservation of coal and minerals. The minerals were not worked, but in 1865 the grantor's successors in title demised the coal under part of the land to A. In 1877 the then owner of the lands demised the coal under another part to the plt., who did not then know of his rights under the deed of 1783. In an action to establish plt.'s right to the minerals:—

Held, that (1.) Lord Mountjoy's Case (Godb. 17; Anderson 307) does not decide that a licence to dig coal cannot be exclusive, and although there is a prima facie presumption against such a licence being exclusive, the intention to exclude the grantor need not appear by express words. (2.) That the reservation was not an exception of the minerals, but a grant of a right to work them, and was not exclusive, and that the grantor could himself work minerals so long as he did not disturb the grantee in any working in progress.

The defts. were the lessees of certain lands under a lease dated September 30, 1860, granted by the predecessor in title of the plaintiff.

The lease contained the following reservation: "Except nevertheless and always reserved out of this demise all mines and minerals within or under the said land."

The defts. had, for the purpose of obtaining water, commenced to construct a borehole eighteen inches in diameter, and had already bored through a stratum of redrock and a layer of coal from six to eight inches in thickness:—

Held, that although the substances in question could not (as was admitted) be worked at a profit at the present time, they fell within the reservation in the lease as being substances which had "a use and a value of their own independent of and separable from the rest of the soil," and that the plts. were entitled to an injunction to restrain the defts. from boring or removing any mines or minerals in or under the land.

The special Act empowering the construction of a canal provided for compensation to landowners whose lands were used or damaged:—

Held, that the Act impliedly gave a right of support for the canal to the same extent as if the lands had been actually taken, so as to prevent the landowners from working their subjacent mines. An injunction granted against working subjacent coal so as to let the canal down.

30. — Support of surface—Right to—Inclosure Act—Manorial rights—Allotments—33 Geo. 2, c. xii.—Damage to surface—Compensation.

A common had been allotted under an inclosure Act, which provided that the lord of the manor should enjoy all mines without making any satisfaction. The Act further provided for the payment of compensation to persons injured by mining by the other holders of allotments in the same township. The lessees of the lord worked mines, and caused the surface to subside:—

Held, that the lessees were entitled so to work the mines as to let down the surface, and that the compensation clauses must be treated as indicating the measure of compensation provided by the legislature. Thompson v. Mein

The general canons of construction of inclosure Acts as to the mutual rights of mine and surface owners are as follows: (1) Where the ownerships are severed, prima facie the surface owner has a right to support for his tenement, and this is strengthened by the absence of a compensation clause. (2) The onus of rebutting this presumption lies on the mineowner, and a limited

1. — Money paid under compulsion of law—Money credited in claim—Receipt in full given—Want of bona fides—Action for recovery of money.

The plts. sued the deft. for work and labour done. In the writ they by mistake credited the deft. with the payment of a sum on account and claimed the balance. The deft. knowing that they had made a mistake paid the balance and obtained from them a receipt for the whole sum due from him to them. Subsequently, having discovered their mistake, the plts. brought an action to recover from the deft. the sum wrongfully credited to him, as money had and received to their use:—

Held, that, although the receipt had been given under compulsion of legal process, the deft. could not rely upon it as a defence to the action since he had not acted bona fide, and that the plts. were therefore entitled to recover the sum claimed. WARD & Co. v. WALLIS

Kennedy J. [1900] 1 Q. B. 675

2. — Money paid under compulsion of law—Summons—Withdrawal.

The rule that money paid under compulsion of legal process cannot be recovered back applies, although the process never terminated in a final order or judgment, and although it may have been withdrawn before action brought for the recovery back, and although the payment was made under a mistake of fact. The defts. summoned the plt. to recover his proportion of paving expenses assessed on him in respect of premises alleged to abut on a certain street. The plt., before the hearing, paid the money under the mistaken belief that his premises abutted on the street in question, and the summons was withdrawn. On discovery of his error he sued to recover the sum paid as money paid under a mistake of fact:—

Held, that the plt. could not recover. MOORE v. FULHAM VESTRY C. A. [1895] 1 Q. B. 399

Held, that the original tenancy was determined by the death of the mortgagor, and no new tenancy was created between the mortgagees and the heir by the mere payment of interest. SCOBIE v. COLLINS

A mortgage deed contained a clause by which the mortgagor attorned tenant from year to year to the mortgagee at a yearly rental payable half-yearly, and a further clause by which the mortgagee might at any time, without giving any previous notice of his intention so to do, enter upon and take possession of the premises, and determine the tenancy created by the attornment. The rent was in arrear, and the mortgagee brought an action to recover possession, and applied for an order for recovery of the premises under Order XIV. :—

Held, that the claim to recover possession was founded on the determination of a tenancy at will, and not on forfeiture, and that the writ could be specially indorsed under Order III., r. 6 (F), and judgment signed under Order XIV.

7. — Assignment of equity of redemption by one deed to one person.

The doctrine of consolidation of mortgages laid down in Vint v. Padget, (1858) 2 D. & J. 611, and other cases to the same effect has been too long established to be now overthrown.

Therefore where the owner of different properties mortgages them to different persons and the mortgagees afterwards become united in title, the holder of the mortgages has a right to consolidate them, and to refuse to be redeemed as to one without payment of what is due to him on all, not only as against the mortgagor, but also as against a person to whom the mortgagor has by one deed assigned the equity of redemption of all the properties, although the assignment is made before the mortgagees become united in title.

Mere production of a deed is not deduction of a title.

Held, that the solicitors were entitled to regard the transaction as a new mortgage of 232,000*l.* requiring a fresh investigation of title, and not as a further charge within rule 10 of Sched. MORTGAGE (Costs)—continued.

On February 19, 1898, on the further consideration of the action, an order was made referring it to the taxing master to tax the plt.'s costs of the action:—

Held, that the rights of the parties were ascertained by the first order, which must be construed by the then existing law, and that the plt. was not entitled, by reason of the passing of the Mortgages Legal Costs Act, 1895, to charge profit costs.

In 1887 freeholds were mortgaged to a building society by H. to secure advances. In Oct., 1892, H. died, having devised these freeholds to N. upon trust for sale. In Dec., 1892, C., the solicitor who acted for the society, and also for H., and, after his death, for N., having fraudulently represented to the society that notice to pay off their mortgage had been given, procured the statutory receipt to be indorsed on the mortgage of 1887, and obtained possession of the title-deeds of the property: the money owing to the society was never paid off, N. at this time being unaware of the existence of the mortgage, N. shortly afterwards agreed to sell the property to C., who was at this time in good repute and supposed to be well off, and by a deed of Dec. 29, 1892, which recited the trust for sale in H.'s will, N., in consideration of 700*l.* paid to him by C. at or before the execution of the deed the receipt whereof N. thereby acknowledged, conveyed the property to C. in fee. The purchase-money was not in fact paid. This conveyance and the other title-deeds, except the mortgage of 1887 and the statutory receipt, were shortly afterwards deposited by C. with the plaintiffs as security for an advance of 650*l.* In 1893, C. was adjudicated bankrupt, his frauds were discovered, and he was convicted and sentenced. The plts. now claimed to enforce their security against the society, and against C. and his cestui que trust. It was admitted that the society had priority over N. and his cestui que trust, and the main contention was between the plts. and the society, and the plts. and N. and his cestui que trust:—

Held, that the society were entitled under the circumstances to shew that they had never been paid off, that the statutory receipt and the mortgage of 1887 were delivered only as an escrow, and the mortgage not having been paid off, and the legal estate being still in the society, they had priority over the plts.

Held also, that the conveyance of Dec. 1892, was not void as between the plts. and N. and his cestui que trust; that as N. had authority to deal with the property, the plts., in the absence of express notice, were entitled to rely on the receipt in the body of the deed, and had priority over the cestui que trust: *Shropshire Union Railways and Canal Co. v. Held, that the mortgage was valid and binding on the co., for (1) it was sealed and delivered by the co. as a perfect deed and immediately operative, and was not merely an escrow; and (2) the co. had by their conduct enabled their manager and banker to represent to the mortgagees that their, the mortgagees', money was invested on the security of the co.'s property.

The doctrine of lis pendens is confined to realty and leaseholds, and does not include goods and chattels.

B. mortgaged book debts to W., who gave no notice to the debtors. W. commenced an action for foreclosure which was registered as a lis pendens, and obtained an order for a receiver and an injunction restraining B. from dealing with them. The receiver gave no notice to the debtors. Subsequently B. assigned the book debts to the L. Co., who gave notice to the debtors. The L. Co. had no notice of the action or of the order for an injunction and receiver, unless the registration of the lis pendens amounted to constructive notice:—

Held, that the doctrine of lis pendens did not apply, and that the L. Co. had priority.

27. — Parties—Debenture-holders—"Floating security."

The trustees of a co., by its authority, gave a legal mortgage in fee of its land to the plts. Subsequently the co. issued debentures to secure principal sums and interest which were thereby charged on all its undertaking and present and future property. It was also provided that the debentures were "all to rank pari passu in point of charge as a floating security on the property" thereby charged. The principal moneys thus charged were only to become payable in certain events, none of which had happened.

The plts. commenced a foreclosure action to which they made not only the trustees and the co., but also all the debenture-holders defts. At the trial it was objected on behalf of the debenture-holders that they were unnecessarily joined as parties:—

Held, that the debenture-holders had an immediate equitable charge; that the working out of a foreclosure decree in their absence was not a dealing with its property by the co. in the ordinary course of its business; and that they were properly made parties to the action. *WALLACE v. 34. — Practice—Claim for account, foreclosure, or sale—Foreclosure judgment in chambers—Summons for directions—R. S. C., 1883, Orders xv., xxx.

The plt., a mortgagee, by his writ claimed the usual accounts and inquiries, foreclosure, or sale; in his summons for directions under Order xxx., the plt. also asked for the usual order for accounts and inquiries, and for foreclosure or sale; and upon the hearing of this application the master made the usual order for account and foreclosure. No objection was taken by the deft. to the order at the time it was made, but he subsequently moved in Court to discharge it, on the ground, first, that on a summons for directions the Court had no power to make an order for foreclosure; and, secondly, that even under Order xv. the Court had no power to make such an order, except in very simple cases, and then not in chambers:—

Held, by Romer J., that as the deft. had received ample notice of the nature of the relief claimed, and had not questioned the jurisdiction of the master to make the order for foreclosure, it was not necessary for the Court now to consider whether any technical objection could be successfully made to the joinder of a summons under Order xv. to one under Order xxx.; but the practice, in simple undefended cases, was a convenient one, and a saving of expense to all parties, to get the order for foreclosure made at once. In his Lordship's opinion the Court had jurisdiction to make an order for foreclosure under Order xv. in chambers in accordance with the decision in Smith v. Davies, (1884) 28 Ch. D. 650. It was too late now to raise any objection to the order, and the motion would be refused with costs.

Held, by C. A., affirming the decision of Romer J., [1899] W. N. 23 (8), upon the principle of Dyott v. Neville, [1887] W. N. 35, that the deft., not having raised the objection in chambers, could not raise it afterwards. HORTON v. BOSSON C. A. [1899] W. N. 38 (4)

In order that a purchaser for value, who has acquired the legal estate without notice of a prior equitable mortgage of the property, may be postponed to that mortgage, it is not necessary to shew that he has been guilty of fraud, or negligence amounting to fraud; it is sufficient that he has been guilty of negligence so gross as to render it unjust to deprive the prior mortgagee of his priority.

A purchaser, by an agent who was not a solicitor, purchased property and obtained a conveyance of the legal estate without notice of a prior equitable mortgage by deposit of the title-deeds. The agent inquired about the deeds, and was told by the vendor that they were in his possession, but that they would not be delivered up because they related also to other property. The agent did not ask for production of the deeds, and they were not produced, nor was any abstract of title delivered. By the conveyance to the purchaser the vendor acknowledged the right of the purchaser to production of the documents of title mentioned in a schedule, and to delivery of copies, and undertook for the safe custody thereof. The documents mentioned in the schedule were the deeds which had been deposited with the mortgagee. On the subsequent discovery of the mortgage:—

mortgagee cannot, as against that incumbrancer, tack to his debt further advances made by him to the mortgagor, applies to further advances made in pursuance of an obligation or covenant on the part of the first mortgagee entered into at the time of the first mortgage.

A settlement contained a trust for payment of the income of the trust fund to A. for life "or until he shall assign, charge or incumber, or affect to assign, charge or incumber" the same:—

Held, by the C. A., that under the circumstances this trust had not a retrospective operation so as to include past acts.

The owner of a life interest in personal estate, who had already mortgaged it, mortgaged it a second time to two persons, his uncles, who had no notice of the first mortgage. One of the conditions of the second mortgage was, that the mortgagor should make a settlement of his life interest, so that that interest should be made determinable on alienation by him, with a trust in that event for the application of the income, at the discretion of the trustees, for the maintenance, support or benefit of the settlor, his wife (if any) and children or remoter issue, and his sisters and their children or remoter issue, and a settlement to that effect was executed contemporaneously with the execution of the second mortgage. At the date of the second mortgage the first mortgagee had not given notice of his mortgage to the trustees of the will which created the life interest, and he did not give them notice until nine months afterwards, before which time notice of the second mortgage and of the settlement had been given to them. Notice of the first mortgage was given to the second mortgagees about five weeks after the notice to the trustees:—

Held, by the C. A., that the uncles were entitled, in respect of their original advance and all further advances made by them to the nephew before they received notice of the first mortgage, to priority over the first mortgagee, but that the settlement must be treated as voluntary, and that the first mortgage was entitled to priority over it.

The Yorkshire Registries Act, 1884, applies to a charge by deposit of deeds unaccompanied by a memorandum of deposit.

The priorities given by the Act are not to be altered except in cases of actual fraud, which means fraud importing grave moral blame.

In 1889 certain beneficiaries under a will deposited with a bank the title-deeds of an estate in Yorkshire to secure an overdraft by the trustees in order that the trustees might be guaranteed against loss in carrying on the testator's business. This was done with the knowledge and approval of J., a solicitor, who represented one of the trustees in this matter. The charge was never registered. J. subsequently took a mortgage of the same property and registered it, and he claimed priority over the bank. The bank, being satisfied with the personal security of the trustees, did not contest the claim:—

Held, that J. was guilty of actual fraud in taking advantage of a defect in the bank's security to defeat the interests of his client, and that he was not entitled to the protection of the Act. BATTISON v. HOBSON

The trusts of the term were, in case his personal estate not otherwise disposed of by his will should be insufficient to satisfy his debts, and funeral and testamentary expenses, and the pecuniary legacies bequeathed by his will, then by mortgage of the hereditaments comprised in the term, or any part thereof, to raise in aid of his personal estate so much money as should be sufficient to satisfy the same debts, expenses and legacies. In June, 1875, the tenant for life in possession of the settled estates created a rent-charge, terminable in 1900, which was charged on the settled estates under the Limited Owners' Residences Act, 1870. After the date of this rent-charge the trustees of the 2000 years' term executed several mortgages of parts of the settled estates for the purposes of their trust:—

Held, that, at the date of the creation of the rent-charge, the term of 2000 years was, within the meaning of s. 9 of the Limited Owners' Residences Act, 1870, an "incumbrance affecting the land charged," and that the mortgages created under the trusts of the term were entitled to priority over the rent-charge. PROVIDENT CLERKS' MUTUAL LIFE ASSURANCE ASSOCIATION v. The question for decision was which of two innocent parties was to suffer by reason of the fraud of a solicitor named Harrison:—

Held, that, assuming the transfer to Harrison to have operated as an assignment and conveyance to him in his personal capacity, and not as a trustee for the deft., the result must follow that the mortgage debt immediately became discharged, and that he held the property as trustee for the plt. On the evidence the Court was unable to hold that at the time of the transfer Harrison had constituted himself a trustee of this particular security for the deft., and consequently the deft., having taken the transfer from Harrison without the privity of the mortgagor, could only hold it against the mortgagor subject to the state of account between Harrison and the mortgagor, and as between them the debt was non-existent: that the mortgagor had never lost the right to redeem, and that directly the agent who had received the amount to pay off the mortgage became himself the transferee, the debt was extinguished, and no transferee from him could treat the debt as a subsisting charge upon the property: the plt. therefore was entitled to priority, and to have a reconveyance from the deft. TURNER v. Two trustees advanced money on a mortgage of realty. S., one of the trustees, paid the money to E., a solicitor, who produced to him the mortgage deed executed by K. as the mortgagor. The deed, which contained the usual receipt for the money in the body of it, was handed over by E. to S., who retained it. K. who was not a man of much education, and employed E. from time to time in relation to his property, and had implicit confidence in E., had signed the deed on his advice, but did not know that it was a mortgage and had not instructed E. to obtain a mortgage. E. misappropriated the money and absconded. On discovery of the fraud K. brought an action against the trustees to set aside the mortgage:—

Held, that under the circumstances K. was estopped by his conduct from denying (1.) that the mortgage was valid, and (2.) that E. had authority to receive the mortgage money.

H., the owner of a business, mortgaged it to S. to secure an annuity, the mortgage deed providing that S. might exercise the power of appointing a receiver under s. 24 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, and, further, that the receiver might, if so directed in writing by S., "manage and carry on the business as he might think fit." H. continued to carry on the business from the date of the mortgage, and in doing so became indebted to the plt. for work done in connection with the business. The debt was unsecured, but it was arranged between H. and the plt. that H. should pay it off by fixed instalments. In June, 1891, after having paid some of the instalments, H. died leaving an executrix, and then, S.'s annuity being in arrear, S. by writing under the power conferred by the mortgage deed appointed a receiver of the business "with full power to manage and carry on the same as he might think fit." In Aug. 1891, the receiver paid the plt. a further instalment in reduction of his debt.

59. — “Clog” on redemption—Agreement subject to condition to be satisfied before the period fixed for redemption—Option to purchase—Conditional sale.

In this case it was held that it was competent for mortgagees and mortgagor to enter into an arrangement with respect to the equity of redemption. Here there was a condition which had to be satisfied, if at all, before the right of redemption arose at law. The effect of the satisfaction of that condition was that there never was any right to redeem at law; the transaction was therefore a conditional sale, and no equity of redemption ever came into existence. Unless there was a legal right to redeem, there was no right which equity could extend. If the plts. within five years elected to enter into the partnership, there never would be a mortgage for the purposes of the maxim, “Once a mortgage always a mortgage.” The plts. by electing to enter into partnership had become purchasers, and the question of clogging the equity of redemption did not arise; they were entitled to repayment of the purchase-money and interest, and an inquiry as to damages, and the debt was entitled to an order for reconveyance. *LISLE v. 60. — “Clog” on redemption—“Tied” public-house—Mortgage of leasehold public-house—Covenant by mortgagor to take beer during the term from mortgagee only.

The rules “once a mortgage always a mortgage,” and that the equity of redemption of a mortgage must not be “clogged,” are still in force, and the meaning of them is that a mortgagor on payment of the debt secured by the mortgage is entitled to have the mortgaged property restored to him in its entirety, unfettered, and undiminished in value.

In a mortgage of a leasehold public-house by a licensed victualler to brewers the mortgagor covenanted with the mortgagees that he and all persons deriving title under him should not during the continuance of the term, and whether any money should or should not be owing on the security of the mortgage, use or sell in the house any malt liquors except such as should be purchased of the mortgagees:—

Held, that this covenant was a “clog” on the equity of redemption, and that the plt., on payment of all that was due upon the security, was entitled to have a reconveyance of the property, or at his option a transfer of the security, free in either case from the “tie.”

61. — Consolidation.

By indenture of Aug. 11, 1891, T. mortgaged certain freeholds to B. and H. to secure the repayment of an advance made by them out of moneys belonging to them on a joint account. By indenture of Dec. 6, 1892, T. mortgaged the same freeholds together with some leaseholds to H. alone. T. subsequently died, having appointed executors to whom he devised all his real estate upon certain trusts.

On June 24, 1897, the executors assigned the leaseholds to R., subject to the mortgage of Dec. 6, 1892. Upon a summons by R. to redeem the mortgage of Dec. 6, 1892, H. claimed to be entitled to consolidate with it the prior mortgage to B. and himself:—

Held, that the two mortgages were not united in one and the same hand within the rule as established by Jennings v. Jordan, (1881) 6 App. Cas. 698, and Pledge v. White, [1896] A. C. 187; and that the doctrine of consolidation did not, therefore, apply. RILEY v. HALL

A mortgage of an hotel to a brewer contained a covenant by the mortgagors that during the continuance of the security they would deal exclusively with the mortgagee for all beer and malt liquor sold on the mortgaged premises. The deed also contained the usual provisos for the continuance of the loan for five years. The mortgagors having ceased to purchase beer of the mortgagee, he now moved for an injunction to restrain the breach of this covenant; the mortgagors also claimed to be entitled to redeem before the expiration of the five years:—

Held, by Romer J., that the provisos for the continuance of the loan were valid, and that the mortgagors were not entitled at present to redeem. This decision was not appealed from.

Held, further, by Romer J. and by the C. A., that as the covenant entered into by the parties for the purchase and supply of beer during the continuance of the security was a reasonable one, which did not in any way clog the redemption or give the mortgagee any undue advantage, it ought to be enforced by injunction. *Biggs v. The plt. then foreclosed on the reversion against subsequent incumbrancers, and claimed on paying off the debt's mortgage on the reversion to have the first mortgage against the mills conveyed to him:—

Held, that the plt. had a right on paying off the first mortgage to have both properties conveyed to him, but that he could not tack his charge to the first mortgage on the mills, that the payment so made must be apportioned between the securities according to their value, and that the debt, in turn might redeem the mills on payment of so much of the first charge as was properly apportioned to them. *FLINT v. 75. — Goodwill of business—Public-house—Real Estate Charges Act, 1854 (Locke King's Act, 17 & 18 Vict. c. 113).

On Aug. 12, 1871, a public-house, of which the mortgagor was the owner in fee, subject to a lease for thirty-one years from Dec. 25, 1849, was mortgaged by him to secure 1507l. At this time the mortgagor was, as underlessee, occupying the house, and carrying on there the business of a licensed victualler. The goodwill of the business was not expressly included in the mortgage. On Jan. 24, 1873, the original lease was surrendered to the mortgagor. He continued to carry on the business in the house until his death on Nov. 20, 1873, and the business was afterwards carried on by the tenant for life under his will, until she died in 1897. The house and the goodwill were then sold by the trustee of the will (who had previously paid off the mortgage debt) for 11,550*l.*, of which 2617*l.* was apportioned as the value of the goodwill:—

Held, that, having regard to the existence of the lease, the goodwill did not pass to the mortgagee by the mortgage deed; that it did not accrue to him by the surrender of the lease; and that, as he had never taken possession, he had not acquired the goodwill de facto:

Held, therefore, that the mortgage debt must be borne by the residue of the purchase-money, after deducting the apportioned value of the goodwill.

W., being entitled in reversion to one-eighth of a sum of 8000*l.* bequeathed to trustees, assigned it by way of mortgage to G., with power to give receipts in the name of W. or otherwise, with a proviso for redemption. On the death of the tenant for life of the fund, J., to whom the mortgage had been transferred, claimed to receive from the trustees 1000*l.*, the whole amount of the share, the sum due on the mortgage being only about 400*l.* The trustees of the will, who had received notice of subsequent incumbrances, expressed themselves willing to pay to J. what was due on his mortgage, but declined to pay over to him the whole share. J. took out an originating summons to compel payment:—

Held (reversing the decision of Kekewich J.), that the trustees were not bound to pay over the whole share to J., and that the summons must be dismissed. In re BELL. JEFFERY v. SAYLES

A member of a land society mortgaged his share in the society to the plt. (another member of the same society) by a deed to which the powers conferred by the Conveyancing Act, 1881, Part IV., were incident. The mortgagor died intestate, and there was no legal personal representative of his estate. A sum of money having become due to the mortgagor's estate from the society, the plt., relying upon his power to give a receipt under s. 22, sub-s. 1, of the Act, claimed to have the whole amount paid to him as mortgagee. The trustees, however, not being furnished with an account and having reason to believe it questionable how much was due on the mortgage, offered to pay the plt. so much of the money as upon taking an account should be found due to him, but declined to pay him without such an account.

In an action by the plt. to recover the money from the trustees, it was held by Kekewich J., upon the authority of In re Bell, [1896] 1 Ch. 1, that the trustees were entitled to act as they had done; and, upon their undertaking to pay the money into court under the Trustee Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 53), the action was dismissed.

Upon appeal it was held by the Court that the trustees could not be said to have acted unreasonably; that the decision in In re Bell (of which their Lordships approved) was applicable; and that the judgment of Kekewich J. must be affirmed. HOCKEY v. WESTERN

The only obligation incumbent on a mortgagee selling under and in pursuance of a power of sale in his mortgage is that he should act in good faith. In determining whether the mortgagee's conduct in that respect comes up to the required standard regard must be had to the circumstances of the particular case.

Mortgagees under a mortgage by two tenants in common, one of whom became bankrupt, sold by private contract to the other for a sum equal to the exact amount due in respect of the mortgage for principal, interest and costs, the bulk of the purchase-money being left on the security of the property:—

Held, under the circumstances that the transaction was a proper exercise of the power of sale, and that the sale was valid for all purposes, giving rise to no claim on the part of the bankrupt's estate either against the mortgagees or against the purchaser.

There is no fiduciary relation between tenants in common of real estate as such. Nor can one tenant in common of real estate by leaving the management of the property in the hands of his co-tenant impose upon him an obligation of a fiduciary character.

(B) A solicitor mortgagee cannot, in the absence of express agreement, charge the mortgagor with any profit costs, either in respect of work done in connection with the mortgaged estate as solicitor to the mortgagor, or of collecting, &c., the income for the mortgagor where the mortgage is of a life interest; but semble, a partner of the solicitor mortgagee may receive remuneration for his trouble. A covenant in a mortgage of a life estate to a solicitor mortgagee for payment "of every other sum of money which may hereafter be advanced or paid by the mortgagee to or on account of or become owing to the mortgagee by the mortgagor," does not include profit costs either as solicitor to the mortgagor or as his agent for collecting, &c., the income. For such a covenant is as to profit costs void as clogging the equity of redemption. The Court will allow the mortgagor to surcharge and falsify settled accounts so far as regards such costs, unless the mortgagee can prove that the mortgagor was fully acquainted with his legal rights as to such costs. *EYRE v. In Feb. 1866, the same property was mortgaged to L. to secure 3500*l.* and interest.

In Oct. 1876, a further charge was executed in favour of the first mortgagees to secure 1500*l.* and interest.

A. died in May, 1883, and B. died in Jan. 1889. B., who was a solicitor, acted for all parties on the occasions of the creation of all three securities, and had actual notice of the second mortgage and of the further advance when they were created, but he failed to communicate the fact of the second advance to his co-mortgagees, and they had no personal knowledge of its existence at the date of the further advance:—

Held, that the plts., who were the successors in title as trustees of the first mortgagees, were not entitled to tack the amount due in respect of the further advance to the amount due on the first mortgage so as to postpone the debts, who represented the second mortgagee.

In the case of a mortgage of real estate to joint tenants to secure a debt due to them jointly, it cannot be said as against strangers that any one portion of the security or of the debt belongs to any one of the mortgagees: each is entitled to the whole; and if notice of a second incumbrance is given to any one of them that creates an equity against one in respect of the whole sufficient to prevent any tacking. FREEMAN v. LAING

92. — Transfer of mortgage without notice to mortgagor—Sale of mortgaged property by mortgagor and original mortgagee as unincumbered—Payment of mortgage debt by mortgagor to original mortgagee—Omission to call for title-deeds—Constructive notice of transfer.

The owner of real estate mortgaged it in fee to his solicitor, who shortly afterwards transferred the mortgage to a client, the title-deeds and the mortgage deed, on which the transfer was indorsed, being handed over to the transferee. The transferee omitted to give notice of the transfer to the mortgagor, and he was ignorant of it. Afterwards the property was sold and was conveyed as free from incumbrances by the mortgagor and the original mortgagee to the purchaser by a deed (prepared by the solicitor) which contained false recitals, the mortgage and the transfer of it being suppressed.

The purchase-money was received by the solicitor, who out of it retained the mortgage debt and interest, and paid over the balance to his client, the mortgagor. The purchaser had no notice of the mortgage. The mortgagor did not call for the title-deeds or the mortgage deed when the mortgage was paid off, but left everything to his solicitor, the original mortgagee, and signed what he told him to sign. The solicitor paid the interest on the mortgage debt to the transferee until he absconded, when the fraud was discovered. The purchaser then claimed to hold the property free from the mortgage:—

Held, by Cozens-Hardy J., that, as the mortgagor had been a party to the false recitals in the conveyance to the purchaser, and had not called for the title-deeds when the mortgage debt was retained by the solicitor out of the purchase-money, he could not claim as against the transferee the benefit of the ordinary rule that payments made by a mortgagor to a mortgagee without notice of a transfer are good as against the transferee; and that the purchaser had no better equity against the transferee.

Semble, the negligence of a mortgagor, who is entitled on payment off of the mortgage to have the mortgage deed and the title-deeds delivered to him and who omits to ask for them, is greater than the negligence of a transferee of the mortgage who omits to give notice of the transfer to the mortgagor.

Held, by the C. A., that, inasmuch as the evidence shewed the mortgagor had placed himself entirely in the hands of his solicitor, and constituted him his general agent in the transactions, the knowledge of the solicitor must be imputed to him, and he must be treated as having had notice of the transfer of the mortgage; and consequently the payment of the mortgage debt to the solicitor was not effectual as against the transferee, and the mortgage must be treated as still subsisting in her favour, and the purchaser must hold the property subject to it, but with a right to be indemnified against it by the mortgagor. *DIXON v. 4. — Playing music or singing after request to desist—By-law—Reasonableness—Power to review where there is no appeal from the Divisional Courts.

In determining the validity of by-laws made by public representative bodies, such as county councils, the Court ought to be slow to hold that a by-law is void for unreasonableness. A by-law so made ought to be supported unless it is manifestly partial and unequal in its operation between different classes, or unjust, or made in bad faith, or clearly involving an unjustifiable interference with the liberty of those subject to it.

A county council, claiming to act under their statutory powers, made a by-law prohibiting any person from playing music or singing in any public place or highway within fifty yards of any dwelling-house after being requested by any constable, or an inmate of such house, or his or her servant, to desist:—

2. — Dolus malus—Priority of unregistered transfer—Registered transfer set aside.

In a suit against the executor dative of a deceased registered owner of lands in Natal and his transferee to set aside the transfer, it appeared that the plt. had taken a transfer from the owner in his lifetime, paid the purchase money, and received the title-deeds, but had omitted to complete registration, though he had placed a resident agent in possession and management. It also appeared that the defendants had obtained orders from the Court for delivery of certified copies of such title-deeds as having been lost, and for sale by the executor dative by private contract, concealing the fact that the occupier of the lands held under an alleged lawful possession which might possibly be accompanied by possession of the title-deeds, and thereafter effected and registered their transfer:—

Held, that this constituted dolus malus within the meaning of Roman-Dutch law; that the said transfer must be set aside; and that the plt. had a locus standi to maintain the suit. Crowly v. BERGTHEIL

3. — Gaming—Syndicate for speculation in shares—Power of manager.

The law of Natal does not render it illegal for any person or association to buy and sell shares as a speculation.

A was a member of a syndicate formed to buy and sell shares as a speculation. The syndicate bought and sold from and to other associations, of which A. was not a member, but some of his associates were:—

Held, that such dealings were not necessarily beyond the authority of the manager; which authority, under the circumstances, was not limited to operations in the open market. LAUGHTON v. GRIFFIN

4. — Practice—Appeal—Company—Construction of articles of association—Power of chairman to refuse adjournment of a meeting—Special leave to appeal given at the hearing.

At the hearing of an appeal it appeared doubtful whether the order appealed against was a final judgment or had the effect of a definitive sentence; but it also appeared that the questions in controversy on the face of the pleadings were of much importance, and that a determination of them might put an end to further litigation. Accordingly special leave to appeal was granted.

An article of association provided that "the chairman may with the consent of the members present at any meeting adjourn the same, &c.":—

Held, that upon the true construction thereof,

the chairman is not bound to adjourn a meeting, even though a majority of those present desire the adjournment: and that he can, after rejecting a motion for adjournment, declare a provisional agreement specified in the circular convening the meeting to be confirmed.

No appeal lies from the decision of the town council. 6. — Practice — Verdict — Jurisdiction of Court as to setting aside—Law of Natal.

The law of Natal does not authorize judges to set aside a verdict as if they were a court of appeal upon questions of fact.

Held, that by the law of Natal the verdict could not be set aside unless it were one which the jury could not reasonably find. PEARSE v. SCHWEDER & Co. P. C. [1897] A. C. 520

By s. 7 of Natal Law No. 22 of 1863, passed to prevent community of goods attaching to certain marriages, persons married in South Africa can bring themselves under its provisions by a registered written instrument to that effect:—

Held, that, by the true construction of that section, if the instrument is unregistered it is inoperative for all purposes and as between the parties.

testator, and so soon after the death of the testatrix as may be to pay the legacies directed by her:—

Held, that by the true construction of the will the testator's legacies were payable at his death. The intention to dispose of everything was apparent, and the words did not necessitate the suspension of payment of testator's legacies with consequent intestacy as to the resulting income. TAYLOR v. By reason of the conversion into 2½ per cent. Consols, the income became insufficient:—

The deft. chartered for a single voyage a vessel which was at the time at sea and in ballast. The charterparty declared that she was in every way fit for the service, and provided that she should be so maintained by the owners. On the afternoon of April 5 the vessel was put at the deft.'s disposal in dock, and two hours afterwards the loading began, the deft. having contracted with a stevedore for the purpose who had engaged the plt. amongst others to carry out the work. Fifteen minutes later the plt., in the course of his work, had to descend a ladder leading into the hold. It came adrift, and the plt. fell, sustaining injuries for which he sued the deft. :—

Held, that the deft. was liable to the plt., since it was his duty under the circumstances to make some inspection of the vessel before allowing the stevedore and his men to go on board her, and since the slightest inspection would have revealed the defective state of the ladder. *MARNEY v. A district council, acting under the Public Health Act, 1875, s. 150, employed a contractor to make up a highway, which was used by the public, but had not become repairable by the inhabitants at large. In carrying out the work the contractor negligently left on the road a heap of soil, unlighted and unprotected. A person walking along the road after dark fell over the heap and was injured. In an action against the district council and the contractor to recover damages for the injuries sustained:—

Held, that as, from the nature of the work, danger was likely to arise to the public using the road, unless precautions were taken, the negligence of the contractor was not casual, or collateral to his employment, and the district council were liable.

Where two debts are sued, and put in separate defences, and one of them has paid money into court exceeding the amount ultimately recovered in the action, the other debt cannot avail himself of the payment into court by his co-deft. as a satisfaction of the cause of action against himself, and, on the failure of his defence, the plt. is entitled to have judgment entered against him for costs.

The plts., a limited co., were possessed of certain debentures, issued by an English co. in England and payable to bearer, which by reason of the conditions indorsed thereon were not promissory notes. These debentures were kept in a safe, the key of which was entrusted to the plts.' secretary. The secretary, in fraud of the plts., took the debentures from the safe and pledged them with the defts. for advances made to him by them. The defts. received the debentures in good faith. It was proved that the usage in the mercantile world and on the Stock Exchange for many years had been to treat such debentures as negotiable instruments transferable by mere delivery:—

Under the New South Wales Bankruptcy Acts, 1887–8, an act of bankruptcy may be constituted by non-compliance with a bankruptcy notice under s. 4, sub-s. 2, of the principal Act. Ample discretion is vested in the judge to grant or refuse a sequestration order founded on the notice, and if granted to discharge or annul it. But no jurisdiction is given by the Acts to annul an act of bankruptcy or declare that it never was committed; and cannot be given by a rule of procedure framed under s. 119, which on its true construction does not authorize a rule purporting to create a jurisdiction in excess of that conferred by the Act.

The “full written judgment” of the registrar whose order refused the respondent's petition of sequestration against the appellant was rightly held to be inadmissible in evidence in an action against the respondent for having maliciously presented his petition. The respondent was bound by the registrar's discretion as to making or refusing the order, not by his opinion upon points which he had no jurisdiction to determine.

Ex parte Vitoria, [1894] 2 Q. B. 387, approved.

It is neither fraud nor an abuse of process to petition for a sequestration order with an indirect motive, that is, for a purpose other than the equal distribution of the testator's assets, as, for example, to exclude the appellant from a partnership; secus if such order would in the circumstances be unsuitable, and enable the petitioner fraudulently to defeat the rights of others whether legal or equitable.

Although New South Wales “Civil Service Act, 1884,” deprives the Crown of its right to dismiss its civil servants summarily without following the procedure prescribed therein, yet it does not take away the right of the Crown to abolish a civil office:—

Held, that the holder of an abolished office,

unless entitled to a superannuation allowance under the Act of 1884, is not by the true construction of ss. 10 and 46 entitled as for breach of contract to any other compensation. It is at the option of the Government whether he should be offered an equivalent office. YOUNG v. WALLER.

Retrospective effect ought not to be given to a statute unless an intention to that effect is expressed in plain and unambiguous language.

Midland Ry. Co. v. Pye, (1861) 10 C. B. (N.S.) 191, approved:—

Held, that the New South Wales Act (59 Vict. c. 25), s. 58, which enacts that "Nothing in this Act or in the Civil Service Act of 1884 shall be construed or held to abrogate and restrict the right of the Crown as it existed before the passing of the said Civil Service Act to dispense with the services of any person employed in the public service," is not retrospective in its operation:

Held, that the respondent, who had been dismissed from the public service before the said Act came into operation, but not in manner prescribed by the Act of 1884, was not affected by the provisions of the later Act, which only apply to persons actually employed in the public service at and after the date thereof. *YOUNG v. ## 5. — Civil servants of the Crown—Power to dismiss at pleasure—Law of New South Wales—Civil Service Act, 1884 (48 Vict. No. XXIV.).

The Crown has by law, whether in England or New South Wales, power to dismiss at pleasure either its civil or military officer, on condition to that effect being an implied term of the contract of service except where it is otherwise expressly provided:—

But held, that certain provisions of the New South Wales Civil Service Act of 1884, being manifestly intended for the protection and benefit of the officer, are inconsistent with such a condition, and consequently restrict the power of the Crown in that respect. GOULD v. STUART.

6. — Company — Arbitration — Reference of suit.

The arbitration provisions in the Companies Act (37 Vict. No. 19) only apply to voluntary arbitrations to which the co. has submitted under its common seal, and not to references by order of a judge under s. 12 of the Arbitration Act, 1892 (55 Vict. No. 32).

Accordingly, an arbitrator under the latter Act need not make the declaration before a justice prescribed by s. 113 of the former Act. ZELMA GOLD MINING Co. v. HOSKINS.

A co. does not by its adoption of a contract of purchase made before its formation by persons purporting to act on its behalf incur any contractual relation with or obligation to the vendor.

But where a co. on completion of conveyances to it by the vendor gave credit to him for moneys placed in his hands as promoter on the terms of the co.'s prospectus by intending shareholders and specifically appropriated by them in payment pro tanto for their shares, registered the shares in their names, and at the same time obtained credit in respect of the payment from the vendor on account of the purchase-money:—

Held, that this was a payment in cash to the company in respect of those shares within the meaning of s. 57 of the New South Wales Companies Act, 1874, which is substantially identical with s. 25 of the Imperial Companies Act, 1867. NORTH SYDNEY INVESTMENT AND TRAMWAYS Co. v. HIGGINS.

Where the members of a syndicate resolved to form a co., distributing the shares therein rateably amongst themselves according to the extent of their interests in the syndicate property, the same to be deemed in great part paid up, and a deed of sale of their property was executed by their trustees to a trustee for the company, afterwards filed with the registrar and adopted by the directors, which embodied the above resolution:—

Held, that the deed of sale was not a contract within the meaning of s. 57 of the Colonial Act of 1874, corresponding with s. 25 of the English Companies Act of 1867, so as to protect the shares from liability to calls in respect of the amounts which were to be deemed as paid up. It did not effect a genuine transfer of property in respect of which shares deemed to be paid up formed part of the consideration; nor were any legal rights or liabilities created thereby.

In a suit by the plt. to declare the agreement of indemnity discharged, and to restrain the deft. from continuing his action thereon :—

Held, that in the absence of a contract to discharge it, the deft. could not be estopped from enforcing it by any representation, express or implied, of his intention to abandon it. To raise an equity on behalf of the plt. there must have been misrepresentation of existing facts.

Held, that the first direction was right, and that the master need not inquire into the length of the consultations and the importance of the occasions on which they were held, but that the second direction was erroneous, for that the case of each witness properly called should be considered, and a reasonable allowance made having regard to the character of his evidence and the probability of his having to be recalled. COMM. [The conditional purchase clauses of 25 Vict. No. 1, on which this decision rested, were in effect superseded by 39 Vict. No. 13.]

(B) Where the appellant effected a conditional purchase under s. 22 of the Crown Lands Alienation Act, 1861, of land adjoining to Crown land which had been previously granted to him in fee simple under s. 25 :—

Held, that he did not become thereby a holder of an original conditional purchase within the meaning of s. 42 of 48 Vict. No. 18, so as to obtain the right to make additional conditional purchases under that section :

Held, further, that even if s. 22 of the repealed Act of 1861 did confer upon him as the fee-simple holder of land the right claimed, s. 2, sub-s. (b), of the later Act was inoperative to preserve such right. ABBOTT v. MINISTER FOR LANDS

A grant to a tenant on the expiry of his lease of a preferential occupation licence in regard to his holding does not under the Crown Lands Acts change its character to that of a resumed area. Nor does a Gazette announcement of such licence operate as a notice that the area affected has been resumed:—

Held, accordingly, that the appellant had no title to apply before notification under s. 5 for a conditional lease of land held under a licence; and that s. 11 of the same Act (which only saves existing rights) did not avail him. COLLESS v. MINISTER FOR LANDS

20. — Equitable jurisdiction—Underground trespass—Fraud—Statute of Limitations—Champerly—Laches.

Although courts of equity are not within the words of the Statute of Limitations, yet they are within its spirit and meaning, and have uniformly adopted its rules.

Where the appellants had furtively for a series of years taken the respondents' coal by means of a wilful and secret underground trespass; and no laches was attributable to the respondents in not discovering the existence of the wrongful workings by the appellants:—

Held, on a summons issued by the latter in the winding-up of the appellant company, that they were entitled to recover from the appellants the market value of all the coal worked and gotten by them from the respondents' land, no allowance being made for the cost of working.

To such a claim the Statute of Limitations has no application. So long as there has been no laches by the party defrauded, it is immaterial whether or not there have been on the part of the wrongdoer active measures to prevent detection:—

Held, that an agreement between the respondents and their lessees (under a lease executed before discovery of the trespass) by which the former were indemnified against costs of suit on terms of paying to their lessees 92½ per cent. of the amount recovered was not champertous.

By s. 7 of Act 11 Vict. No. 4, a sale of wool under a lien "with a view to defraud," without the written consent of the lienor is made a punishable offence; a like sale of stock is made so independently of a like intent.

In an action for malicious prosecution thereunder, it appeared that the plt. had sold stock of which the deft. bank was lienor without intent to defraud, and with the bank's oral consent:—

Held, that on the true construction of the above section, an intent to defraud was not an element of the statutory offence charged, that this was matter for decision by the judge, and that a verdict must be entered for the deft.

An intention to offend against the penal provisions of an act constitutes mens rea; and was proved by the plt.'s knowledge that there was no written consent. BANK OF NEW SOUTH WALES v. PIPER 41. — Real Property Acts—Registered Mortgage—Sale by auction—Notice—7 Vict. No. 16, ss. 11, 22—22 Vict. No. 1, s. 18.

A. sold certain lots of an estate by auction to B., and subsequently mortgaged the whole estate to C., who knew that certain unspecified portions of the estate had been sold:—

Held, that according to the Colonial Acts (7 Vict. No. 16, ss. 11, 22, and 22 Vict. No. 1, s. 18) C. gained no priority from registration, but took subject to B.'s purchase. SYDNEY AND SUBURBAN MUTUAL BUILDING AND LAND INVESTMENT ASSOCIATION v. LYONS.

Where income was in part derived from the extraction of ore from the soil of New South Wales Colony, and from the conversion in the latter Colony of the crude ore into a merchantable product:—

to furnish to the shipowners a correct account and particulars of the value of the goods delivered, in order that the amount of average contribution to which they were liable might be ascertained and adjusted "in the usual manner":—

Held, that these words did not imply as a condition of the obligation that the shipowners should employ an average stater at the port of discharge.

Simonds v. White, (1824) 2 B. & C. 805, explained.

A shipowner may make out his own average statement, and is not bound to employ an average stater either at the port of discharge or elsewhere. WAVERTREE SAILING SHIP CO. v. LOVE.

45. — Stamp duties—Probate—Locality of debt.

In order that an asset may be liable to probate duty under the Stamp Duties Acts (44 Vict. No. 3, 50 Vict. No. 10) it must be such as the grant of probate confers the right to administer, and therefore one which exists within the local area of the Colonial jurisdiction. A simple contract debt is within the local area of the jurisdiction within which the debtor for the time being resides; a specialty debt is within the local area in which it is found at the creditor's death. *COMMISSIONERS OF STAMPS v. Held, that diverting a street into a tramway is not a taking of property within the meaning of the New South Wales Public Works Act:

Held, further, that the Sydney Corporation Act of 1879, which vests public ways in the municipal council, does not so vest them in proprietary right, which alone gives claim for compensation, but only for purposes incidental to the exercise of municipal authority. *SYDNEY MUNICIPAL COUNCIL v. Held, that the word had become publici juris and was no longer registrable, and that as the B. Co., though they had applied the word to their own manufacture, had not tried to pass it off as that of the A. Co. by the use of packets, &c., calculated to deceive, but had stated the name of the maker, &c., the B. Co. could not be restrained from using the word. *NATIONAL STARCH MANUFACTURING CO. v. Held, that the term being one of ordinary and not exclusive description, and being applicable to the def't.'s goods as well as the plt.'s, and the def't.'s user thereof not having been proved to have had or to be calculated to have the above effect, the suit must be dismissed with damages resulting from the grant of an interim injunction.

Held, that the covenant must be construed as qualified and controlled by the declaration. Accordingly, it did not run with the reversion; and, not being incident to the relation of landlord and tenant, liability for breach thereof properly fell to be borne by the general estate of the deceased lessor.

Even if, as held by the Court below, it was unqualified and ran with the reversion, it was not a charge thereon. As between the specific devisees of the reversion and the general estate, the latter should primarily bear a liability which in its nature is not incident to the relation of landlord and tenant, but was incurred preparatory thereto. *ECCLES v. The presumption is that a subsequent general enactment is not intended to interfere with a special enactment, unless the intention so to do is very clearly manifested:—

Held, that current proceedings in the Native Land Court under a specially enabling Act called the New Zealand Poututu Jurisdiction Act, 1889, were not stayed by the commencement of proceedings in the Validation Court; notwithstanding the general provision contained in the Act establishing the latter Court to the effect that commencement of proceedings therein shall operate as a stay of proceedings in any other Court in respect of the same matters:

Held, also, that the jurisdiction to rehear—that is to entertain an appeal—given by the Native Land Courts Acts of 1886 and 1888 is not confined to cases where the title to particular land has been the only question decided by the Court of First Instance; but extends to cases where the decision is embodied in the same decree with other matters not of an appealable nature.

Under the special Poututu Act orders as to title to land are also appealable in the same way; and held accordingly that the appellant was entitled thereunder to a rehearing of judgments concerning the title to Poututu lands, and that the Native Land Court had jurisdiction to grant such rehearing, proceedings therein not being stayed by the respondents' commencement of proceedings in the Validation Court. *BARKER v. Under New Zealand Railways Construction and Land Act, 1881, ss. 125 and 126, the Governor of the Colony, having taken possession of a railway under s. 123, is empowered on the happening of events in the later section specified to declare his intention to retain the ry. as Government property:—

Held, that on publishing an Order in Council giving effect to such intention, his title to the ry. is absolute and paramount, and that the rights of debenture-holders whose debentures were authorized by a later Act in 1884 to be a first charge on the ry. fall with the co.'s title. *COATES v. Newfoundland Act 58 Vict. c. 3, passed for the winding-up and liquidation of a bank, provided that priority be given to all debts and claims due to the Crown or to the Government or revenues of the Colony:—

Held, that balances in the books of the bank to the credit of the various boards of education in the Colony were not such debts and claims as aforesaid. It appeared that the boards were not constituted by the Education Acts of 1892 and 1893 mere agents of the Government, but had a discretionary power, independent of the Government, in expending such balances. *FOX v. ## NUISANCES.

Public Health (London) Act, 1891, Amendment Act, 1893 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), amends and consolidates the laws relating to Public Health in London.

Public Health (London) Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 47), amends the Public Health (London) Act, 1891.

1. — Abatement after notice and request.

Refusal to grant a mandatory injunction to remove an inhabited house which obstructs a private right of way does not necessarily deprive the persons entitled to the right of way of the right after proper notice and request to pull the house down.

Where a building alleged to be obstructive was in the hands of a receiver appointed by the Court, leave was given to persons complaining of the obstruction to exercise their common law rights of abatement with a view to testing the justice of their claim. LANE v. CAPSEY

Chitty J. [1891] 3 Ch. 411

2. — Abatement notice—Service of on person not liable—Work done in obedience to notice—Recovery of expense from person liable—Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 4, sub-ss. 1, 4; s. 11, sub-s. 1.

The drainage of two adjoining houses situate in the metropolis being so defective as to be a nuisance, the sanitary authority served a notice under s. 4, sub-s. 1, of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, upon the owner of the houses requiring him to abate the nuisance. The drainage of the houses was carried away by means of a single pipe, and the owner, being under the belief that this combined system of drainage had been authorized by an order of the sanitary authority, and that the liability to repair the pipe consequently lay upon him under the provisions of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, executed the works prescribed by the notice. In fact, the combined plan of drainage had not been authorized by any such order, and the liability to repair the pipe was by that Act imposed upon the sanitary authority. On discovery of the mistake he sought to recover from the sanitary authority the expense he had incurred:—

Held, (1.) that as non-compliance with the notice would have rendered him primâ facie liable to a penalty under s. 4, sub-s. 4, of the Act of 1891, he was practically compelled to do the work, and that he could consequently recover the expense as money paid at the sanitary authority's request; (2.) that the "expenses of carrying the order into effect" mentioned in s. 11 include the expenses of doing work in obedience to an abatement notice, and that consequently the owner, whether he was compelled to do the work or not, could under that section recover the expense from the sanitary authority as the persons by whose default the nuisance was caused.

3. — Abatement without notice of overhanging tree.

The owner of land which is overhung by trees growing on his neighbour's land is entitled without notice, if he does not trespass on his neighbour's land, to cut the branches so far as they overhang—and however long they have overhung—his land. LEMMON v. WEBB

4. — Adjoining premises — Alterations — Reasonable use of a building—Injunction.

In considering cases of nuisance between owners of adjoining houses the Court will have regard to the question whether the person alleged to have created the nuisance is making a reasonable use of his property.

Observations of Kekewich J. in Reinhardt v. Mentasti, (1899) 42 Ch. D. 685, 690, questioned. SANDERS-OLARK v. GROSVENOR MANSIONS CO.

5. — Cesser before trial—Liberty to apply—Injunction—Noise—Remedies.

Action for an injunction to restrain a nuisance by noise caused by the defts. in carrying on their dairy business and for damages. The noise was caused by the delivery of the churns, washing them, sending out the milk on perambulators, and in other ways:—

Held, that though there was at one time a serious noise and annoyance, which was unavoidable unless the business was managed with very special care, and in fact carried on in a manner different to that of every other branch, yet as the time of the trial approached the business had in fact been carried on so as no longer to cause a nuisance. The plt. therefore had a good cause of action when he instituted the proceedings; but as the nuisance had now ceased, it would be contrary to the practice of the Court to grant an injunction, or even to give liberty to apply: Carr & Co. v. Bath Gas Light and Coke Co. [Unreported. See next Case.] If the nuisance recommenced, the plt. could start a fresh action. There would, therefore, be no injunction, but the plt. would recover 40s. damages and costs. DUNNING v. GROSVENOR DAIRIES, LD.

Joyce J. [1900] W. N. 265

6. — Cesser before trial—Practice—Injunction—Pollution of river.

Action for an injunction to restrain the defts. from polluting the river Avon by the discharge of their residual products and for damages. The

defts. denied the nuisance. Between the issue of the writ and the trial the defts. ceased to discharge their residual products into the river, so that, unless their servants were guilty of carelessness or laziness and threw the products into the river, the nuisance could not recur:—

Held, that though the plts. had a good cause of action at the date of the writ, they had no longer any such cause of action. They might take an inquiry as to damages at their own risk, but liberty to apply would not be reserved. The continuous cause of the nuisance had disappeared, and, if anything was attributable to the acts of the defts.' servants, those acts would be isolated and contrary to the orders of the defts. An injunction was, therefore, out of the question, and it would not be in accordance with the practice of the Court to reserve liberty to apply. The plts. would have their costs. *CARR & Co. v. 7. — Electrical disturbance in wires of telephone company by operations of electric tramway.

A tramway co. acting under a provisional order of the Bd. of Trade conferred by Act of Parliament, and using the best known system of electrical traction, caused electrical disturbance in the wires of a telephone co. acting under licence from the Postmaster-General:—

Held, that the tramway co. were not liable for nuisance caused by exercise of their statutory authority to use electricity. NATIONAL TELEPHONE CO. v. BAKER Kekewich J. [1893] 2 Ch. 186

8. — Electricity.

A person who without statutory authority creates on his own land an electric current for his own purposes and discharges it into the earth beyond his control is responsible for damage caused by the current to the same extent as if he had so discharged a stream of water brought by him on his land. NATIONAL TELEPHONE CO. v. BAKER — Kekewich J. [1893] 2 Ch. 186

9. — Electric lighting—Injunction—Statutory powers—Electric lighting—Vibration—Right of reversioner to sue.

In a case of continuing actionable nuisance, the jurisdiction of the Court to award damages, instead of an injunction, ought only to be exercised under very exceptional circumstances:—

Per A. L. Smith L.J., damages may be given instead of an injunction, when the following requirements are all found in conjunction, viz., where the injury to the plt.'s rights is—(i.) small; (ii.) capable of being estimated in money;

NUISANCES—continued.

(iii.) capable of being adequately compensated by a small sum; (iv.) when an injunction would be oppressive. SHELTER v. CITY OF LONDON ELECTRIC LIGHTING CO. MEUX'S BREWERY CO. v. THE SAME (No. 1) — C. A. [1895] 1 Ch. 287; [1895] 2 Ch. 388

10. — Fence adjoining highway—Defective condition—Injury to child using highway—Proximate cause of injury—Liability of owner of fence.

The deft. was the owner of a fence abutting on a highway. The plt., a child of four years of age, attracted by some boys at play on the other side of the fence, put his foot on it, and it fell on and injured him. In an action for damages for the injuries so sustained, the jury found that the fence was very defective, but actually fell through the plt. standing wholly or partly on it, though not for the purpose of climbing over it:—

Held, that the defective fence being a nuisance, and the cause of the injuries to the plt., the deft. was liable. HAROLD v. WATNEY

11. — Hospital—Small-pox hospital—Injunction—Anticipated Nuisance—Quia timet action.

Any one seeking an injunction to restrain an alleged future nuisance, public or private, must shew a strong case of probability that the apprehended mischief will in fact arise. Application for an interim injunction to restrain defts. erecting a small-pox hospital, refused, on the ground that there was not sufficient evidence of any probability of danger from the erection of the hospital. *ATT.-GEN. v. A local authority may, under s. 131 of the Act of 1875, erect a hospital outside their district without the consent of the authority of the district in which the hospital is to be erected. A small-pox hospital is not an "other noxious or offensive business" within the meaning of s. 112, so as to require such consent under s. 285 of the Act. *WITHINGTON LOCAL BOARD OF HEALTH v. A tenant from year to year held entitled under s. 11 of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, to recover from the owner the costs and expenses of abating a nuisance arising from a structural defect in house drain, though no notice under s. 4 (3) of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, as to defects of a structural character had been

15. — Local authority, Action by—Right to sue if summary proceedings inadequate—Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 107.

The Public Health Act, 1875, enacts in s. 107 that any local authority may, if in their opinion summary proceedings would afford an inadequate remedy, "cause any proceedings to be taken" against any person in any superior court of law or equity to enforce the abatement or prohibition of any nuisance:—

Held, that such proceedings must be ordinary proceedings known to the law, and that, in the absence of special damage, a local authority cannot sue in respect of a public nuisance except by action in the nature of an information with the sanction of the Attorney-General.

18. — Milk—Non-removal of—Nuisances and sanitation—"Building"—Dairies, Cowsheds, and Milk Shops Order, 1885.

No. 29 of the Regulations of the London County Council as to Dairies, Cowsheds, and Milk Shops provides that every purveyor of milk shall, on any outbreak of infectious disease within the building or upon the premises in which he keeps milk coming to his knowledge, remove all milk for sale from such building until it has been disinfected.

The respondent, a purveyor of milk, was tenant of a three-storied building, each floor of which was adapted for separate occupation, but with a central staircase common to each. He occupied the ground-floor for the purpose of his business, sub-let the first floor, and occupied the second floor as a residence for himself and his family. One of his children had scarlet fever in a room on the second floor:—

Held, that this was an outbreak of infectious disease within the building in which the respondent kept milk, and, therefore, that the non-removal from the ground-floor of milk for sale there was an infringement by him of the above regulation. LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. EDWARDS at Southfields, and the nuisance complained of was alleged to arise from noxious gases emanating from the defts'. works. The Court found that the defts. were carrying on their trade in a reasonable manner, and took precautions to prevent it from causing a nuisance to their neighbours.

Kekewich J., in granting an injunction, said that his judgment in Reinhardt v. Mentasti, (1889) 42 Ch. D. 685, had been much misunderstood. He thought there that when once the Court was satisfied that the deft. was creating a nuisance, the fact that he was doing what was reasonable from his own point of view was no defence. In Sanders-Clark v. Grosvenor Mansions Co., [1900] 2 Ch. 373, Buckley J. appeared to think that the view taken by him in Reinhardt v. Mentasti differed from the view of Lord Selborne L.C. in Ball v. Ray, (1873) L. R. 8 Ch. 467. Nothing could have been further from his intention. Reinhardt v. Mentasti had also been criticised in Garratt on Nuisances as departing from Bamford v. Turnley, (1860) 3 B. & S. 62; but he thought that it was entirely in accordance with the principles there laid down. The question might be put in this way: Could a man reasonably commit a nuisance? He thought that the answer to be gathered from Bamford v. Turnley was that he could not. If he was committing a nuisance he could not be said to be acting reasonably. In this case the defts. had taken precautions to prevent their trade from being a nuisance to their neighbours, and from their own point of view they were acting reasonably; but from the point of view above stated they were not acting reasonably, since upon the evidence they were committing a nuisance.

Sec. 4 of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, applies only to the classes of nuisances enumerated in s. 2, and not to the nuisances arising from offensive trades dealt with by s. 21. A service of a notice requiring the abatement of a nuisance is not a condition precedent to the jurisdiction of a magistrate to hear a complaint as to a nuisance arising from an offensive trade. *BIRD v. Where the lessee of premises not let at a rack-rent has sub-let them for his whole term less a few days, the rent reserved and the covenants being the same as in the original lease, the sub-lessee and not the lessee is the “owner” of the premises within s. 141 of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891. *TRUMAN, HANBURY, BUXTON & CO. v. A summons to answer a complaint by a sanitary authority to a petty sessional court under s. 4 (2) of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891 alleging the existence of a nuisance on premises, is good in form though it is addressed to “the owner” of the premises (describing them) merely without further name or description. Sec. 4 (1) of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, must be read with the proviso in s. 4 (3) (b). Held, reversing the decision of the Ct. of Sess., (1896) 23 R. 340, that a legal nuisance had been committed which was not sanctioned by either the special or the general Tramways Acts, and that the default, if any, of the town council did not affect the primary liability of the tramway co. *OGSTON v. Plt. and defts. occupied adjoining fields separated by a fence and ditch the property of the defts.: the fence was next to defts.' field: near the fence there was a yew tree, the branches of which projected over the ditch, but no part of them extended over the plt.'s field. The defts. were under no liability to fence against the plt.'s cattle. The plt.'s cattle ate of the branches extending over the ditch and died:—

Held, that the defts. were not liable, because there was no duty on the defts. to prevent the plt.'s cattle having access to the yew branches. PONTING v. NOAKES Div. Ct. [1894] 2 Q. B. 281

The deft. was the owner and occupier of a vacant piece of land in the metropolis. He had surrounded it by a hoarding, but people threw filth and refuse over, and broke up the hoarding, so that the condition of the land and the use to which it was put constituted a continuing public nuisance. In an action by the Att.-Gen. at the relation of the vestry of the parish:—

Held, that it was a common law duty of the owner of the piece of land to prevent it from being so used as to be a public nuisance; and that the Att.-Gen. was entitled to an injunction to enforce the performance of that duty. ATT.-GEN. v. TOD HEATLEY C. A. [1897] 1 Ch. 560 owner of the premises under the said Acts requiring him to abate the nuisance, and in default to take proceedings. The inspector, in pursuance of such direction, served the required notice, and, upon the owner failing to comply with it, laid an information against him for penalties under the said Acts, and a summons was issued. After the issue of the summons and before the hearing of the information, the vestry by resolution approved the acts of the committee in causing the notice to be served and the information to be laid:—

Held, that the approval of the vestry, although given after the service of the notice and the issue of the summons, was sufficient, and that the owner was liable to be convicted. FIRTH v. STAINES Div. Ct. [1897] 2 Q. B. 70

Lands in the parish of St. Pancras were purchased as a burial ground for the parish of Bloomsbury under 9 Anne, c. 22, and 10 Anne, c. 11, and on consecration became part of the latter parish. By Order in Council burials were discontinued in the burial ground, and the parish of St. Pancras applied to the county council, under s. 57 of the Local Government Act, 1888, for an order retransferring the burial ground to St. Pancras. The council gave notice of their intention to hold an inquiry. The parish of Bloomsbury applied for a prohibition:—

Held, that the section gives a county council power to amend any part of a public and general Act, which is of a local and personal nature, that the clauses of the statute of Anne relating to the burial ground were local and personal, and that the council had power to make an order. The Court has no jurisdiction under s. 1 of the Parliamentary Deposits and Bonds Act, 1892, to make an order for the repayment of a deposit made on behalf of a co. until the time limited for the completion of the works has expired, the co.'s compulsory powers for the purchase of lands have expired, and the co. has acquired no lands, given no notices, and raised no capital, and has passed a resolution to abandon the undertaking. Ex parte CHAMBERS North J. A ry. co. had completed and opened for traffic all its undertaking, except a small part, the time for completion of which had expired:—

Held, that notices to landowners only were sufficient before payment out of the deposits. The co. not being insolvent or abandoned, the question of the rights of the creditors of the co. generally did not arise under s. 1, sub-s. 2, of the Act of 1892, and the Court, in the exercise of the discretion given by sub-s. 3, would dispense with notices to them. In re HULL, BARNSELY AND WEST RIDING JUNCTION RY.

An application for the payment out of court of the parliamentary deposit on the abandonment of a tramway was supported by affidavit, but no Bd. of Trade notice under s. 18 of the Tramway Act, 1870, was produced:—

Held, that the notice was the only evidence which the Court ought to receive, unless satisfied beyond all dispute that it could not be produced. In re DUDLEY AND KINGSWINFORD TRAMWAYS

The parliamentary deposit required by the Bd. of Trade in the case of a tramway co. is not part of the general assets of the co.: it is only made assets for the special purpose of paying the creditors of the co.

Where a tramway co. was being wound up, held that the liquidator was not a creditor of the co. nor entitled to receive out of the deposit the general costs of the liquidation or his own remuneration, but only his costs with reference to the application of the deposit. In re COLCHESTER TRAMWAYS CO.

Election Expenses.

9. — Return of election expenses—"Transmit"—Error in return—Penalties—Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 51), ss. 33, 34.

In sub-s. 1 of s. 33 of the Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1883 (which provides that, within thirty-five days after the day on which the candidates returned at an election are declared elected, the election agent of every candidate at that election shall "transmit" to the returning officer a true return respecting his election expenses), the word "transmit" means "send," and, therefore, if the return is posted to the returning officer within the thirty-five days, the sub-section is complied with, although the return does not reach him until after the expiration of that period.

The fact that the return of election expenses transmitted to the returning officer under s. 33 contains an error does not make it a nullity so as to render the candidate liable to the penalties

10. — Amendment—Appeal.

An order of a Div. Ct., consisting of two election judges, rescinding an order amending an election petition, on the ground that the judge who made it, not being on the rota of election judges, had no jurisdiction, is a decision on a point of law within s. 14 of the Judicature Act, 1881, and no appeal lies therefore to the C. A. without the leave of the Div. Ct. SHAW v. RECKITT

11. — Changing place of trial—"Special circumstances"—Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 125), s. 11. sub-s. 11.

There is no jurisdiction under s. 11, sub-s. 11, of the Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868, to order a change in the place of trial of an election petition without special circumstances. The mere fact that a trial could be more cheaply and conveniently held in some place other than the borough or county where the election took place does not amount to "special circumstances."

An election petition, after alleging that the respondent had been guilty of bribery, treating and undue influence, further charged him with the commission of "other corrupt and illegal practices before, during and after the election":—

Held, that it was not competent to the petitioner to include in his particulars, or to give evidence of, offences alleged to have been committed after the date of the petition, the petition not having been amended within the time limited for amendment. *CREMER v. 15. — Particulars—Time for delivery—Election Petition Rules, 1868, r. 6.

Although the general practice may be that particulars under r. 6 of the Election Petition Rules, 1868, should be delivered within seven clear days before the trial of the petition, there is no inflexible rule to that effect. The matter is in the discretion of the Court, and must depend upon the particular circumstances of each case.

17. — Absence—Compulsory absence—Detention in police office—Admission to bail—Subsequent fine—Household franchise.

G. was arrested, during the qualifying year and lodged in the police office, on the charge of being drunk and disorderly in a public street. On the day of his arrest, and after a custody of some hours, he was admitted to bail. He appeared before the magistrates at the Petty Sessions Court on the next day, was convicted and fined 5s. and costs, which he thereupon paid:—

Held, that G.'s detention in the police office did not operate as a break in his inhabitant occupancy of his dwelling-house, and that he was entitled to the franchise. CRIGLINGTON v. GALLAGHER, (1889) 26 L. R. Ir. 134 C. A. (Ir.) [1897] W. N. 106

ness not paid at rising of Court—Detention in waiting room of goal for twenty minutes—Household franchise.

P. M. was fined by the Mayor of Londonderry for being drunk and disorderly, and in default of payment he was sentenced to be imprisoned. The fine was not paid at the rising of the Mayor's Court, and P. M. was taken to the waiting-room of the goal before being placed in a cell. After being in the waiting-room twenty minutes the fine was paid, and he was discharged :—

Held, that P. M., who was otherwise entitled to the franchise, was not disqualified by such detention. McCARRON v. CHAMBERS, (1890) 28 L. R. Ir. 294 C. A. (Ir.) [1897] W. N. 107

19. — Absence—Compulsory absence during part of qualifying year—(a) Imprisonment upon conviction, with option of paying a fine—(b) Remand followed by acquittal—(c) Remand followed by conviction, or admission of guilt, and immediate discharge.

1. D., who was convicted of a criminal offence, and sentenced to fourteen days' imprisonment, with the option of paying a fine, not having availed himself of the alternative, underwent his term in gaol during the qualifying year :—

Held, by the C. A. (affirming the decision of the revising barrister), that he was not entitled to be registered as a voter in respect of the inhabitant household franchise.

2. C., who was charged before justices with a criminal offence, was, during the qualifying year, remanded to gaol for a week in consequence of his refusal to give bail for his reappearance before them at the end of that period. On the expiration of the week he was brought before them again, when the charge against him was dismissed, and he was discharged :—

Held, by Sir Michael Morris C.J. and Barry L.J. (diss. FitzGibbon L.J.), reversing the decision of the revising barrister, that having been ultimately proved innocent, C.'s detention in gaol did not operate as a break in his inhabitant occupancy of his dwelling-house, and that he was entitled to be registered as a voter in respect of the inhabitant household franchise.

3. M. was brought before justices on a criminal charge, and remanded to gaol for two days during the qualifying year. Upon being brought up again on the expiration of the two days he either pleaded guilty or was convicted (it did not clearly appear which), but, in the exercise of the bench's discretion, was discharged :—

Held (affirming the decision of the revising barrister), that, having been lawfully (as his guilt proved) detained in gaol during portion of the qualifying year, there was a break in his inhabitant occupancy of his dwelling-house, and he was not entitled to be registered as a voter in respect of the inhabitant household franchise.

Imprisonment—Confinement to camp for military offence—Household franchise—54 Vict. c. 11.

A sergeant in a militia regiment, ordinarily resident in Londonderry, while on training with his regiment at Buncrana, was sentenced to be a prisoner at large for forty-eight hours on a charge of drunkenness. The effect of the sentence was that he was not allowed outside the camp lines during the period :—

Held, that he was not thereby disqualified as an inhabitant occupier in respect of his residence in Londonderry. O'CONNELL v. HOLLAND, [1900] 2 Ir. R. 448 C. A. (Ir.) [1900] W. N. 224

The claimant was tenant of a house in which his family resided, but by the terms of his employment, as servant at a hotel, the claimant was obliged to remain in the hotel for six days and six nights in each week; the remaining day and night in each week being spent by him in his own house :—

For more than a year previous to July 15, 1896, the appellant was a brother of a hospital at Hull and occupied a room therein, in respect of which he was rated for the relief of the poor, and was in receipt of a weekly allowance of 7s. with medical attendance and coals.

The hospital was founded in 1384 for feeble or old men and women "so long as they are necessitous." The property from which the revenues were derived was granted to the master, brethren, and sisters and their successors for ever, and is still vested in them. By subsequent schemes the brethren and sisters were elected by the corporation of Hull and were removable at their pleasure. This power of removal had, however, never been exercised. The brethren had hitherto voted without objection in parliamentary elections:—

Held, that the appellant was not disqualified from voting by the receipt of alms within the meaning of s. 36 of the Reform Act, 1832. COWEN v. TOWN CLERK OF KINGSTON-UPON-HULL

The statements on the face of a claim to be admitted to the parliamentary franchise must be sufficient to constitute a legal franchise of some defined character, and then, if the facts proved turn out to be insufficient to establish a legal franchise of that character, but one to establish a legal franchise of another character, the claimant may be registered.

If the legal nature of the qualification derived from the premises mentioned in the claim is not sufficiently stated, the claim can be amended; but no qualifying property which is not mentioned can be added.

M. claimed to be registered as an "inhabitant occupier" in respect of the premises 1, Cottage Row, in the borough of Londonderry. The claim described the qualifying premises as "dwelling-house, 1, Cottage Row, in immediate succession from dwelling-house, Corbett Street, Londonderry." It was proved that M. had gone to reside at No. 1 in September, 1885, from No. 8, Cottage Row, which latter premises he had occupied for about three weeks immediately after the house in Corbett Street, where he had resided since before July 25, and that the premises so intermediately occupied had been omitted from the claim, owing to the claimant's considering it unnecessary to enter them:—

Held, affirming the decision of the revising barrister, that the claim was defective in not setting out all the qualifying premises, and that the revising barrister had no power to amend it in this respect.

Held, that the revising barrister had no power to amend the claim, as the qualification for occupation of successive houses was different from that for occupation of a single house; and that it made no difference whether words were sought to be added or struck out, or whether the list of voters or the claim was sought to be amended.

A person who claimed to have his name entered in the list of occupiers of a parliamentary borough inserted in his claim under the head of "Nature of Qualification" the word "dwelling-house," and under that of "Description of Qualifying Property" the words "69 Richmond Road, 3 Hamilton Square." 35. — Amendment—Description of qualification—Power to amend—Representation of the people (I.) Act, 1885 (48 Vict. c. 17), s. 4—Relevancy of evidence adduced with view of amendment—Registration of voters.

The claimant appeared on the register as an inhabitant occupier in respect of a house rated at 10s. He was not entitled to have his name retained upon the register as an inhabitant occupier, but it was proved at the revision that he was further rated at above 10l. for land situate in the same electoral division, and was, in respect thereof, qualified to be registered as a voter for the division. The revising barrister was required, on behalf of the claimant, to amend the qualification stated, and to transfer the claimant's name to the list of rated occupiers. The revising barrister refused to do so, on the ground that the evidence offered at the revision was evidence of a qualification different from that described in the register, and that he had therefore no power to make such amendment and transfer:—

Held, by the C. A., that the revising barrister's decision was right. WILSON v. BUCHANAN, (1886) 20 L. R. Ir. 213 C. A. (Ir.) [1898] W. N. 124

39. — Bankruptcy—Borough vote—Occupation franchise.

A claimant in respect of the occupation of a house as tenant became bankrupt during the qualifying period. The trustee did not interfere with the property, and the landlord continued to accept rent from the bankrupt:—

Held, that he had been in continuous occupation as a tenant within s. 3 of the Representation of the People Act, 1867, and that the fact that s. 20 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, had vested the property in the trustee, did not deprive the bankrupt of his right to vote. MACRAY v. He had been assessed for 2s. 8d. of consolidated parish rates, of which 1s. 6d. was poor-rate, and he had paid 2s. on account, but this payment was not appropriate to poor-rate:—

No one occupied the other room in his absence; he was entitled to use it, and he moved from the one to the other of his own choice. The house steward had a room in the building set apart for him, but usually resided in a separate house in the neighbouring village:—

Held, that the clerk inhabited a "dwelling-house" in the sense of the 3rd section of the Reform Act of 1884, and that the "dwelling-house" was not inhabited by any person under whom he served, and that, therefore, he was entitled to be registered. BALLINGAL v. MENZIES, (1886) 14 R. 127

A cottar, who had built his house himself on a site pointed out by the representative of the proprietor of the ground, but who had no contract with the proprietor and paid no rent, claimed to be enrolled in the roll of voters for the county as an inhabitant occupier as tenant of the house, in virtue of the Representation of the People (Scotland) Act, 1868, s. 3—extended to counties by the Representation of the People Act, 1884, ss. 2 and 7. Under the Crofters Holdings (Scotland) Act, 1886, ss. 9 and 34, the claimant had a right to compensation for permanent improvements, if removed from his holding:—

intestate, leaving his widow and one son (the claimant) sole next of kin. The widow and the claimant continued to live on the farm during the qualifying period. The claimant had been accepted by the landlord as tenant. The revising barrister, on these facts being proved, allowed the case to stand for the attendance of the widow to prove that she had released her claim on the farm. She did not attend, and the revising barrister disallowed the vote, on the ground that the claimant was not in sole occupation:—

Where the claimant, his landlord, and a third person were each occupiers of a separate flat of the house rented by the landlord, and all three used the stairs, hall-door, and yard in common, the revising barrister having decided that the claimant was not an inhabitant occupier, but a lodger:—

Held that, on the facts, the onus lay on the claimant of shewing that he was an inhabitant occupier and not a lodger, and that he had failed to do so.

Held also, that the manner in which other houses in the street were occupied was not material to the question, as each claimant's case must be decided upon its own facts.

Per FitzGibbon L.J., the revising barrister is bound to find the facts: and he having determined as a fact that the claimant occupied part only of a dwelling-house, and not a separate dwelling-house, and there being no conclusive evidence the other way, the Court could not determine, as a matter of law, that the claimant was an inhabitant occupier. *CAMPBELL v. The qualification of two persons on the list of voters for a county was described as "dwelling-house joint." Objection was taken on the ground that such a qualification was expressly forbidden by law. The tenant of a farm died intestate, leaving a son and two daughters his sole next of kin, who resided together on the farm which they worked, and were supported out of the produce. The son obtained in his own name receipts for the rent of the farm. An agreement was given in evidence on behalf of the voter, dated July 13, 1896, by which, after reciting that he had been, with the consent of his sisters, accepted as tenant of the farm, his sisters agreed to abandon all claims they might have, or might have had, as next of kin of their father, or otherwise, on the farm:—

The tenant of a farm died intestate, leaving a widow, a son, and a daughter. The widow sold the farm and purchased another holding, on which she and her son and daughter continued to reside. The widow had some years ago returned her son's name as the tenant, and he was so accepted by the landlord, and had fixed a fair rent in his own name. The mother stated that she had no claim on the farm, but that she was to get her support there:—

53. — Joint or sole occupation — Occupation franchise—Occupation as tenant—Grandfather of claimant dying intestate—Consent of other next of kin—Claimant accepted as tenant.

The claimant's grandfather was tenant of the qualifying premises. He died many years ago. No personal representation to him was taken out, but his two sons (claimant's father and uncle) remained in occupation of the premises, the claimant's father being treated as the tenant by the landlord. On his father's death the claimant was accepted as tenant by the landlord. During the qualifying period the claimant's uncle and the next of kin of the claimant's father all resided together on the premises. It was alleged that the claimant's father made a will, but no probate of same was obtained, nor were letters of administration to his estate taken out. The revising barrister, on these facts being proved, allowed the case to stand for the attendance of the claimant's uncle and his father's other next of kin, to prove that they had released their claims or had assented to any change of tenancy. None of them attended, and no further evidence was given. The revising barrister held that the grandfather died intestate, that the uncle still continued to occupy the premises as one of his next of kin, without having released his claim on the farm. He also held that he had not sufficient legal evidence to enable him to hold that the next of kin of the claimant's father (other than the claimant himself) had released their interest or ceased to occupy the farm as such next of kin jointly with the claimant as joint occupiers:—

Held, that the decision of the revising barrister should be affirmed. ARBUCKLE v. BUCHANAN, [1894] 2 Ir. R. 339

C. A. (Ir.) [1899] W. N. 180

54. — Joint or sole occupation—Onus of proof—Occupation franchise—Father of voter dying intestate—Voter accepted as tenant—Consent of other next of kin.

The father of the voter was the prior tenant of the qualifying premises. He died intestate in 1881, leaving his widow and the voter (his son) his only next of kin him surviving, and in occupation of the qualifying premises. In 1882 the voter fixed by agreement the fair rent of the holding under the Land Law (Ireland) Act, 1881, and was thenceforth treated as tenant by the landlord. The voter stated that he was accepted by the landlord as tenant, with his mother's consent. The mother all along lived on the farm, and was maintained by its produce. She was not examined to prove that she consented to the change in the tenancy, nor was any evidence given that she had surrendered her rights under her husband's intestacy, nor, on the other hand, was evidence produced by the objector to shew that she made any claim upon the farm.

The revising barrister held that the mother had not relinquished her claim on the qualifying premises, that there was in fact a joint beneficial occupation by the voter and his mother, and accordingly struck the voter's name off the register:—

Held (diss. FitzGibbon L.J.), that there was evidence on which the revising barrister might so find, and that his decision should be affirmed. BROWN v. BUCHANAN, [1894] 2 Ir. R. 318

55. — Joint or sole occupation — Qualifying premises devised by tenant to his son subject to right of widow to reside therein—Household franchise—County vote.

The deceased yearly tenant of a house and farm devised his tenancy to his son, giving, by his will, a right to his widow to reside in the house, so long as the son was unmarried. The son was still unmarried, and the widow was still residing in the house. In all other respects the son was qualified as an inhabitant householder in respect of the premises:—

Held (affirming the decision of the revising barrister), that the son was entitled to the franchise.

The mere fact that another person has an incorporeal right to reside in the house does not disqualify for the franchise as inhabitant householder an otherwise qualified tenant of the house. TORISH v. LOVE, [1894] 2 Ir. R. 372

59. — Lodger franchise—Annual value—Appeal—Competency—Question of law—Representation of the People (Scotland) Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 48), ss. 4 and 22.

A sheriff having rejected a claim to be enrolled as a lodger voter, on the ground that the lodgings occupied by the claimant were not of the statutory value of 10*l.*, if let unfurnished, the claimant obtained a case for appeal under s. 22 of the Act. The case stated that the claimant had the exclusive use of one room in a house of two rooms and a kitchen; that the rent of the whole house was 12*l.* 10*s.*; that the claimant paid 8*s.* a week for the room; that in his declaration he declared the annual value of the room, if let unfurnished, to be 10*l.* 8*s.*, this sum being half of the total sum paid by him for the year; that it was usual in Registration Courts to assume, as matter of agreement and for convenience, that half of the rent paid for lodgings was for the use of the bare rooms and half for attendance and use of furniture; but that the sheriff held as matter of fact that the value of the claimant's room, if let unfurnished, was less than 10*l.* yearly.

The following question was stated in the case as the question of law: "Whether, in determining the value of the room, if let unfurnished, the sheriff was right in taking into consideration all the circumstances admitted and proved, or was bound to accept the claimant's declaration in his claim and oath, and the fact that 8*s.* per week was paid for the lodging, as by themselves conclusive?"

The Court dismissed the appeal, holding that the case presented no question of law for judgment. HAMILTON v. FERGUSON, (1897) 25 Rettie, 94 - - - C. A. (Sc.) [1899] W. N. 169

A claimant set forth in his declaration that he had been for the statutory period tenant of a room which was of the clear yearly value, if let unfurnished, of 10*l.* or upwards (the statutory amount). No objection to the claim was lodged, but the sheriff ex proprio motu ascertained from the valuation roll that the house of which the room was a part (and which consisted of three rooms in all) was entered therein at the annual value of 12*l.* 10*s.* He thereupon rejected the claim.

The Court reversed the judgment of the

A claimant for enrolment as a lodger voter in a burgh had, during the statutory twelve months, occupied lodgings in three houses successively, but in his claim the last occupied of these houses only was set forth. The claim having been objected to, the sheriff allowed the claim to be amended by adding to the description of that house a description of the two other houses. The sheriff having admitted the claim, the objector appealed. It appeared from the case that the sheriff was satisfied that the failure to mention the two houses in the claim "arose from a casual error":—

Held, that the sheriff had power to allow the amendment to be made.

poses of revision, be prima facie evidence of his qualification."

A claimant for enrolment as a lodger, who had produced a declaration in statutory form, was cited by an objector to give evidence as to the validity of his claim. The claimant failed to appear at the Registration Court, but counsel for him moved that his claim should be admitted on the ground that his declaration was prima facie evidence of his qualification. The sheriff held that the claimant was bound to appear, but continued the case until an adjourned Court on a day specified, in order to give him an opportunity of appearing, and also intimated that a re-citation was unnecessary, and that the claimant's failure to appear at the adjourned Court, without some very special reason assigned for his non-appearance, would lead to the claim being rejected. The claimant not having appeared at the adjourned diet, and no reason having been assigned for his non-appearance, the sheriff rejected the claim.

Held, that the claim had rightly been rejected.

The Registration Amendment (Scotland) Act, 1885, s. 14, enacted: "In the case of a person claiming to vote as a lodger the declaration annexed to his notice of claim shall, for the purposes of revision, be prima facie evidence of his qualification."

A person claiming the lodger franchise produced at the Registration Court a claim accompanied by the statutory declaration. The claim being objected to, the sheriff-substitute, after a proof, rejected the claim, proceeding upon the sole evidence of the assessor, who deposed that he had been informed by some persons unnamed that during the year preceding the qualifying year the claimant had only occupied exclusively one room which was not of the statutory value, and that he did not know whether he had occupied any other room during the qualifying year.

In an appeal held that the claim fell to be allowed, in respect that the evidence upon which the sheriff-substitute had proceeded was incompetent, and that the statutory presumption in favour of the qualification had not been rebutted.

a notice of claim accompanied by the statutory declaration. The claim was objected to upon the allegation that the claimant had no contract with his father. The objector proposed to prove this by the evidence of the claimant himself, whom he had duly cited to attend. The claimant having failed to attend the diet, the sheriff continued the case to an adjourned diet, to which the claimant was again cited. The claimant again failed to attend, and the objector led no evidence against the claim. The sheriff sustained the claim.

In a special case obtained by the objector, the sheriff stated that he considered himself bound by the case of Dalgleish v. Dodds, (1894) 22 Rettie, 198, to admit the claim, otherwise he would have held the claimant as confessed, and rejected it.

The Court held that the case of Dalgleish v. Dodds did not apply, and (diss. Lord Kincairney) that the sheriff should have given effect to his view of the evidence and refused the claim.

It is essential that every lodger claimant should state in his claim whether he pays rent for his lodgings or not, what is the specific amount of any rent he pays, and to whom he pays it; and, in the event of his occupying lodgings without paying rent, he must specifically shew that he is exonerated by agreement from doing so without their losing the essential character of lodgings.

A claim by a lodger stated the "amount of rent paid" as "10l. and upwards, included in salary," and another like claim by another lodger stated such rent at "10l. and upwards" only. The revising barrister was called upon by the claimants to amend the claims (as having been so filled by "mistake") by inserting specific amounts for the rent payable; but he was of

A clerk who separately occupies a furnished bedroom, of sufficient value, in the house of his employer, but is not bound to do so, and could discharge his duties equally well if he resided elsewhere, is entitled to be registered as a lodger; although, if he ceased to reside in the house, he would receive an increase of salary as an equivalent for the loss of the bedroom, and would be obliged to give up possession of it at once if he ceased to do business for, or was dismissed by, his employer. *PARKER v. Where a person claiming the lodger franchise filled in the column of the claim headed "Amount of rent paid" with the words "Part salary," and at the hearing before the revising barrister gave no evidence, but merely relied on the declaration appended to his claim, and the revising barrister was willing, if it was necessary and he had power to do so, to amend the claim by substituting the words "Estimated value, 10l.," and ultimately admitted the claim:—

Held (reversing the decision below), that the claim was defective in form, and that the proposed amendment would not have cured it. JONES v. BEVERIDGE (KAVANAGH'S CASE), (1886) 20 L. R. Ir. 380

74. — Lodger franchise—Evidence of value—Valuation roll—Declaration as evidence of qualification.

A doctor claimed as a lodger in respect of the occupation of two rooms and a surgery in a house. The rent paid for the furnished lodgings was 8s. a week, amounting to 20l. 16s. per annum. The claimant was objected to on the ground that the annual value of the whole house, as shewn by the valuation roll, was 5l., and that the value of the lodgings, which formed only part of the house, could not therefore be of the clear yearly value, if let unfurnished, of 10l. The sheriff having regard to the rent actually paid, held that the lodgings were of the required value, and admitted the claim.

The Court affirmed the decision, holding that the entry in the valuation roll was only an element in the proof, and that the sheriff was not precluded from forming his own judgment on the value of the rooms occupied by the claimant, and that there was no ground in law for interfering with his decision on what was a question of fact. *KELLIE v. He did not give up the rooms, and was entitled to possession of them during this period. During his absence his landlord, without his knowledge, for thirteen days allowed other persons to occupy the rooms, and charged them for their occupancy. During this period the landlord did not charge B. for the rooms. B. claimed to be registered as a county voter, in respect of occupancy as a lodger during the year from July 31, 1893, to July 31, 1894:—

Held, that B.'s occupancy was not suspended during his temporary absence on account of ill-health, and that his right to the franchise was not affected by the landlord letting the rooms without his knowledge. MALCOLM v. 77. — Lodger franchise—Interrupted residence—Representation of the People (Scotland) Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 48), s. 4.

A shipping clerk claimed to have his name entered on the roll of voters of the burgh of Leith as a lodger. Under contract with his father he had had, during the period required by the Representation of the People (Scotland) Act, 1868, s. 4, sub-s. 2, the exclusive right of occupancy of a room in his father's house in Leith of the value required by the Act, and he had occupied this room from Friday evening until Monday morning of each week. During the rest of the week he generally occupied lodgings in Dundee, where he was employed by Leith ship-owners, who had an agency in Dundee, but he occasionally occupied the room in Leith for a night in the middle of a week. During his absence this room was unoccupied. He was not enrolled, and had not claimed to be enrolled, as a voter in Dundee:—

Held (dub. Lord Kincairney), that the claimant had not sufficiently complied with the condition as to residence contained in the Representation of the People (Scotland) Act, 1868, s. 4, sub-s. 3. MILLER v. BRUCE, (1899) 2 F. 265

The sheriff amended the claim by prefixing the word "joint" to the words "lodger tenant," and by substituting 20*l.* for 10*l.* as the annual value.

Held, that the sheriff was entitled to make the amendment. GRAY v. CRAIG, (1892) 20 R. 81

Where a person claims the franchise as an inhabitant householder, and his name duly appears on the town clerk's list as a claimant in respect of that qualification, but on the revision it turns out that his true qualification would be that of a lodger, if he had claimed as such:—

Held, on appeal, that the revising barrister had no power, under s. 4 of the Parliamentary Registration (Ireland) Act, 1885 (48 Vict. c. 17), to expunge the name from the list on which it appears, and insert it with the true qualification in the originally appropriate list, or on a special list to be framed for its reception. CULLEN v. A man occupied lodgings in a burgh of sufficient value, and for the requisite period, to entitle him to be enrolled as a lodger in the roll of voters for the burgh. His wife lodged with him:—

Held, that he was "sole tenant" within the meaning of the Representation of the People Act, 1868, s. 4, and was entitled to be entered in the roll of voters as a lodger. HAMILTON v. PATON, (1898) 1 Fraser, 208. C. A. (Sc.) [1899] W. N. 175

Held, that sons living in family with their parents, and occupying and paying rent for rooms, of which they have the exclusive use, to the requisite value, may be enrolled as lodgers, and the payments made by them may be either in money or in money's worth.

Where sons living in family with their parents pay for the exclusive use each of a separate bedroom and jointly of a parlour, their claim to be enrolled as lodgers is not defeated by the fact that the rest of the family daily take breakfast with them in the parlour. BROWN v. A son, as a lodger, paid his mother rent for the exclusive use of a bedroom, and for the joint use with her of other rooms. The clear annual value of his rights of use or occupation was sufficient, but the value of the bedroom taken alone was insufficient.

Held, that he did not occupy lodgings of the statutory value, "separately and as sole tenant," and was therefore not entitled to the franchise under the Representation of the People (Scotland) Act, 1868, s. 4. GRAY v. DEUCHAR, (1890) 18 R. 341

The fact that the landlord of a house let out in separate tenements lives in the house is a vital element to be considered in determining whether or not the occupiers of such tenements are lodgers, or qualified as inhabitant householders under the Representation of the People Act, 1884, and, as an all but universal rule, will prevent their successfully claiming the franchise in respect of such occupation otherwise than as lodgers.

The decision of such cases depends upon the effect of evidence given to establish a matter of fact; but it is a question of law whether any given matter of fact is conclusive upon the law, or whether there is any evidence to sustain any given findings of fact.

In order to constitute lodgings which will qualify for the franchise, the part of the house occupied by the claimant must be part of one "dwelling-house"; and in the case of an inhabitant occupier of part of a house, claiming as such, it must be shown that the part which he occupies is in itself one separate "dwelling-house," and not merely part of one. *HOGAN v. The mistakes in notices of objection which a revising barrister is empowered to correct under s. 28 of 41 & 42 Vict. c. 26, include mistakes of law.

In a notice of objection to the retention of a person's name on the occupiers' list of voters in a borough the objector described himself as "on the list of parliamentary electors and burgesses" for a certain parish in the borough, but incorrectly inserted as his place of abode his shop, which was his qualifying property, and at which, though he spent the greater part of the day there, he did not reside. His reason for so doing was that his shop was situate in the borough and his place of abode was at some distance from the borough, and he thought he ought to give his address within the borough. No one was misled by the misstatement:—

Held, that the misstatement of the place of abode was a mistake which the revising barrister had power to amend.

Held (affirming the decision of the revising barrister), that the notice of objection was bad.

The objector could not swear that he signed several notices of objection on the days they purported to bear date, but the notices were duly signed by him before they were served, and they were duly served within the limits of time for giving such notice:—

Held (reversing the decision of the revising barrister), that the general prima facie presumption that all documents are made on the day they bear date applies to notices of objection. KENNY v. KENEALY, [1895] 2 I. R. 544.

97. — Objection—Notice of—Service through post-office—No postal delivery—"The ordinary course of post"—Parliamentary Voters (Ireland) Act, 1850 (13 & 14 Vict. c. 69), s. 113.

Sect. 113 of the Parliamentary Voters (Ireland) Act, 1850, providing for the sending of notices of objection through the post, assumes that in every case the postal service is capable, "in the ordinary course of post," of reaching the place of abode of a voter or claimant—that is, that in every case such notice can be "sent by the post" to its destination within a time ascertainable as "in the ordinary course of post"; and wherever an objector takes advantage of the postal service, he must show by evidence, probable or demonstrative, that in such "ordinary course" his notice, posted when and where it was posted, would reach its destination at latest on Aug. 20.

The "ordinary course," of which evidence must be given by the objector, must include and cover the transit from the nearest post-office to the place of abode mentioned in the address, and he must show what the time is which this transit ordinarily requires. Accordingly, where the evidence was only that the transit was casual and uncertain, and the time which it, in ordinary course, required had not been determined by the revising barrister, the service of a notice of objection, which reached the local post-office, within about a mile of which the voter resided, on the morning of Aug. 20, but was not actually delivered at his place of abode till the 22nd, was held insufficient within the section. *DOOGAN v. 108. — Postman employed at a distance from constituency—Inhabitant occupier—County vote—Electoral Disabilities Removal Act, 1891 (54 Vict. c. 11), s. 2.

A postman employed as such in Edinburgh was tenant of a house at Milnathort in Kinross-shire, where his family resided. He spent his annual summer holiday with his family at Milnathort, and at periods varying from one month to two months he came to Milnathort on Saturday evening and remained there till the following Sunday evening. At other times he lived in lodgings in Edinburgh. He was never absent from Milnathort consecutively for more than two months.

Held, that he was not an inhabitant occupier of the house at Milnathort, in respect that he had not the necessary residential qualification, and was not entitled to be retained in the register of voters for the county of Kinross. RINTOUL v. FALCONER, (1898) 1 Fraser, 207

A. was an occupier of premises B. previously to July 20, 1888, and up to May 6, 1889, on which date he became an occupier, in immediate succession, of premises C., and so continued during the remainder of the qualifying year. He was rated for the premises B. in the rate for the year 1888, the rate having been made for that year in March, 1888, and duly paid by him. Premises C. consisted of a new house, which was not included in the rate for the year 1889, made on March 4 in that year, not having been then valued for the purpose of being rated:—

Held, that A. was entitled to the franchise.

The inhabitant occupier, during the whole or part of the qualifying period, of a dwelling-house which was rateable, and ought to have been rated, but was not rated for the relief of the poor to a rate which was made during the qualifying period, and during his occupation, is not entitled to the franchise.

A dwelling-house which ought to have been so rated was not rated, but was subsequently valued, and the amount which the rate ought to have been tendered, and a claim to be rated was served on the guardians under the provisions of 13 & 14 Vict. c. 69, s. 110.

Held, that the tender and claim had no effect.

A. was an inhabitant occupier of a rated dwelling-house previously to July 20, 1889, up to a date in the qualifying period, subsequent to the striking of the only rate made during the qualifying period, when he went into occupation in immediate succession of another house in which he continued to reside during the remainder of the qualifying period. The second house had formerly been rated, but having fallen into ruin was omitted from the rate-book for several years before and in the qualifying year. Subsequently to the striking of the rate in the qualifying period, the house was repaired and became liable to be rated:—

Held, that the case was undistinguishable from Criglington v. Anderson, (1889) 26 L. R. Ir. 131, and that A. was entitled to the franchise.

B. was an inhabitant occupier of a dwelling-house which was marked in the rate-book as "exempt" under the provisions of 48 Vict. c. 3, s. 9, sub-s. 9, and was not rated. The revising barrister decided that the house was not, by law, exempt, and should have been rated to the rate made during the qualifying period, and expunged B.'s name from the register of voters:—

Held, that even if the house was not, by law, exempt, it was not the function of the revising barrister to revise the rate-book or the valuation roll, and that B. was entitled to the franchise.

114. — Rating—Joint rated occupiers—Premises taken solely to obtain votes—Occasionality—Sole occupation—Occupation of sub-tenant or licensee—Occupation franchise.

Prior to March, 1892, two sons lived with their father in premises of which he was tenant, and which it became desirable to take down and rebuild. In March, 1892, it was arranged that the sons should become the joint tenants of the other premises, and be jointly rated in respect of the same, in order to qualify themselves for the franchise. As soon as the assignment was completed the father and the two sons moved into the premises, of which the sons thus became the tenants, and resided there till Aug. 1893, when all three moved back into the premises of which the father was tenant and which had been rebuilt in the interval. The sons paid the rent and the poor-rates of the premises of which they were tenants, but the father was surety for the payment of the rent, and paid all the household expenses of the establishment, including the maintenance of his two sons. The revising barrister held that the arrangement for obtaining the tenancy of the house in the case of the sons was not bonâ fide, and that the father was the sole occupier of the house, and disallowed the votes.

Held (reversing the revising barrister), that the sons were entitled to the franchise as joint rated occupiers of the premises of which they were tenants. MOONEY v. CHAMBERS, [1894] 2 Ir. R. 374

115. — Rating—"Owner or tenant"—Trustee—Parochial house—Joint rated occupier—Occupation franchise.

The Roman Catholic bishop of the diocese, who was also priest of the parish of T., along with his administrator and two curates, occupied the parochial house for the qualifying period, each having separate rooms in the house, and using the rest of it in common. The premises were held by trustees under a fee-farm grant in trust for the parish. Among the trustees were the bishop, the administrator, and the curates; two of them having been trustees for some years, and the other two having been appointed during the qualifying year. The trustees who were in occupation were jointly rated for the premises: the bishop had the power, but had not exercised it during the qualifying year, of removing or promoting his administrator and curates to another parish; but he could not in any other way deprive them of their respective rooms in the premises:—

Held, that the bishop, the administrator, and the two curates occupied as tenants, and were entitled to the franchise as rated occupiers. HOLLANDS v. CHAMBERS. O'DOHERTY'S CASE, (1892) 32 L. R. Ir. 156 - C. A. (Ir.) [1899] W. N. 153

The revising barrister allowed the claim, but held that at the time the notice of selection was given there was no duplicate entry on the list of voters to which the notice could apply, and he accordingly marked the entry in respect of the appellant's place of abode as the entry to be retained for voting:—

The tenant of a house consisting of three rooms let one room unfurnished to a sub-tenant, who furnished it and inhabited it with his family. The only access to this room was through the other two rooms inhabited by the principal tenant, who had exclusive possession of the key of the house door.

H., a servant, occupied exclusively, by virtue of his service, a furnished bedroom in a dwelling-house belonging to his master, and had, in common with another young man, the use of a sitting-room in the same house. All the furniture belonged to the master, who did not reside in the house, but had free access at all times to every portion of it except H.'s bedroom, and had access to that whenever he asked H. for the key, which he had a right to demand whenever he chose. The bedrooms were made up by a charwoman, who was paid by the master, and did not reside on the premises:—

Held, by May C.J. and Barry and Naish L.J.J., following Strirling v. Halse, (1885) 16 Q. B. D. 246, and reversing the decision of the revising barrister (diss. Porter M.R. and FitzGibbon L.J.), that H. was entitled to the franchise.

R. was the foreman of a shop and place of business in which a number of young men were employed. By virtue of that employment he and they lived in a separate house, in which he had a bedroom that he occupied exclusively. He and the other employees took their meals in a common sitting-room, and the only other resident in the house was a servant, paid by the employer to attend to the occupants. R. had a latchkey for the hall door, and had also charge of the other keys, and it was his duty to see that the doors were locked and the occupants within doors every night.

Held, affirming the decision of the revising barrister (dub. FitzGibbon L.J.), that R. was entitled to the franchise.

C., as his employer's coachman, occupied a room over her stable, and was treated by her as a domestic servant. The stable was in her yard, and was portion of the curtilage of her dwelling-house, the house and yard being all included under the same number in the poor-rate book. There was a separate gateway and gate from the yard into a back lane, and also a wicket leading from the yard into the lane. The gate and wicket formed the only access to the yard, except by going through the employer's house, and were under her control. Another of her servants cleaned out C.'s room:—

The appellant had, by virtue of his service as a policeman, the exclusive occupation of a cubicle in a dormitory at a police station. The cubicle was separated from the rest of the dormitory, which contained a number of similar cubicles, by wooden partitions which did not reach the ceiling. The atmosphere of the dormitory was common to all the cubicles, and a gas-light was shared by them in common. A lavatory and mess-room were provided for the policemen who occupied these cubicles in another part of the police station. The policemen occupying the cubicles were subject to the control of a superior officer, who had power to impose restrictions upon their use of the cubicles inconsistent with the rights which a person ordinarily exercises in respect of his own dwelling:—

Held (Rigby L.J. dissenting), that the cubicle was not part of a house separately occupied as a dwelling within the meaning of the Parliamentary and Municipal Registration Act, 1878, s. 5, and that the appellant was therefore not entitled to the franchise in respect of it under the Representation of the People Act, 1884, s. 3. *CLUTTERBUCK v. Held, that the constable inhabited the “dwelling-house” within the meaning of s. 3 of the Representation of the People Act, 1884, and that the “dwelling-house” was not inhabited by any person under whom he served, and that therefore he was entitled to be registered. *WALLACE v. He had various religious duties to perform, subject to the orders and directions of the rector, who resided in the college. There was no contract of employment of any kind. He was maintained in the college.

M. claimed to be enrolled as a voter under s. 3 of the Representation of the People Act, 1884:—

Each member of the community had the exclusive use of a separate bedroom, of which he kept the key. The public rooms were open to all, and they dined together in the refectory. The claim was objected to on the ground that the claimant was a joint occupant only:—

134. — Service franchise—Separate dwellings—Nuns in convent—Office, service, or employment.

The claimants were nuns residing at a convent in the town of E. Each of them occupied a separate bedroom, and was subject to the control of the Lady Superioress, who could at any time change the occupants from one room to another, or arrange to have more than one occupant of a single room. She could refuse to allow a nun to receive a visitor to her room, demand admission to the room, and require the nuns to give up the keys.

The nuns took their meals together in the refectory, and occupied in common other general rooms in the convent; they received no remuneration, and were under no contract of employment. The premises were vested in the Roman Catholic Bishop of Clogher, the parish priest, and the senior curate of E., all for the time being, upon trust for the benefit of the Roman Catholic inhabitants of E. The convent was governed by rules subject to the supreme authority of the bishop:—

In order to compel payment of arrears of rent, each of several weekly tenants of dwelling-houses was served with a notice to quit, which expired during the qualifying period. Each of the tenants continued in possession of his dwelling-house after the expiration of the notice to quit for a substantial period. While so overholding, each of the tenants was served with a summons for possession. In some of these cases before, and in others after, a decree for possession was obtained, a new contract of tenancy was made, whereby it was arranged that the several tenants should continue to hold upon the old terms, and that the new tenancy was to be deemed to have commenced in each case on the

Held (reversing the decision of the recorder of Londonderry), that the new contract was not capable of relating back for the purposes of the franchise, and that therefore none of the weekly tenants were entitled to the franchise. HOLLAND v. By s. 28, sub-s. 9, of the Parliamentary and Municipal Registration Act, 1878, "Subject as herein and otherwise by law provided the revising barrister shall retain the name . . . of every person objected to unless the objector appears . . . in support of his objection." By sub-s. 10, "If the objector so appears the revising barrister shall require him, unless he is an overseer, to prove that he gave the notice of objection required by law to be given by him, and to give prima facie proof of the ground of objection, . . . and unless such proof is given to his satisfaction shall, subject as herein and otherwise by law provided, retain the name of the person objected to."

A notice of the revision of the lists of parliamentary and municipal electors for a borough stated that the lists for a certain parliamentary division of the borough would be closed at a certain sitting of the revision court. At the termination of that sitting the revising barrister, being satisfied that there were no claimants or persons objected to who desired to be heard, declared the lists closed. Upon the occupiers' list was the name of a certain voter who was objected to by an objector who was not an overseer, but at the time of the lists being declared closed no person had applied to be heard either in support of the voter's right to be on the list or in support of the objection thereto, although both the objector and the agent of the person objected to had been present throughout the sittings of the court. On the following day the revising barrister allowed the objector to prove service of notice of objection and to give prima facie proof of the ground of objection; while he at the same time refused to hear evidence on behalf of the voter in opposition to the objection, on the ground that, the lists having been closed, his application to be heard was too late; and he expunged the voter's name from the list :—

The judgment in a partition action, brought by an infant as sole plt. by his next friend, contained a request for sale by the plt. and, other persons, defts., claiming to be entitled to the entirety of the property, directed a sale, if the parties other than the infant plt. were found entitled to a moiety, and reserved liberty to apply for a sale if it should appear that the defts. were not so entitled; the master having certified that the defts. were entitled to a moiety, the property was sold under the judgment without further order. The infant having died before the proceeds of sale were paid out of court:—

Held, that there had been no conversion of the infant's share, and that it must be dealt with as realty.

Semble, the law laid down by Foster v. Foster, (1875) 1 Ch. D. 588, still holds good, notwithstanding the Partition Act, 1876, s. 6, and the dicta of Jessel M.R. in Wallace v. Greenwood, (1880) 16 Ch. D. 362.

Where an infant by a next friend is one of several plts. by counsel requesting a sale, and a sale is ordered upon this request, the proceeds of the infant's share ought to be earmarked as real estate.

Real estate was sold in a partition action, and under an order, made in 1877, a share of the proceeds of sale was paid to the trustees of the will of a testator who died possessed of the share. The will gave a power of sale to the trustees, but did not authorize them to invest in the purchase of lands. One of the beneficiaries under the will died intestate:—

Held, that his share devolved on his legal personal representative and not on his heir.

3. — Costs—Incumbered shares—Incumbrancers—Separate sets of costs.

In a partition action only one set of costs can be allowed for each share. If some of the shares are incumbered, and some not, the incumbrancers cannot each have a separate set of costs out of the general estate, but each share must bear the costs of its own incumbrances. CATTON v. BANKS

4. — Costs—Incumbered shares—One set of costs for each share—Discretion of Court—Partition action.

In a partition action the chief clerk had certified that the property was divisible into six shares, two of which only were incumbered:—

Held, on further consideration, that only one set of costs in respect of each share ought to be allowed. Catton v. Banks, [1893] 2 Ch. 221, followed on this point. The time for ascertaining the shares of the persons interested in the property is the date of the chief clerk's certificate. The Court has a general discretion as to the costs, and as a rule will not allow parties representing an incumbered share any additional costs incurred by reason of such incumbrance, which, unlike a settlement or assignment, creates no further subdivision of a share. ANCELL v. ROLFE

5. — Improvements—Contribution—Mortgage of share in moieties—Covenant for further assurance.

A tenant for life of property and owner in fee of a moiety of the property borrowed money on mortgage, which with other money was expended in permanent improvements:—

Held, that the present value of the improvements (not exceeding the amount of the mortgage) must be borne rateably by both moieties.

A person absolutely entitled to one moiety of an estate and contingently to the other moiety, mortgaged both moieties, and subsequently sold his contingent moiety for value. The conveyance did not mention the mortgage, but contained a covenant for further assurance. In a partition action, held, that the absolute moiety must bear the mortgage debt, as the effect of the covenant for further assurance was to enable the covenantee to call on the covenantor to pay off the mortgage.

6. — Improvements—Permanent improvements—Form of judgment—Practice.

Action by the tenant for life of one moiety of land against the owner in fee of the other moiety, who was in occupation of the land, claiming a declaration of title as to a moiety and possession. The writ was now amended by claiming partition, or sale and distribution of the proceeds. It was stated that the deft. had erected buildings and effected permanent improvements and repairs on the land. There were several other similar actions relating to other properties in which improvements had been in like manner effected by the defts. or their predecessors in title.

It was now proposed that, in lieu of the form of inquiry given in Seton on Judgments, 5th ed. vol. ii. p. 1565, Form No. 10, the judgments in the several actions should respectively contain, mutatis mutandis, an account and inquiry as follows: "An account of the moneys, if any, expended by the deft. [or his predecessors in title] in permanent improvements to the said hereditaments since November 18, 1898" (the date of the conveyance under which the title of the parties was derived), "and an inquiry as to the extent to which the present value of such hereditaments has been increased by such expenditure." The words in square brackets were to be inserted in cases where title was derived through a person who made the expenditure.

Kekewich J., referring to In re Cook's Mortgage, Lawledge v. Tyndall, [1896] 1 Ch. 923, said that he had himself made many orders according to the form in Seton; but, in view of the recent authorities, the form now proposed appeared to be preferable in the present case, and the judgment would, accordingly, go in that form. *WILLIAMS v. The Court, under s. 20 of the Act, appointed the chief clerk a person to convey the lunatic's undivided share, and ordered the purchase-money of that share to be paid into court as money liable to be invested in land subject to the same limitations as the lunatic's undivided share. *CASWELLS v. Notwithstanding the abolition of the writ of partition, a tenant in common is entitled as of right to a partition of the common property subject to the provisions for sale contained in the Partition Act, 1868. A party wall held in common separated the gardens of the plts. and deft. The plts. pulled down part of the wall and rebuilt it as part of an addition to their house, with concrete foundations and footings extending further into the property of the deft. than the original foundation. At the height of the old wall they set back the new wall half the thickness of the old wall:—

Held, that the plts. were entitled to a partition of the wall vertically and longitudinally. A mandatory injunction against permitting the foundation and footings to remain on deft.'s land refused. MAYFAIR PROPERTY CO. v. JOHNSTON

A partner, on retiring from his firm, left his capital, 15,000*l.*, in the business under an agreement with the continuing partners that it should be a debt due from them to him and bearing interest until repayment. The agreement contained a stipulation that the outgoing partner should have free access to the books at all times, and various provisions intended to satisfy the outgoing partner from time to time of the solvency of the business; upon breach of any one of these provisions he was to be at liberty to call in his capital. The outgoing partner subsequently died, having by his will bequeathed his residuary estate, which included his capital in the business, to a trustee upon trusts for one for life and for others in remainder:—

Held, that the trustee was at liberty to employ accountants and valuers for an audit and stock-taking once a year if desired, or oftener if special circumstances so required; and that the expenses thereof were costs, charges, and expenses properly incurred by the trustee in the execution of the trusts of the will and for the benefit of the whole estate, and were therefore payable out of capital and not out of income. *In re BENNETT. The fact that one partner has been guilty of illegal acts in the conduct of the partnership business is no defence to an action for account by the other partner, where the objects of the partnership were not illegal, and the innocent partner at the time of entering into the partnership intended that it should be carried on lawfully. The plt. and def. were partners in a bookmaker's and betting business, which was carried on by the def.; the plt. claimed an account of the profits of the partnership, and the def. contended that, having regard to the nature of the business, no such relief could be obtained:—

Held, that as a bookmaking and betting business could be carried on without contravening the Betting Act, 1853, and that as the plt. when he entered into this partnership contemplated that the business would be so carried on in the usual way, the fact that the def. had acted illegally was immaterial, and the plt. was entitled to the account claimed. *THWAITES v. 8. — Mortgage of share—Sale of share—Rights of mortgagee—Partnership Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 39), s. 31, sub-s. 1, 2.

Action by a mortgagee of a share in a partnership to enforce his security on dissolution.

By indenture dated Sept. 12, 1899, made between the partners, reciting that the accounts to June 30, 1899, had been made up and approved by the partners, the partnership was dissolved as from June 30, 1899, and the mortgagor conveyed his share to D. for the sum of 500*l.*, agreed on for the purchase thereof, D. covenanting to discharge the outstanding liabilities.

Held, that sub-s. 1 of s. 31, which bound the mortgagee to accept accounts of profits agreed during the continuance of the partnership, did not apply to the case of a sale of the mortgagor's share. To hold otherwise would be tantamount to striking out sub-s. 2, as it would allow the partners to say that the mortgagee was not entitled to an account to ascertain the mortgagor's share on dissolution because the mortgagor had agreed to take a certain sum for his share. The plt. was not bound by the sale, but was entitled to a charge on the share as 9. — Agreement to refer—Power to expel partner—Validity of notice—Bona fides—Notice of dissolution—Motion to stay proceedings—Arbitration Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 49), s. 4.

Articles of partnership provided that a partner might be expelled for breach of certain acts therein specified, and that if any question should arise whether a case had happened to authorize the exercise of this power, such question should be referred to arbitration. The defts. served a notice on the plt. to determine the partnership on the ground that he had committed a breach within the expulsion clause, but gave no details of the particular act complained of; the plt. thereupon brought an action to restrain the defts. from acting on this notice; the defts. moved to stay proceedings and refer all matters in dispute to arbitration:—

Held, that the preliminary question whether or not the notice of expulsion was valid was one more suitable for decision by the Court than by an arbitrator, and that as there was a suggestion of a fraudulent exercise of the power of expulsion, the Court, in the exercise of its discretion, ought not to stay proceedings and enforce a reference.

A partner is not entitled to spring a notice of dissolution on his co-partner without giving him some preliminary warning of the cause of complaint, and an opportunity of meeting the case alleged against him. BARNES v. YOUNGS

Romer J. [1898] 1 Ch. 414

10. — Arbitration clause.

The question whether there ought to be a dissolution of partnership cannot be referred to arbitration, although it be one of the questions which were intended to come within the arbitration clause in the partnership articles. TURNELL v. SANDERSON - Kekewich J. [1891] W. N. 71

11. — Arbitration clause—Action for dissolution—Motion to stay proceedings—Form of order.

By articles of partnership between the plt. and the defts. it was provided that "all matters in difference in relation to the partnership affairs" should be referred to arbitration. Disputes arose between the partners of such a character as to render the continuance of the partnership difficult, and this action was brought for the dissolution of the partnership. The defts. moved for a stay of proceedings and reference to arbitration, and the plt. moved for the appointment of a receiver:—

Held, that the Court ought to put a broad construction on the terms of this arbitration clause and to hold that the question whether there ought to be a dissolution was covered by it, as being one of the affairs of the partnership. As to the form of the order, it was to be observed that Chitty J. in Vawdrey v. Simpson, [1896] 1 Ch. 166, was reported to have said that he referred the matters in dispute to arbitration in accordance with the submission, but nevertheless the mandatory part of the order was in the simple form. That form would therefore be followed, but, inasmuch as the Court did not now think fit to appoint a receiver, though it might think fit to do so at a later stage, the order would be expressed to be without prejudice to the motion for a receiver. MACHIN v. BENNETT

Kekewich J. [1900] W. N. 146

12. — Arbitration clause—Receiver.

The mere fact of dissolution of a partnership does not give one partner an absolute right, as against his co-partners, to have a receiver appointed of the partnership business; nor, on the other hand, is the jurisdiction of the Court to appoint a receiver ousted by an arbitration clause, but where there is such a clause the Court may appoint a receiver and stay all proceedings in an action for dissolution. PRINCE v. RONGORONI - Stirling J. [1892] 1 Ch. 633

13. — Arbitration clause—Return of premium—Motion to stay.

Articles of partnership provided for arbitration in case of difference between the partners. In an action for dissolution, one of the partners claimed the return of premium paid by him. The deft. moved for stay of proceedings and reference to arbitration. The plt. objected that the arbitrator would be unable to determine whether the premiums should be refunded:—

Held, that the arbitrator would have power under a reference to award dissolution, including, if necessary, return of premiums, and that proceedings should be stayed and the matters in dispute referred to arbitration. BELFIELD v. BOURNE - Stirling J. [1894] 1 Ch. 521

The plt. had no knowledge of the persons of whom the co. consisted. After the making of the contract and before the time for performance arrived the deft.'s partner died:—

In drawing up the order the registrar dated the same May 16, to let in an affidavit of the latter fact:—

Held, that the judgment creditor was not entitled to an order for payment of his debt and costs, as the interest of each partner had vested in his trustee in bankruptcy before May 16, and because he had acquiesced in the post-dating of the order. MITCHELL v. WEISE. Ex parte FRIEDHELM - - Chitty J. [1892] W. N. 139

24. — Name—Right to use of name of old firm—Solicitor's business.

Upon the dissolution of a partnership, without any sale or assignment of the goodwill of the business, and without any provision as to the use of the firm name, each of the partners is entitled to carry on business under that name, provided that he does not by so doing expose his former partners to any risk of liability.

Whether there will be any such risk is a matter to be determined having regard to the circumstances of each case.

Plts. claimed the exclusive right to use the name "Burchell" or "Burchells," and to restrain defts. from using either of those names in any way as part of their firm name:—

Held, by Byrne J., [1900] W. N. 29, on motion for an injunction, that the right to the injunction depended upon plts. establishing that any use of the word "Burchell" as part of the name of defts. firm would expose plts. to risk of liability, and, the Court not being satisfied that either of the plts. would be under any tangible risk of liability if defts. were (as they said they were willing to do) to practise as "Burchell, Wilde & Co.," especially if plts. were to use a style carrying their initials, or were to take the name of "Burchells & Burchell," made no order on the motion:

Held, by the C. A., that, subject to the above limitation, the defts. were entitled to use the name "Burchell & Co.," though it would be more satisfactory if they would undertake to continue to use (as they had done since the hearing by Byrne J.) the name "Burchell, Wilde & Co."

27. — Death of one partner—Sale of business to surviving partner—"Effects and securities"—Carrying on business under style of old firm—Canvassing old customers—Appraiser—Partnership articles.

The law with regard to the disposal of goodwill on the dissolution of a partnership, and as to surviving or continuing partners' right to set up a rival business, discussed and explained.

L. and D. formerly carried on business as co-partners under the style of L. & D. On the death of L. in 1876 D. and M. entered into partnership under articles whereby it was provided that the style of the firm should be the same as before—namely, L. & D.; and (amongst other things) that "in case of the death of one of the partners a general account of the position shall be made, including all effects and securities of whatsoever nature that they possess, and the value of such effects and securities be estimated as at the date of such decease." There was also a provision for the appointment of an appraiser.

The partnership expired by the death of D. in 1896, whereupon an appraiser was agreed upon between D.'s personal representative and M., who subsequently appointed the same person arbitrator.

Questions arose before the arbitrator whether he ought to consider the question of goodwill and set a value thereon, and whether in considering the goodwill he should appraise the value thereof on the footing that, if it were sold, M. would be at liberty to carry on a rival business, but without any right to solicit customers of the old firm, and whether or not under the name of L. & D. The arbitrator stated a special case for the opinion of the Court in accordance with s. 19 of the Arbitration Act, 1889:—

Held, that the arbitrator ought to consider the question of goodwill (if any), and to set such a value upon it as he might consider to have been attached to the business at the death of D., and that the value (if any) of the goodwill ought to be appraised on the footing that, if it were sold, the surviving partner would be at liberty to carry on a rival business, but would not have the right to solicit any person who was a customer of the old firm prior to the death of D., or the right to carry on business under the name of L. & D. In re DAVID AND MATTHEWS

28. — "Goodwill"—Sale of—Canvassing old customers.

Where the goodwill of a business is sold (without further provision), the vendor may set up a rival business, but he is not entitled to canvass the customers of the old firm, and may be restrained by injunction from soliciting any person who was a customer of the old firm prior to the sale to continue to deal with the vendor, or not to deal with the purchaser.

The same principle is applicable to the case where a person has been taken into partnership on the terms that on the expiration of the partnership the goodwill of the business shall belong solely to the other partner.

Prior to 1895, E. & Co., manufacturers, had employed F. & Co. to sell goods for them on commission. The course of business was for E. & Co. to send goods to F. & Co., who would forward them to the purchasers, receive the purchase-money, and, after deducting their commission, account to E. & Co. for the balance. In Jan., 1895, one of the partners in F. & Co. died, and the business was then carried on by the surviving partner. Shortly before the death F. & Co. had procured an order for goods, none of which were delivered until after the death, when they were sent to the surviving partner, who forwarded them to the purchaser and received the purchase-money, but did not account for it. In 1896 E. & Co. obtained judgment against the surviving partner for the balance of the account due to them from F. & Co., but nothing was recovered under that judgment. On a claim by E. & Co. to prove against the estate of the deceased partner:—

Held (1), as to the transactions which took place after the death, that the contract of agency between F. & Co. and E. & Co. was determined by the death, and consequently that no "debt or obligation" within s. 9 of the Partnership Act, 1890, had been incurred while the deceased was a partner, and his estate was not liable; and (2.) as to the rest of the account, that the existence of the fiduciary relation of principal and agent did not prevent the application of the Statute of Limitations.

In 1894 E. & Co. had presented an account to F. & Co. shewing a balance due to E. & Co. This account included items which had accrued due within six years, and also items under the heading "Consignment Account," nearly all of which were statute-barred. The figures of the account were not agreed by either party; but F. & Co. paid to E. & Co. 300*l*. "on account," which was credited in E. & Co.'s books to the "consignment account":—

Held, that the appropriation of the 300*l*. by E. & Co. to the consignment account did not take the case out of the statute; but that the payment amounted to an acknowledgment by F. & Co. that there was an account between them and E. & Co. on which a balance of more than 300*l*. would be payable, from which a promise to pay that balance when ascertained must be inferred:

Held further, that the sum of 100*l*. paid by the surviving partner to E. & Co., for which credit was given in arriving at the balance sought to be proved, could not now be appropriated by E. & Co. to items in respect of which the estate of the deceased partner had been held not to be liable.

36. — Misrepresentation by co-partner—Misappropriation of client's moneys.

The plt. deposited sums of money at various times with a firm of solicitors for investment. The moneys were embezzled by a clerk, but representations were made on behalf of the firm that the investments had been made and interest was paid:—

Held (1), that an innocent partner was bound by the misrepresentations of the firm which prevented the client from discovering the misappropriation until many years after the misappropriation occurred; (2) that the Trustee Act, 1888, did not apply so as to enable the innocent partner to plead the Statute of Limitations as a bar to the action; (3) that the client could prove against the separate estates of the partners in case the joint estate was insufficient. MOORE v. Shortly after the death of G., a partner in a bank, T. transferred a sum from his current account to a deposit account. T. subsequently paid into and drew out of his current account sums exceeding that transferred. The bank stopped payment:—

Held, that the transaction was the same as if T. had drawn a cheque for the sum, and paid the proceeds into the deposit account. It was an entirely fresh contract, and G.'s estate was discharged. In re HEAD. HEAD v. HEAD (No. 2)

A. retired from a firm. His retirement was not gazetted. Interest on a loan continued to be paid by the firm in the firm's name, in accordance with the deed of dissolution which stipulated for payment and discharge of the loan:—

A. applied to R., a member of a firm of solicitors, to obtain a loan on mortgage of land. R. obtained the mortgage from clients of his firm, but falsely told A. that the mortgagees required collateral security, and obtained securities to bearer from R. On previous occasions A. had deposited security with R.'s firm to secure loans. The firm was in the habit of holding securities to bearer for their clients:—

Held, that it was within the scope of R.'s apparent authority to take custody of the securities, and that his partners were liable for a misappropriation by him of the securities. Decision of Kekewich J. reversed. RHODES v. MOULES

42. — Manager and receiver—Salary, Undertaking to act without—Allowances—Security—Guarantee society—Surety—Premiums—Extra work done by receiver.

By a judgment for dissolution of a partnership between two agricultural implement makers, the deft., one of the partners, was appointed receiver and manager, and undertook to act without salary. He carried on the business very successfully for more than eighteen months, and then purchased it with the sanction of the Court. He was a skilled mechanic, and during his receivership worked in the business as a common workman. In his accounts he claimed to be allowed two premiums of 25*l.* each paid to a guarantee society which had become surety for his duly accounting, and the sum of 2*l.* per week for the manual work done by him as a workman. The master allowed both items:—

Held, (by Kekewich J.), that a receiver and manager appointed without salary or remuneration was entitled to be allowed in his accounts premiums paid by him to a guarantee society as his surety, and that the two premiums ought therefore to be allowed, but that the 2*l.* per week ought not, for that the receiver, being in a fiduciary position, could not employ himself. The decision on the first point was not appealed from:

Held, by C. A., that the 2*l.* per week ought also to be allowed, for that, although the receiver had acted irregularly and run great risk in not asking for wages at the time of his appointment, he was entitled to be paid for services which had proved beneficial to the estate, and which it was no part of his duty as receiver and manager to perform. *HARRIS v. Four partners traded under the firm of A. & Co. One resident abroad gave B., a co-partner, power of attorney to a second to sell or concur in selling any of his property. The partner in England agreed to sell their business as a going concern, B. concurring also as A.'s attorney. The agreement contained provisions entitling the purchaser to carry on business as A. & Co. and a covenant by the partner not to trade within fifty miles of the seat of the partnership business:—

Held, (1) that stipulations in the agreement as to deferred capital did not constitute a new partnership, but only a mode of paying the agreed price, and were within the power of attorney; (2) that the licence to trade as A. & Co., and the agreement not to trade if not authorized by the power, were stipulations in favour of the purchaser and could be waived by him.

Semble, that the agreement not to trade was

Where A. sent out tools (colourably as hand-tools) which when affixed to a machine of A.'s turned it into a machine having B.'s inventions in it:—

5. — Foreign-made article—Evidence—Presumption—Injunction—Damages—Alternative relief.

In an action by patentees of an article exclusively manufactured abroad, claiming an injunction and damages for the user of the patented article in England, the only evidence of infringement adduced was that of an expert, who deposed that the plts.' patents related to three separate and distinct modes of producing the article in question; that it was not possible to tell, from an examination of any particular parcel, under which process it had been produced, but that it must have been produced under one or other of these three processes. The deft. called no evidence, and claimed a nonsuit:—

Held, that the plts. were not entitled to any injunction, as they had not proved that any particular patent had been infringed. On the question of damages, the Court found as a fact that the plts.' patents covered every possible mode of producing the patented article, and that one of these patents must therefore have been infringed, and that the nature and extent of the wrong done to the plts. did not depend upon the particular patent infringed. An inquiry was therefore directed, without mentioning any particular patent, whether any and what damages had been sustained by the plts. by reason of the user by the deft. of the patented article.

Scmble: It is not always essential to establish the particular alternative under which relief is claimed, provided that the rights of the plt. and the obligations of the deft. are identical under each of the alternatives, and that the alternatives exhaust every possible contingency and are mutually exclusive. *SACCHARIN CORPORATION, LD. v. the goods to the trader in England and delivered them to the Swiss Post Office, by whom they were forwarded to England. The goods were manufactured according to an invention protected by an English patent:—

Held, that since the contract of sale was completed by delivery to the Post Office in Switzerland, and since the Post Office was the agent of the buyer and not of the vendor, the vendor had not made, used, exercised or vended the invention within the ambit of the patent, and that the patentee had no right of action against the vendor for an infringement of the patent.

7. — Improvements in an old machine, Patent for—Extent of protection—Appeal from Ceylon.

Where a patent had been granted (in Ceylon) merely for improvements upon the mechanism of an old and known machine:—

Held, that the patentee's exclusive right thereto could not be permitted to exceed the exact terms of his specification; and that the deft.'s improvements which had the same object, but were effected in a manner not strictly corresponding to the specification, were not an infringement of his patent. BROWN v. JACKSON

Anticipation was one of the grounds of defence to an action for infringement of patent, and the judge held the patent to be valid and granted an injunction against the deft. After the trial the deft. gave notice of appeal, and applied to the C. A. for leave to amend his particulars of objections, and to adduce further evidence of anticipations at the hearing of the appeal:—

Held, that under the Judicature Acts, and under rule 4 of Order LVIII, the C. A. had jurisdiction to make the order, but that on the merits leave ought not to be granted in the present case:

With reference to the exercise by the C. A. of the powers conferred by Order LVIII, r. 4, a patent action is in the same position as any other action.

The defts. bought in England articles which infringed the plts.' patent, and sent them to their branch business house in Paris, where they were sold to various foreign purchasers:—

10. — Repair or reconstruction of patented article—Article manufactured at request of patentee's agent—Injunction.

The plts. under their patent manufactured a pneumatic tyre for cycles, which consisted of a rubber or elastic tyre lined in canvas in combination with two wires for securing the same to the rims of the wheels. The deft., at the request of an agent of the plt. company, who brought him one of the plts.' tyres, which was old and worn out, placed over the old wires a new canvas cover and a new rubber tyre. The agent had been sent by the plts. to find out whether the deft. was infringing their patent, but there was nothing to shew that the agent was authorized by them to request the deft. to do what he did:—

Held, that what the deft. had done went beyond fair repair of the tyre, and amounted to its reconstruction, and that he had therefore infringed the plts.' patent:

Held, also, that the plts. were not estopped by the act of their agent from complaining of the infringement.

Kelly v. Batchelar, (1893) 10 Rep. Pat. Cas. 289, distinguished, on the ground that in that case the plts. had authorized their agent to direct the deft. to construct an article infringing their patent.

Held, further, that, though only the one act of infringement by the deft. was proved, and there was no evidence of any threat by him to infringe again, yet, as he had accepted the order from the plts.' agent in the ordinary course of his business, it must be assumed that he would accept similar orders again, if they were offered to him, and consequently that he must be restrained by injunction from infringing the patent. DUNLOP PNEUMATIC TYRE CO. v. Action for infringement of a patent for the manufacture of ortho-toluene-sulpho-chloride, a coal-tar product used in the manufacture of saccharin. After the ortho-toluene-sulpho-chloride had been manufactured it was necessary for the production of saccharin first to change the chlorine for an amide group, and then to oxidize into saccharin and water. The defts. imported into and sold in this country saccharin made in Switzerland by the use of ortho-toluene-sulpho-chloride manufactured by a process substantially similar to that protected by the plts.' patent, and they contended that the nature of the ortho-toluene-sulpho-chloride was so changed by the subsequent operations that the importation of saccharin was not an infringement of the patent:—

Held (following on one point a previous decision of North J.), that the patent was valid, and also that defts. were indirectly making use of the patented invention, and that the question was covered by the principle of the decisions in Elmslie v. Boursier, (1869) L. R. 9 Eq. 217, and Von Heyden v. Neustadt, (1880) 14 Ch. D. 230. If the patented process were the last stage in the production of the article sold, the importation and sale of the product would plainly be an infringement, and it was not the less so because the article sold was manufactured by the use of the patented process with the subsequent use of certain other processes. Injunction therefore granted, and defts. ordered to pay the costs.

Costs as between solicitor and client, in accordance with s. 31 of the Patents, &c., Act, 1883, disallowed on the ground that a "subsequent action" meant an action commenced after a certificate had been granted: *Automatic Weighing Machine Co. v. 12. — Validity upheld—Res judicata—Estoppel—Second action between same parties—Validity denied on different grounds.

In an action by a patentee claiming damages for an infringement and an injunction, the deft. denied the infringement. He also denied the validity of the patent alleging, amongst other things, that it had been anticipated by certain specifications.

The Court upheld the validity of the patent, but granted no injunction or damages on the ground that the evidence as to the alleged infringement was, under the circumstances, not admissible. In a second action between the same parties in respect of the same patent, the deft. again denied the validity of the patent, alleging that it had been anticipated by certain specifications which were not before the Court in the first action, and which he had discovered since that action:—

grantee—Legal personal representative—Concurrence of, in assignment—Practice—Action—Counter-claim—Separate causes of action—Appeal—Cross-notice—Cross-appeal—R. S. C., 1883, Order LVIII., r. 6.

In 1882 letters patent were granted to L. and J. in the then usual form of grant to two patentees, namely, to them, "their executors, administrators, and assigns," to the end that L. and J., "their executors, administrators, and assigns, and every of them" should have and enjoy the full benefit and sole use and exercise of the patented invention. This and other patents granted to L. and J. in the same form had been taken out with a view to selling them and sharing the profits of sale. By an agreement under seal made in 1883 between L. and J. of the one part, and the plt. co. of the other part, the former agreed to sell, assign, and transfer to the latter all the patents. Clause 7 thereof was as follows: "The assignment and transfer of the said letters patent . . . shall be prepared by and at the costs of the said co. and shall be expressed to be made in pursuance of this agreement and in consideration of the payment of" the purchase-money, "and the said vendors and all other necessary parties, if any, shall at the cost of the said co. execute such assignments to the said co. or as they shall direct, and such assignments respectively shall contain a covenant by the said vendors that all the letters patent thereby assigned . . . are valid and in nowise void or voidable, and also such other covenants and provisions as may be reasonably required by the said co. for giving effect to the sale hereby agreed to be made." L. died in 1888, and after his death, the patents not having yet been assigned, though the purchase-money had, it was alleged, been paid, the co. brought an action against J. and the administratrix of L., claiming (1.) an order on the defts. to assign the patents; (2.) damages for breach of the agreement and of the warranty therein contained; and (3.) repayment of part of the purchase-money on the ground that some of the patents had been declared invalid. L.'s administratrix then counter-claimed for payment by the co. of a sum alleged to be due to her upon the agreement under a judgment pronounced by the French Court in an action brought against her in France by the co. in 1889, the judgment being based upon the ground that as L.'s administratrix she had, under the agreement, separate rights against the co. At the trial of the English action and counter-claim, Cozens-Hardy J. dismissed both, [1899] 2 Ch. 289, 301, on the grounds (1.) that L.'s administratrix had no interest in the patents inasmuch as the interest created by the form of grant in each case was a joint interest only, so that J. took the whole by survivorship; and (2.) that the obligation created by clause 7 of the agreement was only a joint—not joint and several—covenant to assign the patents and to covenant in the assignment for their validity, and that therefore L.'s administratrix was not bound to enter into any covenant. On appeals by both the co. and L.'s administratrix:—

Held, by C. A., reversing the decision of Cozens-Hardy J., [1899] 2 Ch. 289, that the obligation created by clause 7 was that L. and J. had jointly covenanted to assign the patents, and that the assignment should contain joint and several covenants by them that the patents were valid, and that the co. was entitled to relief against L.'s administratrix on that footing: also that L.'s administratrix was entitled on her counter-claim to have the amount alleged to be due to her under the French judgment ascertained.

A cross-notice under R. S. C., 1883, Order LVIII., r. 6, by the respondent to an appeal can only be given in relation to the subject-matter of the action, and cannot be extended to some other matter not the subject of the action. For example, where an action and counter-claim founded on separate and distinct causes of action have each been dismissed with costs, and the plt. on the counter-claim appeals, it is irregular for the plt. in the action, that is, the respondent to the appeal, if he desires to appeal also, to give a cross-notice under R. S. C., 1883, Order LVIII., r. 6. In such a case, the causes of action being separate and distinct, his proper course is to bring a cross-appeal and not to give a cross-notice. NATIONAL SOCIETY FOR THE DISTRIBUTION OF ELECTRICITY BY SECONDARY GENERATORS v. 15. — Agreement for sale—Assignment—Registration—Title—Priority—Notice—Equitable rights—Patents, &c., Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 57), ss. 23, 87.

By an agreement in writing W., the registered proprietor of a patent, agreed for value to assign it to the plts. Before that agreement had been registered W. granted a licence to use the patent to S., who forthwith registered the licence. S., before he took his licence, was informed by W. of the agreement with the plts., which W. stated to be no longer in force. Subsequently the plts. registered their agreement and took an assignment, which they duly registered:—

Held, affirming the decision of Kekewich J., [1898] 2 Ch. 137, that under the proviso in s. 87 of the Patents, &c., Act, 1883, S., having had before he took his licence express notice of the plts.' agreement, could not assert against them his legal title by prior registration, and that the licence was void as against the plts. NEW IXION TYRE AND CYCLE CO. v. A. granted to B. an exclusive licence to work A.'s patent, B. covenanting (1) to pay the royalties, (2) to push the sale, (3) to keep proper books. Power was given to B. to revoke, but no such power was given to A. A. purported to revoke the licence, (1) for non-payment of the royalties, (2) failing to push the sale, (3) for wilful deviation from the specifications, &c. B. brought an action for an injunction. A. counter-claimed for a declaration that the licence was revoked by his notice, and for the payment of the royalty:—

Held, by Romer J., that non-payment of the royalty did not entitle A. to revoke, that the 2nd and 3rd grounds were not founded on fact, and that B. was entitled to the injunction, and A. to judgment for the royalties due:

Held, by C. A., that on the construction of the licence there was an implied covenant not to revoke, and that the obligations imposed by the document were inconsistent with its being revocable, and that there was no such breach of the conditions as would entitle A. to revoke. *GUYOR v. The Patents, &c., Act, 1888, provided for the making of rules, applying thereto s. 101 of the Act of 1883, which enacted that general rules after being laid before Parliament "shall be of the same effect as if they were contained in this Act." The Register of Patent Agents Rules, 1889, were made under this power, and duly laid before Parliament. They provided for registry of certain persons and for an annual fee. L., a person entitled to be registered, was registered, but refused to pay the annual fee:—

The owners of a patent for a machine having brought an action for its infringement, the defendants presented a petition for its revocation. The plaintiffs then asked for liberty to apply at the Patent Office for leave to amend their specification by way of disclaimer:—

Held, affirming the decision of Kekewich J. [1899] W. N. 243, that, under the special circumstances of the case, the Court, in giving the liberty asked for, ought to impose the condition (similar to that which was imposed by the House of Lords in Deeley v. Perkes, [1896] A. C. 496, 500; 13 Rep. Pat. Cas. 581) that the plaintiffs should not bring or maintain any action for infringement of the patent in respect of any machines or parts of machines made prior to the date of the order.

In Deeley v. Perkes the House of Lords did not lay down any general practice as to the conditions to be imposed in such cases, but imposed that condition by reason of the peculiar circumstances of that case. *LUDINGTON CIGARETTE MACHINE CO. v. Before the issue of a writ in an infringement action the comptroller gave leave to amend a specification on certain conditions. The conditions were accepted, and amendment was made after the issue of the writ:—

Held, that as both the acceptance and actual amendment related back to the time of giving leave, neither constituted a proceeding the taking of which was prohibited while an infringement action was pending. ANDREW v. CROSSLEY. CROSSLEY v. ANDREW — C. A. [1892] 1 Ch. 492

The word “disclaimer” in s. 19 of the Patents, &c., Act, 1883, must be read strictly, and not as including “correction or explanation.”

Where, therefore, an action for infringement or proceeding for revocation of a patent is pending, the Court has no power under s. 19 to order that the patentee shall be at liberty to apply at the Patent Office for leave to amend his specification by way of correction or explanation.

Liberty to apply can only be given where the proposed amendment is by way of “disclaimer.”

An action for infringement of the patent the subject of this petition, brought by the respondent to the present petition, having failed, the Court being satisfied that the invention had been used prior to the date of the patent at one place out of several referred to, this petition was brought to have the patent declared void, the petitioner relying solely on the instance which had satisfied the Court in the prior action.

A witness on the part of the petitioner stated that he had seen the invention used at the particular place relied on, and in cross-examination he stated that he had seen it used also at other places referred to prior to the date of the patent.

The respondent asked to be allowed to adduce evidence as to the prior user at such other places:—

Held, that the evidence was inadmissible, on the ground that if admitted it would be allowing the respondent to go into matters not relevant to the question at issue for the sole purpose of discrediting the witness and disproving the answers to questions put to him on cross-examination. In re HAGGENMACHEE'S PATENTS threatened a customer of the plts. with proceedings for an alleged infringement of the patent, but took no steps themselves against the plts:—

Held, that they must be restrained, because they had no legal rights in the patent, and, if they had, they themselves had not taken action to restrain the infringements. KENSINGTON AND KNIGHTSBRIDGE ELECTRIC LIGHTING Co. v. LANE FOX ELECTRICAL Co. Stirling J. [1891] 2 Ch. 573

53. — General circular—Due diligence—Action to restrain threats—Patents, &c., Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 57), s. 32.

A printed notice was sent out by the deft. to the effect that his patent rights in respect of certain wrappers in which his wares were made up were being infringed, and warning persons against such infringement. The plts., rival manufacturers, sued the deft. for threats. The deft. had previously sued the plts. for infringement and for passing off their goods as his; but his patent was revoked:—

Held, (1) that the plts. were "persons aggrieved"; (2) the circular was not a mere general warning, but a "threat" within s. 32 of the Patents Act, 1883; (3) also, that the infringement action was not prosecuted with due diligence.

55. — Privileged communication.

In an action to restrain threats of legal proceedings under s. 35 of the Act of 1883, no defence can be based on the ground that what the deft. did was done bona fide, or that it was done on a privileged occasion, e.g., in answer to a private inquiry. SKINNER & Co. v. SHEW & Co. (No. 1)

56. — Third party, Letter directed against—Injunction—Expired patent—Patents, &c., Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 57), s. 32.

A co. owned a patent for gas buoy lanterns that had expired, and also owned patents for improvements which were still running, and had for some years supplied B. with gas buoy lanterns made under the patents. B. having given D. an order for gas buoy lanterns, which were founded to some extent on the expired patent, the managing director of the co. wrote B.: "I am much surprised at this. I am afraid that this matter will lead to a great deal of difficulty and unpleasantness, and you must not be surprised if my co. applies for an injunction against D. to restrain him from selling his gas buoy lanterns":—

Held, that under the circumstances the letter was a threat within the meaning of s. 32 of the Patent Act, 1883, and that D. was accordingly

57. — "Threats"—Continuance of action after dismissal of infringement action—Patents Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 57), s. 32.

On Jan. 13, 1896, an action was commenced by the Howard Football Syndicate against William Sykes, under s. 32 of the Patents Act, 1883, to restrain the deft. from threatening any person with legal proceedings in respect of the manufacture, use, sale, or purchase of footballs made by the plt. co. and alleged to be an infringement of a patent belonging to the deft. The plts. also claimed damages for injury to their trade and business by reason of the deft.'s threats. On Jan. 14, 1896, the plts. gave notice of motion for an interlocutory injunction. Pending the hearing of this motion the deft., on Jan. 22, 1896, commenced an action against the plts. for infringement of his patent, and on Jan. 31, 1896, it was ordered that the plts.' motion in the threats action should stand over generally, pending the action for infringement, and that no further proceedings should be taken in the meantime in the threats action. On March 6, 1896, the deft. delivered his statement of claim in the infringement action, and on May 18, 1896, the plts. delivered their defence, with notice of objections. The infringement action was tried on Feb. 25, 1897, when it was dismissed with costs, on the ground (inter alia) that the deft.'s patent was invalid by reason of prior user. On March 29, 1897, the plts. delivered their statement of claim in the threats action, in which they alleged that the deft. did not prosecute the infringement action with due diligence. On April 28, 1897, the deft. took out a summons asking that the threats action might be dismissed, with costs as between solicitor and client, on the ground that the same was frivolous and vexatious, and that the statement of claim disclosed no ground of action in law. On June 19, 1897, on the petition of the plts., Romer J. made an order for the revocation of the deft.'s patent:—

Held, that no order ought to be made on the deft.'s summons, and that the costs should be reserved to the trial of the threats action. HOWARD FOOTBALL SYNDICATE, LD. v. SYKES

North J. [1897] W. N. 81 (10)

58. — "Threats"—Damages—Evidence.

Plts. obtained an injunction restraining defts. from threatening legal proceedings, and an inquiry into damages was ordered. Plts. alleged that they had lost the benefit of a contract with the C. Co. in consequence of defts.' threats:—

Held, that a letter from the co.'s solicitor to plt.'s declining to continue negotiations in consequence of defts.' threats was admissible in evidence:—

Held, also, that the measure of damages was the profit plts. would have derived from the proposed contract if it had been carried out. SKINNER & CO. v. SHEW & CO. (No. 2)

North J. [1894] 2 Ch. 581

59. — Utility.

A very small amount of utility is sufficient to support a patent. Utility, in patent law, does not mean abstract, or comparative, or competitive, or commercial utility; but, as applied to an invention, it means that the invention is better than the preceding knowledge of the trade as to a particular fabric, better than in some respect though not necessarily in every respect. For instance, an invention is useful by which an article good, though not so good as one previously known, can be produced more cheaply by a different process. And an invention is useful when the public are thereby enabled to do something which they could not do before, or to do in a more advantageous manner something which they could do before—or in other words, an invention is patentable which offers the public a useful choice. WELSCH INCANDESCENT GAS LIGHT CO. v. NEW INCANDESCENT (SUNLIGHT PATENT) GAS LIGHTING CO.

Validity.

60. — County court jurisdiction—Infringement of patent.

The right or privilege granted by letters patent for a new invention is a "franchise" within the meaning of s. 56 of the County Courts Act, 1888, and, therefore, an action for infringement of patent in which the validity of a patent comes in question, is excluded from the jurisdiction of the County Court.

61. — Provisional and complete specification—Variation—Patents, &c., Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 57), s. 5, sub-s. 3, s. 26.

In order that a patent may be valid, the provisional specification must describe the true nature of the invention, and the invention must be the same as that claimed in the complete specification. The law on this point is not altered by the Patents Act, 1883: a patentee of an invention for tapping beer barrels added to his complete specification a description of a part of his invention not stated in the provisional specification, and found to be the only novel or useful part of the invention:—

Held, that the provisional specification did not comply with the rule. NUTTALL v. HARGREAVES — C. A. [1892] 1 Ch. 23

62. — Provisional and complete specification—Variation—Nature of invention—Patents, &c., Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 57), ss. 5, sub-s. 3, 26.

A patent is invalid even if the invention is novel: (1) where the patent claimed in the complete specification is not the same as that claimed in the provisional specification; (2) where the patent when first granted is not useful for the main purpose for which it was designated; (3) where the specification was insufficient to enable an electrician of ordinary skill to carry it out at the time of first granting.

6. — Sale of poisons—Order taken by agent—"Seller"—Pharmacy Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 121), s. 15.

Section 15 of the Pharmacy Act, 1868, imposes a penalty upon any person "who shall sell" poisons without being duly qualified. The deft., who kept a florist's shop at W. and was not duly qualified to sell poisons, took from one of his customers an order for a "weed-killer," manufactured by a limited co. at L. and containing poison. The deft. did not keep any of the weed-killer in stock; but, in accordance with his usual practice, took the order, received from the customer the price of the quantity ordered, gave him a receipt, and forwarded the order to the co. at L., who thereupon supplied the customer with the weed-killer. The deft. received from the co. a commission of 25 per cent. in respect of all sales effected on orders sent to them by him. In an action for a penalty under s. 15:—

Held, that there was evidence to support a finding that the deft. was not the person who had the conduct and management of the sale, and, therefore, that he was not the seller of the poison within the meaning of the Act. PHARMACEUTICAL SOCIETY v. WHITE

The power conferred upon a police authority by the Police Act, 1890, s. 5, of requiring a pensioner to attend to be examined by a medical practitioner selected by them at a particular time and place, for the purpose of satisfying them that his incapacity to serve continues, cannot be exercised by the police authority for any collateral purpose.

A police authority has no power under s. 5,

sub-s. 4, of the Act to cancel a pension without requiring the pensioner to serve again.

A police authority has power to fix the time and place for the examination of the pensioner by the medical practitioner whom they may select under the provisions of s. 5 of the Police Act, 1890.

A police authority, on July 12, 1894, resolved that their former chief constable, to whom they had granted a pension on the ground of incapacity by infirmity, should attend at Warwick on a specified day and hour for the purpose of being examined by two doctors as to his state of health, and that if he failed to do so his pension should be cancelled.

The pensioner had been declared bankrupt in 1891, and in 1892 a warrant had been issued for his arrest, on the ground that he being out of England had not attended his adjourned examination in bankruptcy. He had been residing in Portugal since April, 1892; but in March, 1893, he had come to England for a day or two, and had been examined by a doctor, selected by the police authority, who had certified his continuing incapacity. He did not attend in compliance with the resolution of July 12, 1894, and the police authority cancelled his pension:—

Held, upon the evidence, that the police authority had used their statutory power of requiring the pensioner's attendance at Warwick, not for the purpose of satisfying themselves as to his continued incapacity, but for the purpose of assisting the Bankruptcy Court; and, consequently, that they had exceeded their jurisdiction, and the pensioner was entitled to a mandamus calling upon the police authority to shew cause why they should not pay him the arrears of his pension. REG. v. LORD LEIGH. In re KINCHANT C. A. [1897] 1 Q. B. 132

4. — Pension—Special-duty allowance—“Annual pay”—Police Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 45), Sched. I., rr. 1, 11.

By the Police Act, 1890, a constable who has completed a certain number of years approved service is entitled to a pension, which is to be calculated on the amount of his “annual pay” at the date of his retirement.

A constable was appointed by the commissioners of police to attend permanently on special duty at the House of Lords. For that special duty, which he discharged for several years up to the time of his retirement, he received the sum of 1s. a day in addition to his ordinary pay:—

Held, by Channell J. (Bucknill J. dissenting), that the extra remuneration for the special duty formed no part of his “pay” for the purposes of the calculation of his pension:—

Held, further, by Channell and Bucknill JJ., that for the purposes of calculating pension “annual pay” means three hundred and sixty-five times the amount of the daily pay, not fifty-two times the amount of the weekly pay. UPPERTON v. RIDLEY Div. Ct. [1900] 1 Q. B. 680 work—"Idle and disorderly persons"—Prosecution by guardians—Powers of Local Government Board—Jurisdiction of High Court—Injunction—Public authority—Practice—Declaration of right—Poor Relief Act, 1601 (43 Eliz. c. 2), s. 1—Vagrancy Act, 1824 (5 Geo. 4, c. 83), s. 3—Poor Law Amendment Act, 1834 (4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76), ss. 15, 52, 54—Poor Law Audit Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 91), s. 4—R. S. C., 1883, Order XXV., r. 5.

The classes of persons who are entitled to poor law relief are still (notwithstanding subsequent legislation) the same as those mentioned in s. 1 of the Act of 43 Eliz. c. 2.

Able-bodied men who can, if they choose, obtain work which will enable them to maintain themselves, their wives and families, but who, by reason of a strike or otherwise, refuse to accept that work, are not entitled to relief, except that, if they become physically incapable of working, the guardians may, to prevent their starving, give them temporary relief. But in that case the guardians are to prosecute them under the Vagrancy Act, 1824, s. 3, as "idle and disorderly persons." The wives and children of such men, however, are entitled to relief, though they themselves are not.

Seem also, that men who are prevented from accepting work by fear of physical violence are entitled to relief.

A general strike of workmen does not of itself create a case of "sudden and urgent necessity" within the meaning of s. 54 of the Poor Law Amendment Act, 1834.

The High Court has jurisdiction to restrain guardians from applying the poor-rates improperly. But this jurisdiction does not interfere with the power of the Loc. Gov. Bd. under s. 4 of the Poor Law Audit Act, 1848, to remit improper payments by guardians which have been disallowed by the auditor.

The plts. claimed an injunction to restrain the defts. from applying the rates in the relief of able-bodied men who could have obtained work, but who refused to accept it, and also a declaration of the illegality of such an application of the rates. At the trial of the action the plts. did not ask for an injunction:—

Held, that the Court had jurisdiction, and ought to make a declaration that any payment out of the rates for setting to work or for the relief of able-bodied men who could at the time obtain and perform work at wages sufficient to support themselves and their wives and families (if any) was unlawful and ought to be disallowed by the auditor of the guardians' accounts. But the declaration was not to include relief given to or for the wives and children of such men, and was in no way to affect the power of the Loc. Govt. Bd. to remit such disallowed payments, although unlawfully made, under any statute enabling them to do so.

The decision in Reg. v. Inhabitants of Tipton, (1842) 3 Q. B. 215, as to the settlement of paupers established the rule that the settlement in a parish gained by birth therein is a settlement in the parish as an entity, and not in any particular township of it, and if after a birth settlement has been gained in it the parish is divided by Act of Parliament into two or more separate parishes, so that it ceases to exist as one entire parish, the birth settlement gained in the old parish ceases to exist also.

This rule has been so long established and so frequently applied, that it cannot now be altered by the Court; and accordingly it was applied by C. A., affirming the decision of Collins and Ridley JJ., in the case of a parish which had become two separate parishes by the operation of the Local Government Act, 1894, s. 1, sub-s. 3. *DORKING UNION v. On inquiry as to the place of settlement of an illegitimate pauper, it was proved that the pauper was born in P. and the pauper's mother in S., and that neither of them had acquired a settlement of her own. Facts were proved upon which the Court held that the father of the pauper's mother had a settlement and that the pauper's mother derived that settlement from him, but did not make the necessary inquiries to ascertain what that settlement was, and adjudged that the pauper's settlement was in P. where she was born:—

Held, affirming the decision of C. A., that the adjudication was right; that the case came within the third paragraph of s. 35 of the Divided Parishes Act, 1876, and that since it could not be shewn what settlement the pauper derived from her mother without inquiring into the derivative settlement of the mother, the pauper must be deemed to be settled in the parish where she was born. PLYMOUTH UNION v. The proprietor of a newspaper circulating among stamp-collectors and others caused a die to be made for him abroad, from which imitations or representations of a current colonial postage-stamp could be produced. The only purpose for which the die was ordered by him, and was subsequently kept in his possession, was for making upon the pages of an illustrated stamp catalogue or newspaper, called “The Philatelist’s Supplement,” illustrations in black and white and not in colours of the colonial stamp in question, this special supplement being intended for sale as part of his newspaper:—

Held, that the possession of a die for making a false stamp, known to be such to its possessor, was, however innocent the use that he intended to make of it, a possession without lawful excuse within the meaning of the above section. DICKINS v. GILL. — Div. Ct. [1896] 2 Q. B. 310

A testator, after directing payment of his debts, funeral and testamentary expenses, and bequeathing several legacies, gave his residuary real and personal estate to trustees, as to certain parts of his real estate, upon trusts by way of settlement; and as to the residue of his real and personal estate, he gave the same to four persons, all sui juris, absolutely. And he declared that his trustees should have power to sell his real estate at such times as they should deem expedient, and should hold the proceeds upon the trusts of his will.

The trustees, purporting to exercise their power of sale, sold part of the real estate comprised in the latter residuary gift:—

Held, as between the vendors and the purchaser, that the power of sale was valid, not on the ground that the testator shewed any intention that it should be exercised for the purpose of division among the beneficiaries, but on the ground that the debts and legacies were charged on the real estate under the doctrine in Greville v. Browne, (1859) 7 H. L. C. 689, and that the power of sale was intended to be exercised for the purpose of raising money to pay the same if required.

2. — General or limited power of appointment

— Words of exception—Death of excepted object—General devise—Execution of power—Wills Act, 1837 (7 Will. 4 and 1 Vict. c. 26), s. 27.

A settlement created a power to appoint by deed or will to any persons "not being her said present husband or any friend or relative of his." The donee, after her husband's death, made a will consisting of a general devise of all her realty and personality:—

Held, that the power was not a power "to appoint in any manner" the donee might "think proper" within s. 27 of the Wills Act, 1837; and that the general devise was not an exercise of the power:

Held, further, that a reservation in a mortgage of the subject-matter of the power by the donee thereof of the equity of redemption to the donee, her heirs, &c., or as she or they should direct, instead of to the uses of the settlement conferring the power, did not get rid of the original power.

Semble, a power of appointment by deed or will in favour of any person "except A," may become a general power through A. being dead at the time the power is exercised, and thus be exercisable by a general devise under s. 27 of the Wills Act. In re BYRON'S SETTLEMENT. WILLIAMS v. MITCHELL

3. — Implication, Gift by—Power coupled with a trust—Gift to A. for life—Power of disposition by A. amongst a class—Gift over in default of appointment.

Where there is a gift to A. for life with a power to A. to appoint among a class, but no gift to the class, and no gift over in default of appointment, the Court is not bound, without more, to imply a gift to the class in default of the power being exercised.

In order to imply a gift there must be a clear indication in the will that the testator intended the power to be regarded in the nature of a trust, so that the class or some of the class should take.

A testatrix bequeathed to her husband a life interest in certain real property, and gave "him power to dispose of all such property by will amongst our children." The will contained no gift over in default of appointment. There were children, but the husband died intestate without having exercised the power of disposition:—

Held, that the power conferred on the husband was a mere power and not one coupled with a trust, and that consequently there was no gift to the children by implication, and that the heir-at-law of the testatrix was entitled.

4. — Jointure—Portions—Construction of Power.

Primâ facie, a jointure is an estate to the wife for life to take effect on the death of the husband.

Jamieson v. Trevelyan, (1854) 10 Ex. 269, explained.

A testator devised his real estates in strict settlement, subject to a trust for the accumulation of the rents and profits for a period of twenty-one years from his death, and he empowered every person becoming tenant for life under the will by deed or will (1) to appoint a rent-charge for any wife for her life or any less period; (2) to charge the devised estates with portions in favour of younger children; (3) to charge the said estates in the meantime with an annual sum not exceeding 4 per cent. interest upon the expectant portions of the children for their maintenance and education, such powers to take priority over the trust for accumulation. The first power was referred to in the will as a power of jointuring, and followed the form in Davidson's Conveyancing Precedents save for the omission of the words "by way of jointure." The second and third powers conferred on the donee an absolute discretion as to the mode and time of payment:—

Held, (1) that the first power did not authorize an appointment to a wife to take effect in the lifetime of her husband; (2) that the third power authorized an appointment of interest by a father in favour of his infant children to be made payable to himself as their guardian, and that such an appointment was not invalidated by the fact that the father had the means to support his children. *In re DE HOUGHTON. 6. — Mortgage—Absence of power to mortgage—Will—Real estate—Trust for sale—Postponement of sale—Improvements—Repairs.

A testator gave his real and residuary personal estate to trustees in trust for sale, with a power of postponement in the usual form, followed by a power (also in common form) during such postponement to manage and let the real estate and to make out of the income or capital of his real and personal estate any outlay they might consider necessary for renewals of leases, improvements, repairs, premiums on policies or otherwise for the benefit or in respect of his real or personal estate. The will contained no express power to raise money by mortgage or charge:—

Held, that the trustees had power to raise money by mortgage or charge of the real estate for the purpose of repairing houses forming part of the real estate. In re BELLINGER. DURELL v. BELLINGER - Kekewich J. [1898] 2 Ch. 534

7. — Payment of account duty—Specific appointees—Residuary appointees.

By a will, certain specific sums were appointed to some of testator's children, and the residue of the trust fund to another child. The will contained no direction that the specifically appointed sums should be paid free of duty:—

Held, that the matter was one of intention, and as the appointor had shewn no intention of burdening the residuary fund with the whole charge, each share must bear its proportion of the account stamp duty. In re CROFT. DEANE v. CROFT - Kekewich J. [1892] 1 Ch. 652

12. — Wife's property—Limitation to wife, "her heirs and assigns, or otherwise as she shall direct"—Power of appointment—Estate in fee—Real estate.

The Court held upon the construction of the settlement that it would be putting too great a strain upon the words "or otherwise as she shall direct" to say that they gave a power of disposition only apart from ownership.

If it had been intended to give a power of appointment, the power would probably have been inserted before the words of limitation. But the settlement went on to use similar words in the ultimate limitation to the husband, "his heirs, executors, administrators and assigns for his and their own use and benefit, or otherwise as he or they shall direct." It was not suggested that these words gave the husband a power of appointment apart from ownership, and there was no sound reason for construing the words of limitation to the wife differently. To hold that the settlement gave her a general power of appointment would practically place her in her husband's power and enable him to wheedle her property out of her, in which case she would forfeit the protection which the settlement was expressly intended to give her. Moreover, a general power of disposition during coverture would be inconsistent with the limited power of leasing given to the husband and wife during coverture. It was not necessary to say that the words in question were mere surplusage: the object of them was simply to explain how the wife might exercise her ownership—to shew how she might, if she chose, dispose of her property, that is, by giving a direction to her trustees so as, under any proposed disposition, to avoid the necessity for double conveyances. The words were commonly used by conveyancers, and were usually to be found in the proviso for redemption or reconveyance in a mortgage deed: in that case no one had ever suggested that the words gave the mortgagor a power of disposition apart from ownership. Appeal dismissed. FOXWELL v. VAN GRUTTEN - C. A. [1900] W. N. 97

Exercise.

13. — Attorney, Execution by—Appointment—Evidence—Presumption—Deed more than thirty years old—Appointment under special power purporting to be executed by attorney of donee—Power of attorney not produced.

Where a deed, more than thirty years old, purports to be an appointment under a special power, and to be executed by the attorney of the donee of the power, although, by reason of the antiquity of the deed, the execution of it by the attorney as such ought to be presumed, yet there is no rule of law which requires or justifies the presumption by the Court that the attorney was duly authorized to execute the power.

Where, therefore, in support of such a deed, no power of attorney was produced, nor any evidence forthcoming as to the purport or contents of any such power, it was held that the title of the appointees claiming under the deed was not made out. In re AIREY. AIREY v. STAPLETON

The Court will not decree specific performance of a contract to leave property by will made by a mere donee of a power of testamentary appointment. But where a wife in breach of such a covenant exercised her power in favour of her husband and others:—

A father by his will gave to trustees a sum of 30,000*l.* (to be invested as he directed), upon trust to pay the interest and annual proceeds thereof to his daughter during her life, and after her death the same sum, together with the interest and annual proceeds thereof, was to be held on such trusts as the daughter should appoint in favour of her children or grandchildren, with a trust over in default of appointment.

The daughter by her will recited verbatim the gift in the father's will, and then, in exercise of the power, appointed that "the said sum of 30,000*l.*, together with the interest and the annual proceeds thereof, by the said will of my father to be held in trust for me, my children and grandchildren, and over which I have such power of appointment as aforesaid," should after her death be held by the trustees of her father's will upon trust as to 1000*l.* "part thereof" for her daughter Emmeline; upon trust as to five sums of 1000*l.*, 4000*l.*, 6000*l.*, 6000*l.*, and 6000*l.* respectively, each of which was described as "other part of the said sum of 30,000*l.*," on trust for five others of her children respectively, and upon trust as to another sum of 6000*l.*, which was described as "the residue of the said sum of 30,000*l.*" for her other child. At the time of her death the securities on which the 30,000*l.* had been invested were worth 39,000*l.*:—

Held, by Kekewich J., [1899] W. N. 126, that only the sum of 30,000*l.* was effectually appointed by the will, and that the excess of 9000*l.* must go as in default of appointment.

17. — Foreigner—Conflict of laws—Power of appointment—Personal property—Execution—Domiciled foreigner—Unattested will—Validity—Construction—Administration with will annexed—Wills Act, 1837 (1 Vict. c. 26), ss. 9, 10, 27—Lord Kingsdown's Act (24 & 25 Vict. c. 114), s. 1.

A will of a domiciled foreigner, which is valid by the law of the testator's domicile and has been recognised as a valid will in this country by the Probate Div., is capable of operating as an execution of a power of appointment by will over personal estate under an English instrument, although the formalities required by ss. 9 and 10 of the Wills Act have not been observed.

D'Huart v. Harkness, (1865) 34 Beav. 324, followed and approved.

In re Kirwan's Trusts, (1883) 25 Ch. D. 373, and Hummel v. Hummel, [1898] 1 Ch. 642, distinguished, on the ground that they apply only to wills which owe their validity to Lord Kingsdown's Act (24 & 25 Vict. c. 114).

Although as a general rule a will is to be construed according to the law of the testator's domicile, this rule does not apply where there are indications on the face of the will that the testator wrote it with reference to the law of some other country.

A domiciled French subject, having a general power of appointment over a fund under an English instrument, left all her property to her husband by a holograph will made in French form and unattested. The will was valid by the law of France, and letters of administration with the will annexed were granted in this country. The will contained indications that it was intended to take effect in England as well as in France:—

Held, (1.) that it was competent for the testatrix to execute the power by a will in this form, notwithstanding ss. 9 and 10 of the Wills Act; (2.) that the same rules of construction ought to be applied to it as would be applied to an English will in the same terms and of the same date, including the rule of construction introduced by s. 27 of the Wills Act:

Held, therefore, that the general bequest operated as a valid execution of the power in favour of the husband. In re PRICE. TOMLIN v. LATTER - - Stirling J. [1900] W. N. 36; [1900] 1 Ch. 442 — Foreigner—French will.

See Nos. 22, 23, below.

18. — Foreigner—General power of appointment—Power to be exercised by will attested by two witnesses—Donee of the power a domiciled Frenchwoman—Holograph will of donee in French language unattested.

A testator by his will dated in 1822 bequeathed the residue of his personal estate to trustees upon trust for his children in equal shares, the shares of such of them as were daughters to vest in them at twenty-one, but to be retained by the trustees upon trust to pay the income to such daughters for their lives, and, after the decease of each daughter, to pay the principal and the accumulation (if any) of the dividends "to such person or persons, upon such trusts and for such intents and purposes, as she by her last will and testament in writing, or any writing in the nature of, or purporting to be, her last will and testament, or any codicil or codicils thereto to be respectively executed by her in the presence of and attested by two or more credible witnesses shall, notwithstanding her coverture, direct, or appoint, or give, or bequeath the same; and, in default of any such direction or appointment, gift, or bequest, unto such person or persons as at the time of her decease shall be her next of kin."

The testator died in 1824. The plt., who was one of the daughters of the testator and a domiciled Frenchwoman, by her will dated in 1894, and two codicils dated in 1899, all in the French language and all unattested, made divers bequests, and died in Nov. 1899.

The will and codicils were admitted to probate, being good in accordance with French law, but invalid according to English law:—

Held, upon the petition of the surviving daughter of the testatrix, who claimed to be her sole next of kin, for payment out of a sum of bank stock standing to the account of the plt., that the will of the testatrix did not operate as a good execution of the power contained in the will of her father, not having been executed in accordance with the formalities required by the will.

19. — Fraud on power—Appointment—Gift over on changing religion—Remoteness.

By a settlement made in 1847 on the marriage of W. property was settled upon trust to pay the income to W. for life, and after her death for such one or more of the children of the marriage in such shares and subject to such conditions and limitations and in such manner as W. should appoint by deed. There were three children of the marriage, T. J., and H., and in 1890 W. by deed appointed that after her death one-third of the property should be held in trust for T., another third in trust for J., and as to the remaining third upon trust to pay the income to H., if not then a member of the Roman Catholic Church or of any sisterhood, or until she should become a member of either, and, subject as aforesaid, as to the capital and income, to T. and J. W. died in 1893, and in 1895 H. became a member of a sisterhood:—

Held (1), following Hodgson v. Halford, (1879) 11 Ch. D. 959, that the appointment of H.'s third was not a fraud on the power, and (2), in accordance with the dicta in Boughton v. James, (1814) 1 Coll. C. C. 26, 46, that the appointment was not open to objection on the ground of remoteness. WAINWRIGHT v. MILLER

A will empowered A. to appoint a fund among her children or remoter issue. The donee made an appointment to certain of the objects of a power with a condition attached requiring the release of a claim against the donee:—

A. had a general power of appointment over a fund. B. devised a share of freehold property to trustees for A. on the same trusts as the said fund. The freehold property was vested by a private Act in trustees for sale. It was sold and the proceeds invested in the purchase of other freehold land. In a partition action this land was sold, and A.'s share paid into court, and invested in Metropolitan Board of Works Stock. A. married a domiciled Frenchman, and died leaving a will in French which gave to T. "all the personal property and rights (tous les biens et droits mobiliers) which I shall leave at my death, and which shall form part of my succession":—

A daughter of a testator had under his will a general power of appointment by will over a share of his residuary estate. The daughter died in France, having while residing there made a disposition of her property by a writing signed by her but not attested, the writing being in form a valid will according to French law:—

Held, that the writing, even if admissible to probate under s. 1 of Lord Kingsdown's Act (24 & 25 Vict. c. 114), did not operate as an execution by the daughter of her general power of appointment by will, since it had not been attested by two or more witnesses as required by ss. 9 and 10 of the Wills Act (1 Vict. c. 26).

A married woman had power, in the event of her husband surviving her, to appoint the income of a fund to him during his life. She had also, in the same event, a general power to appoint by will the capital of the fund as she should think fit. By her will she appointed out of the capital of the fund several sums, including 1100*l.* to D. "in satisfaction of a debt to that amount due from me to her." And she further appointed that (subject as aforesaid) the trustees should pay the whole of the income of the fund to her husband during his life. The husband survived her. There was in fact no debt due from her to D., but there was a debt of 1100*l.* due from her husband to D., and the evidence satisfied the Court that, in the appointment of the 1100*l.*, she intended to refer to that debt.

She had at her death separate property applicable to the payment of her debts, but that property was insufficient for the purpose by more than 1100*l.* Some time after her death the husband paid the debt to D.

Held, that the appointment had not failed, but was effective, and that the 1100*l.* must be applied in payment of the debts of the testatrix. In re HODGSON. DARLEY v. HODGSON

And he empowered the trustees of his will to sell the property with the consent in writing of the persons for the time being in possession under the foregoing limitations if adult, and if not, then at the discretion of the trustees.

By her will the daughter, in exercise of her power, appointed the real estate to trustees in trust for sale and to stand possessed of the proceeds upon trusts for her children:—

Held, that the legal estate was well appointed by the daughter's will to her trustees in trust for sale, and that they were therefore the proper persons to sell.

An appointment of real estate under a power to trustees for objects of the power passes the legal estate in it as effectively as if the property appointed were money instead of land.

Testatrix had no other testamentary power of appointment. She died in 1883 leaving her husband her surviving:—

By a post-nuptial settlement power was given to a husband by deed or deeds to appoint a fund, after the determination of his own interest therein, amongst his children, subject to a proviso empowering him by deed or will to appoint one-fourth of the income to "his wife" for her life. The husband in exercise of these powers by deed irrevocably appointed one-fourth of the income in favour of his then wife for her life, and, "subject and without prejudice to the trust" in her favour "thereinbefore limited, if the same should take effect," he appointed the fund amongst his two daughters (who were adults) and his one son (who was under age) in equal thirds, reserving, as to his son, a power of revocation which he subsequently exercised by irrevocably appointing one-third of the fund to such son absolutely. The then wife afterwards died; the husband married again; and on his second marriage he purposed by deed irrevocably to appoint one-fourth of the income of the fund to his second wife during her life:—

Held by C. A. (affirming the decision of Kekewich J.), that the appointment of income in favour of the second wife was ineffectual. In re HANCOCK. MALCOLM v. BURFORD-HANCOCK C. A. [1896] 2 Ch. 173

The joint power was not referred to. The wife died, and the husband appointed the property to other objects:—

The fact that a release of a limited power of appointment will result in a benefit to the donee of the power is not sufficient to make the release fraudulent and void. The doctrines applicable to the fraudulent exercise of a power of appointment do not apply to the release of a power not coupled with a duty.

A father, tenant for life under his marriage settlement, had, in the events which had happened, an exclusive power to appoint for the benefit of a daughter or her issue, and in default of appointment the fund went to the daughter absolutely; the father, being in want of money, released this power, and subsequently he and his daughter mortgaged their interests in the fund for 10,000*l.*, the whole of which was paid to the father, and applied by him for his own purposes:—

while unmarried—Gift over on death or marriage of surviving unmarried daughter to other children and any daughters then married.

By a marriage settlement in 1793 a fund was settled in trust for the husband and wife successively for life with remainder for children of the marriage as the husband and wife should jointly appoint. In 1835, there being then seven children of the marriage, including three unmarried daughters, the husband and wife appointed out of the fund 1500*l.* to be paid to each of the three unmarried daughters "who should thereafter marry"; and, so long as those three daughters, or any or either of them, should be living and unmarried, directed that the income of the residue of the fund should be paid to them, or such of them as should from time to time be living and unmarried, equally; and "in case one or two only of them should marry" (which happened) then that, after the death or marriage of such one as should be last living and unmarried, the capital of the residue should be paid to the four other children and such of the three unmarried daughters "as should marry as aforesaid," equally:—

Held, (1) that the ultimate gift over of the residue of the fund was void for remoteness, as the class was not necessarily ascertainable within twenty-one years after the death of the survivor of the appointors; (2) that the appointment of the three sums of 1500*l.* was also void for remoteness, as it could not be ascertained whether a daughter would marry within twenty-one years after the death of the survivor of the appointors; and (3) that the appointment of the income of the residue of the fund to the three unmarried daughters was a valid appointment of one-third to each daughter so long as she was living and unmarried; but, so far as it purported to be a gift over of such one-third on her marriage, was void for remoteness.

In exercise of a power created by a marriage settlement of real estate (executed in 1819) the husband and wife by deed (executed in Sept., 1848) jointly appointed that the estate should after the death of the survivor of them (they being tenants for life under the settlement) be to the use of the three children then born (naming them) of the only son of the marriage, and all other his child and children who should be living at the death of the survivor of the appointors, and to the heirs and assigns of such of them as should attain the age of twenty-five, equally as tenants in common. But in case either of the three named children of the son and any such other child and children as aforesaid should die under twenty-five, then immediately after his or her death to the use of the survivors or other of them, their, his, or her heirs and assigns. Provided that, in case the appointment intended to be thereby made to the after-born children of the son should from any cause fail of effect, the appointors did thereby further declare that the deed should operate as an appointment of the hereditaments to the three then born children of the son, or such of them as should attain twenty-five, their respective heirs and assigns. The husband died in 1867, and his widow died in Nov. 1873. There were seven children of the son, all of whom were then living, but only the three elder ones had attained twenty-five. The other four attained twenty-five subsequently:—

Held, that the limitations of the deed of appointment took effect as legal contingent remainders on the death of the widow; that each of the seven children of the son took one-seventh of the property for life; and that the three who had attained twenty-five at the death of the widow took the remainder in fee (subject to the life estates) equally between them as tenants in common.

In an action for specific performance of an agreement to take a lease of a house, or in the alternative for damages, the plt. had before the trial given the deft. notice of his intention to let the house to another person, and in pursuance of such notice had so done. At the hearing counsel for the plt. limited his case to a claim for damages only, and concluded his opening without asking for leave to amend his pleadings.

The deft., relying upon Hipgrave v. Case, (1885) 28 Ch. D. 350, then took the objection that the plaintiff, having by his own act rendered specific performance impossible, was not entitled to damages. Counsel for the plaintiff in reply asked for leave to amend. The Court gave leave to amend upon the terms that the deft. should be treated as being in the same position as if the action had been brought in the Q. B. Div. for damages only. NICHOLSON v. BROWN

Kekewich J. read the following announcement as to the future conduct of business in the Ch. Div.:—

From the commencement of Hilary Sittings, 1901, there will be a new distribution of work in the Ch. Div. It is intended that all the six judges shall be grouped in pairs, and that one of each pair shall in turn take witness actions only, the other devoting himself to non-witness business, including chamber summonses.

Joyce J. will be associated with Kekewich J., the other pairs being Byrne and Buckley JJ. and Cozens-Hardy and Farwell JJ.

In Hilary Sittings the witness action lists will be taken by Kekewich, Byrne, and Cozens-Hardy JJ. to the exclusion of all other business, except such motions and summonses as, being pending before them at the conclusion of the present sittings, it is convenient that they should dispose of, and except also applications in matters with which they are familiar, and which, for that reason, it is convenient that they should dispose of rather than others. On the other hand, the non-witness business only, including chamber summonses, will be taken during the same sittings by Farwell, Buckley and Joyce JJ.; but nevertheless they will dispose of any witness actions pending before them which it is more convenient that they should try; and will leave to the other judges those cases with which such other judges are familiar above referred to.

The above redistribution of business will involve some alteration of chamber arrangements. One of Farwell J.'s masters, namely, Master Binns Smith, will be transferred to Kekewich and Joyce JJ. and Master Satow to Cozens-Hardy and Farwell JJ., and these masters will take with them the business to which they have hitherto attended under Farwell J. The Liverpool and Manchester business (now assigned to Farwell J.) will be assigned to Cozens-Hardy and Farwell JJ. PRACTICE NOTE

14. — Jurisdiction—"Court or a judge"—Costs of adjournment into Court—R. S. C., 1883, Order XXVI., r. 1.

Held, that the master had jurisdiction in applications under Order XXVI., r. 1, to make an order for the judge. That where the master is prepared to make for a judge a proper order, if, at the instance of the party resisting the order, the matter is adjourned to the judge in chambers, or into court, the costs of the adjournment are in the discretion of the judge. That special care should be taken in reference to the costs of adjournment in cases where, from the nature of the application, it was clear that the proper necessary costs of the application must be borne by the applicant. Upon the merits:—

25. — Appeal—Special leave—Security for costs.

A party who has sued or defended in formâ pauperis in the Court below is entitled to appeal as a pauper without either giving security for costs or obtaining special leave. BIGGS v. DAGNALL - Div. Ct. [1895] 1 Q. B. 207

26. — Appeal in formâ pauperis—Special leave to appeal—Jurisdiction to order a stay of sale in execution—Appeals from the Windward Islands and the Royal Court of St. Lucia.

Where a petitioner had obtained leave to appeal in regular form, an order granting leave to prosecute it in formâ pauperis was made.

On petition for special leave to appeal (1) from a decree in a matrimonial separation suit, (2) in a mortgage suit, (3) from an order for execution of the last-mentioned decree:—

Held, that there being ground for appealing from the mortgage decree, the leave should be extended to both suits, which were mixed up together.

Their Lordships have no jurisdiction to order a stay of sale in execution. QUINLAN v. CHILD. QUINLAN v. QUINLAN. Ex parte QUINLAN 29. — Setting down—Notice to persons served with notice of judgment, but not having entered appearance—R. S. C., Order XVI., rr. 40, 41, 42; Order XXXVI., r. 21.

Plt. was a residuary legatee of R., who died in 1860. In 1893 an order was made for accounts and inquiries in pursuance of an originating summons. Notice of this order was served on other residuary legatees, who did not enter an appearance. A memorandum of this service was duly entered, the chief clerk made his certificate, and the action was set down for further consideration:—

Held, that it was not necessary to give the other residuary legatees notice of the setting down. It was a matter for the discretion of the judge, and in the absence of some special reason such notice need not be given. In re ROLFE. Fyson v. JOHNSON - North J. [1894] W. N. 77

A shareholder in a co. commenced an action against the co. and H., its vendor and promoter, claiming, as against the co., rescission of his contract to take shares with rectification of the register, on the ground of misrepresentation in the prospectus; and as against H. a declaration that the prospectus was fraudulent within s. 38 of the Companies Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 131), damages and an indemnity, and a declaration that H. was liable, under the Directors' Liability Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 64), to pay the plt. compensation.

H. having become bankrupt, the plt. obtained an order, under R. S. C., Order XVII., r. 4, to carry on proceedings against his trustee in bankruptcy. On a motion by the trustee to discharge this order:—

Held, that so far as the action against H. was one for deceit, or based on s. 38 of the Companies Act, 1867, the claims were not provable in bankruptcy by virtue of s. 37, sub-s. 1, of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, and therefore the trustee was not a necessary party; so far as the claim against H. was based on the Directors' Liability Act, 1890, if it was not provable in bankruptcy, then the trustee was not a necessary party; if it was provable, then the proper course for the plt. to pursue was to go into the Bankruptcy Court and prove his claim; for these reasons the motion must succeed, and the order allowing the plt. to carry on proceedings against the trustee must be discharged. GREENWOOD v. HUMBER & Co. (PORTUGAL), LD. ROMER J. [1898] W. N. 162 (3)

89. — Adding parties—Pending action—Receiving order in bankruptcy against defendant—"Change or transmission of interest or liability"—Official receiver—Carrying on proceedings against—R. S. C., 1883, Order XVII., r. 4—Bankruptcy Acts, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 52); 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 71).

An official receiver in bankruptcy, having no estate or interest vested in him nor any power conferred on him by the Bankruptcy Acts of bringing or defending actions, stands in a different position from a trustee in a bankruptcy, or a trustee of any composition or scheme in bankruptcy.

Accordingly the making, after the commencement of an action, of a receiving order against a deft. does not cause any such change or transmission of interest or liability within the meaning of Order XVII., r. 4, as to render it necessary or desirable that the official receiver should be made a party to the action.

Such a transmission of interest or liability within rule 4 of the order would, however, take place when an adjudication order was made, or when a composition or scheme was approved by the Court. In re BERRY. DEFFIELD v. WILLIAMS [1896] 1 Ch. 939

90. — Adding plaintiff without authority—Stay of proceedings—Costs—Liability of solicitor—R. S. C., 1883, Order XVI., r. 11—"Own consent in writing."

Rule 11 of Order XVI. of R. S. C., 1883, provides that no person shall be added as a plt. or as the next friend of a plt., in an action "without his own consent in writing thereto":—

Held, that the consent must be the consent of the party himself in writing, and signed by him; and the consent in writing of his solicitor on his behalf, signed by the solicitor, though written and signed in his presence, would not be sufficient to bind him.

Decision of Kekewich J. reversed.

Where a person has been made a plt. in an action without proper authority, and orders have, without his knowledge, been made against him, under which he is liable to pay costs to the defts., the practice is, in accordance with the rule laid down in Reynolds v. Howell, (1873) L. R. 8 Q. B. 398, and followed in Nurse v. Durnford, (1879) 13 Ch. D. 761, and Newbiggin-by-the-Sea Gas Co. v. Armstrong, (1879) 13 Ch. D. 310, to direct a stay of proceedings in the name of the person named as plt., and all proceedings against him in the action since he was added as plt., and to strike out his name for the purpose of future proceedings. The solicitor who wrongly made him a party will be ordered to pay all his costs, and

The plt. died, and his executors applied to be substituted as pls.:—

Held, that, though the deft. had entered an appearance to the writ, it was not too late for him to take the objection: but

Four persons, each of whom separately took debentures on the faith of the statements in a prospectus and covering letter issued by the directors of a co., joined as co-plts. in an action against the directors, claiming damages for misrepresentations contained in the prospectus and covering letter:—

After decree fixing the liability, but leaving damages to be assessed, the mistake was discovered and application was made under Order XVI., r. 2, to substitute the cargo owner for his agent as co-plt. :—

Held, that the decree was not final, and that there was power to make the order under Order XVI., rr. 2, 11, subject to production of the written consent of the cargo owner. THE DUKE OF BUCKLEUCH (No. 2) - C. A. [1892] P. 201

113. — Representative action — Class—Action on behalf of a class of the public — R. S. C., Order XVI., r. 9 ; Order XXV., r. 5—Covent Garden Regulation Act (9 Geo. 4, c. cxviii.).

The plts. (six in number) sued on behalf of themselves and all other the growers of fruit, flowers, vegetables, roots and herbs, within the meaning of the Act for the Regulation of Covent Garden Market (9 Geo. 4, c. cxviii.), to enforce certain preferential rights to stands in the market, which they alleged to have been given to the class of growers by the Act. The sole deft. was the lord of the market :—

Held (V. Williams L.J. dissenting), that there being a bona fide question as to the construction of the Act, the plts., as representing the class of growers, who had an interest in common, could maintain the action, but that the Att.-Gen. must be added as a deft. to represent the rest of the public who were interested in disputing the alleged preference :

Held, by V. Williams L.J., that the growers had not a community of interest in the subject-matter of the action, but (agreeing with the rest of the Court) that, if the plts. could maintain the action as representing a class, the Att.-Gen. must be made a party.

In an action against two defts. the statement of claim alleged that each of the defts. by their several acts, and that the defts. by their combined acts, obstructed the plt.'s access to his premises, and claimed damages against them and each of them and an injunction :—

The plts. brought an action against the defts. for negligently excavating near the plts'. house, and thereby damaging it. The defts. in their defence denied liability, and attributed the damage wholly or in part to the negligence of a water co. in leaving their water-main insufficiently stopped. On an application by the plts. to add the water co. as defts. :—

Held, that the causes of action against the defts. and the water co. being in respect of separate torts, though the resulting damage might be the same in each case, the water co. could not be joined as defts. THOMPSON v. LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL - C. A. [1899] 1 Q. B. 840

120. — Separate causes of action, Joint and—Joinder of plaintiffs—R. S. C., Order XVI., r. 1.

The plts., the two Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, claimed an injunction to restrain the defts., who were publishers of educational and other works, from publishing and selling books or publications bearing the titles "The Oxford and Cambridge Publications" or "The Oxford and Cambridge Edition," and from using the words "Oxford and Cambridge," so as to lead to the belief that the publications of the defts. were publications of the Universities or of either of them, or issued from the University Presses. The defts. had published a series of books bearing the titles complained of by the plts. :—

Held, that the action arose out of the same series of transactions; that common questions of fact would arise, namely, the fact of publication and the fact that a belief would be induced that the publications of the defts. were those of the plts.; that, therefore, the conditions mentioned in Stroud v. Lawson, [1898] 2 Q. B. 44, as being necessary to bring a case within Order XVI., r. 1, were fulfilled; and that consequently the plts. were entitled to join in one action. *UNIVERSITIES OF OXFORD AND CAMBRIDGE v. 122. — Admission by defendant—Proceeds of sale of trust securities paid away by defendant—Payment into court on motion.

In an answer to an interlocutory motion that the deft. should pay into court money which arose from the sale of shares, of which he had been a trustee for the plt., but which he alleged (though the plt. denied it) that the plt. had given to him, the deft. admitted that he had received the proceeds of sale, and had transferred the shares to the purchasers. But he deposed: "Before any question was raised as to the transfers I in good faith paid away and disposed of all the purchase-money in the belief that I was entitled thereto, and no part thereof is now in my hands, and I have no power over the shares or any of them" :—

Held, that it was not shewn that the purchase-money was not under the defts.' control, and that he must be ordered to pay the amount into court. In re BENSON. ELLESTON v. PILLERS North J.

Upon an interlocutory motion by the plts. (second mortgagees) that the defts. (the first mortgagee and his solicitor) should be ordered to pay into court the balance of the proceeds of sale of the mortgaged property (which the solicitor admitted that he had received for his client), after deducting what was due in respect of the first mortgage, the solicitor claimed to retain also the amount of payments which he had made to the executors of the mortgagor :—

Held, that though those payments were improper, yet, as the amount of them was not in the hands of the defts., they could not be ordered to pay it into court upon an interlocutory motion, and they were ordered to pay only the balance of the sale moneys after deducting that amount and the amount due on the first mortgage. *CROMPTON & EVANS' UNION BANK v. 125. — Admissions in letters before action.

126. — Admission of plaintiff's claim—Striking out counter-claim—Action—Damages—Injunction—Defence—Denial of liability—Satisfaction—R. S. C., 1883, Order XXII., rr. 1, 6.

A landowner brought an action claiming damages for trespass, and also an injunction. The deft. put in a defence and counter-claim alleging a right by custom to go on the land, and, under R. S. C., Order XXII., r. 1, with his defence, though denying liability, paid a sum into court by way of satisfaction of his liability, if any, in respect of the matters complained of. Under rule 6 the plt. took the money out on notice to the deft. that he accepted it "in satisfaction of the claim in respect of which it is paid in."

On an application by the plt. to strike out the counter-claim on the ground that the deft. had by his payment into court, followed by the plt.'s acceptance, admitted the plt.'s entire cause of action:—

Held, by the C. A. (affirming the decision of Stirling J., [1899] W. N. 57), that there had been no such admission by the deft. as to preclude him from prosecuting his counter-claim setting up the custom, nor (semble) such acceptance in satisfaction by the plt. as to preclude him from prosecuting his claim for an injunction, the payment into court being by rule 1 confined to the plt.'s claim for damages only. COOTE v. FORD

C. A. [1899] 2 Ch. 93

127. — Admissions—Motion by some plaintiffs only.

A motion under Order XXXII., r. 6, for an order against a deft. on admissions of fact must be made by all the plts. in the action, and not merely by some of them. Accordingly, where, in an action by a tenant for life and the reversioners under a settlement against the trustees to make good a breach of trust, the reversioners alone moved under the above rule for an order on one of the defts. to pay capital moneys into court on admissions, the Court refused to entertain the motion in the absence of the tenant for life.

139. — Deposit—Jurisdiction—Life Assurance Companies Acts, 1870 to 1872—Accident insurance company.

Petition by the association for the payment out of court of a sum of 17,874*l.* 14*s.* 5*d.* New Consols, representing the deposit of 20,000*l.* required by the Bd. of Trade under the Life Assurance Companies Acts, 1870 to 1872.

As the Bd. of Trade intimated that insurance of the kind contemplated was life insurance so far as related to fatal accidents, the 20,000*l.* deposit was required and paid on registration. After the decision of Lancashire Insurance Co. v. Inland Revenue, [1899] 1 Q. B. 353, that employers' liability policies similar to those granted by the association were contracts of indemnity and not policies of insurance against accident, the directors communicated with the Bd. of Trade with a view to obtaining payment out of court of the 20,000*l.* deposit, when they were informed that this was a matter for the Chancery Division, but that, if the memorandum of association was amended so as to exclude life insurance business, the Bd. of Trade would raise no objection to repayment.

Held, that the Court had jurisdiction. Order made for payment out of the Consols in court to the association, as asked. In re Wool Industries Employers' Insurance Association, Ltd.

Petition for payment out of court of fund to which petitioner was now absolutely entitled. She was tenant for life of the fund, and had taken assignments of all the reversionary interests. One of the reversioners was a married woman who, before she assigned, was entitled to a share of the reversion as her separate property. She and her husband refused to make an affidavit of no settlement.

The Court, on proof of this, and an affidavit by the reversioners' brother to the effect that he knew the circumstances, and that there was no settlement, on the authority of Rowland v. Oakley, (1850) 14 Jur. (N.S.) 845, made the order for payment out. Timothy v. Crown

Held, upon the question of jurisdiction, that though In re Bird's Trusts, (1876) 3 Ch. D. 214, and Lewis v. Hillman, (1852) 3 H. L. C. 607, were not directly in point, being decisions under the Trustee Relief Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict. c. 96), the Court should be shrewd in overcoming all objections to deciding on petition any questions concerning the distribution of a fund in court under whatever Act and under whatever circumstances it was paid in; but where a question occurred which might involve rectification or restitutio in integrum it was the duty of the petitioners to state clearly the alleged grounds for the decision asked.

Upon the merits, held, following Noel v. Bewley, (1829) 3 Sim. 103, that though the assignment was of a defective title, yet as the assignor afterwards acquired a good title to the one-sixth share, the Court ought to make that good title available to make the assignment effectual. The respondents were therefore entitled to the whole of the one-sixth share. In re HOFFE'S ESTATE ACT, 1855 — Kekewich J. [1900] W. N. 114

145. — Petition dispensed with.

Where in an action the incumbrances on a fund in court had been ascertained, and the fund was only sufficient to pay the first ten of such incumbrances, an order was made for payment out without requiring a petition under the Trustee Relief Act. A fund arising from debentures issued by the deft. co. and guaranteed by the South African Republic was by arrangement lodged with two trustees, one nominated by the Republic and the other by the co., pending the completion of a ry. which the co. was making under a concession by the Republic. The nominee of the co. having died, the Republic brought an action here, the fund being in England, to have a new trustee appointed and the fund paid to the two trustees. The co. put in a defence and counter-claim. By their defence they alleged various grounds of complaint against the Republic as making it inequitable that they should have any control over the fund, and among other things a letter addressed to the co. by the Railway Commr. of the Republic, a copy of which was forwarded by him to the London Stock Exchange, making various charges against the co. which the co. alleged to be untrue. By counter-claim the co. repeated these grounds of complaint, and alleged that they had sustained heavy loss through the letter, which they alleged to be libellous, and claimed 100,000*l.* damages for libel. North J. in chambers ordered this allegation and the claim for damages to be expunged:—

Held, that this order was right, for that if the plt. had been an individual resident in this country the counter-claim for libel would have been struck out, and the defts. left to bring a separate action, inasmuch as the claim for damages for libel could not be conveniently tried in an action for appointing a new trustee and protecting a trust fund, and that the fact that the co. could not bring a separate action for libel against the Republic was not a sufficient ground for allowing the counter-claim for libel to go on. *SOUTH AFRICAN REPUBLIC v. In an action for the price of goods supplied, the defts. counter-claimed for damages for breach by the plts. of a contract. The plts. in their reply denied that the contract was binding on them, and further alleged that, if it was binding, the defts. had committed breaches of it which caused them loss, and they counter-claimed to set off the loss so sustained against the defts.' counter-claim. Upon an application to strike out the counter-claim in the reply:—

Held, that as the plts. did not rely upon the counter-claim in the reply as an independent claim, but merely as a protection against the defts.' counter-claim, the counter-claim was properly raised in the reply and ought not to be struck out.

In an action in the High Court the deft. counter-claimed for damages for slander. The deft. became bankrupt, and the action was stayed except as to the counter-claim. The plt. sought to have security for costs, or else to have the action remitted to the county court:—

Motion by deft. for leave to put in a defence notwithstanding that the time for so doing had expired, and that he had entered into an agreement with the plts. not to put in any defence.

Action for specific performance of an agreement by deft. to purchase certain leasehold houses. The deft. had some difficulty in finding the purchase-money, and delay took place in completion. Considerable indulgence was shewn by plts. to deft., who ultimately, having accepted the title, gave the agreement above mentioned. He then ascertained that the lease of the premises contained a reservation of minerals, and, having been granted by a tenant for life whose powers were similar to those of a tenant for life under the Settled Land Acts, was invalid according to the recent decision of Kekewich J. in In re Newell and Nevill's Contract, [1900] 1 Ch. 90. [NOTE.—This case was disapproved of by C. A.: In re Gladstone, [1900] 2 Ch. 101. See SETTLED LAND. 73.]

The Court, in the exercise of its discretion, allowed the deft. to defend to the extent of pleading that the lease was bad on the ground that, being granted by a tenant for life, it contained a reservation of minerals. The leave was limited to that defence only, and stringent conditions as to payment of costs were imposed upon deft. Leave to appeal granted. SCOTT v. MOXON

ment had been given, and executed a deed releasing the deft. from the judgment debt and costs. Subsequently the plt. carried in his bill of costs, and applied to the county court judge for an order to tax, upon the ground that the release had been obtained by misrepresentation. The judge, after hearing evidence, found that the execution of the deed had been obtained by misrepresentation, and make an order that the costs should be taxed, and should be paid together with the balance remaining due under the judgment. The deft. in that action thereupon brought the present action in the High Court for a declaration that he had been released from the judgment debt and costs, and for an injunction to restrain further proceedings to enforce payment thereof:—

Held, that as the question raised in this action was identical with that decided by the county court judge upon the interlocutory application, and had been decided by a court of competent jurisdiction, the action ought to be stayed as frivolous and vexatious and an abuse of the process of the Court. *STEPHENSON v. In previous proceedings in another action he had admitted upon oath several of the material statements which he now denied, and had not denied any of the others:—

Held (by Romer J. and by C. A.), that though the Court will not on affidavit evidence order a pleading to be struck out on the ground that the statements in it are false, the circumstances in the present case shewed the statement of defence to be frivolous and vexatious, and one which ought to be struck out as being an abuse of the procedure of the Court.

A writ was issued and served on a sole deft., who applied for and obtained leave to serve a third party notice on D., who was out of the jurisdiction, and the plt. obtained leave to add D. as a deft. and to amend the writ. No affidavit was made under Order XI., r. 4, of good cause of action, and the amended writ served on D. was not properly indorsed according to Form 5 of Appx. A to R. S. C., 1883:—

Held, that these omissions were mere irregularities, and did not entitle D. to have the writ and the service set aside. DICKSON v. LAW

214. — Out of jurisdiction—Writ—Naval officer at sea—R. S. C., Order XI., r. 4.

An officer in Her Majesty's navy is within the jurisdiction so long as he is on board his ship, and Order XI. does not apply. Evidence that officer was in a Queen's ship on the Mediterranean Station, and would ultimately put into Malta:—

Held, not sufficient to shew in what "place or country the debt is or probably may be found" within the meaning of Order XI., r. 4, and that leave to serve a writ on him out of the jurisdiction must be refused. SEAGROVE v. PARKS

In order to bring a case within Order XI., r. 1 (g) (relating to the power of necessary and proper parties who are outside the jurisdiction), the plt. must have an apparent cause of action against the person served within the jurisdiction, and must not merely have joined such person in order to be able to sue, within the jurisdiction, a person who is out of the jurisdiction.

The plts. brought an action against the owners of a British ship for salvage services performed abroad, and claimed to serve notice of the writ on the owners of the cargo who were foreigners residing out of the jurisdiction:—

Held, that the cargo owners were "proper" parties within Order XI., r. 1 (g), to an action properly brought against persons duly served within the jurisdiction. Service allowed. THE "ELTON"

217. — Out of jurisdiction—Writ—"Necessary or proper party"—Separate relief—R. S. C., 1883, Order VI. r. 1; Order XI., rr. 1 (g), 4.

To bring a case within Order XI., r. 1 (g), the relief sought against the debt, outside the jurisdiction must be connected, but need not be identical with that sought against the debt, within the jurisdiction.

C. was the trustee in bankruptcy of A., a beneficiary under the will of a Canadian testator; the property was vested in B., an executor domiciled in Canada. A. had previous to his bankruptcy mortgaged his interest to persons in England. C. brought an action against the mortgagees to redeem the mortgage and for accounts, and against B. that as trustee for A. he should pay the sum due to the mortgagees and account for the property to C. Before the writ was served on the mortgagees, C. obtained leave to issue a concurrent writ for service on B. In his affidavit C. did not state that B. was a necessary or proper party to the action, nor that

C. believed that he had good cause of action against B. The concurrent writ was marked "concurrent," but not so the copy served on B.:—

Held, that the service was irregular, and further that B. was not a "necessary or proper party to an action properly brought," for the relief sought against B. was not connected with that sought against the mortgagees. *COLLINS v. The plt. sought to serve one debt., an Irish co. out of the jurisdiction, with a writ in an action for malicious prosecution. The other debt., the co.'s manager, had been served within the jurisdiction:—

219. — Out of jurisdiction—Writ—"Necessary or proper party"—Tort—Defendant resident in Scotland—"Comparative cost and convenience—R. S. C., Order XI., rr. 1 (g), 2.

Service out of the jurisdiction on a person out of the jurisdiction who is "a necessary or proper party to an action properly brought against some other person duly served within the jurisdiction," can be had in an action of tort, but the jurisdiction is discretionary. Where an action of deceit was brought against three persons, two of whom were resident in England and one in Scotland:—

Held, that as under the circumstances comparative cost and convenience were in favour of proceedings in England, service out of the jurisdiction ought to be allowed. Comparative cost and convenience in Order XI., r. 2, means not that of the person sought to be served only, but of the parties generally. WILLIAMS v. CARTWRIGHT - C. A. (Lord Esher M.R. diss.)

220. — Out of jurisdiction—Writ—"Necessary or proper party"—Scotch executrix—R. S. C., Order XI., rr. 1 (f), 2.

Plt. instituted an action in England against debts, in England, and executrices native resident in Scotland and acting under a Scotch confirmation of a deceased Scotsman, to obtain a declaration that the deceased was domiciled in Bolivia, and an injunction against dealing with the estate. An order for service was obtained under Order XI., r. 1 (f), on the executrices. On motion to discharge the order:—

Held, (1) that an injunction against the executrices to restrain them from doing any act within the jurisdiction would fall within Order XI., r. 1 (f); (2) that as the Scotch Courts had seisin of the case, and plt. intended to proceed there, the order for service should be discharged. *In re DE PENNY. Rule 23 of Order LI. of the County Court Rules, 1889, which relates to service out of the jurisdiction, though more extensive than any existing rule applicable to the High Court, is within the powers of making rules conferred by s. 164 of the County Courts Act, 1888.

Service having been effected in Scotland under Order LI., r. 23, of the County Court Rules, 1889, on a debt in an administration action, the action was transferred to the High Court on the ground that the value of the estate exceeded the limit of the jurisdiction of the county court. The debt answered interrogatories in the county court, but objected to the order for service both in the county court and the High Court:—

Held, that, though the order for service would have been valid if the action had remained in the county court, after the transfer, the question depended upon Order XI., rr. 1 (d) and 2, of the Rules of the Supreme Court, and that the debt ought to have an opportunity of filing evidence as to the domicile of the testator, and as to whether there was an adequate concurrent jurisdiction in Scotland:—

Held, further, that there had been no waiver by the debt. of the right to object to the service. WOOD v. MIDDLETON Stirling J. [1897] 1 Ch. 151

The notice of motion and judgment were duly served on the defts., but the judgment did not bear upon it any such memorandum as required by Order XL., r. 5.

Per Kekewich J.: There was a consensus of opinion among the judges of the Ch. Div. that in the case of an undertaking of this kind there ought either to be service in accordance with Order XL., r. 5, or an order in the nature of a four-day order. Admittedly, no one had ever had the point before him in his experience. Having regard to Thomas v. Nokes, (1868) L. R. 6 Eq. 521, he thought that, notwithstanding what was said in Gilbert v. Endean, (1878) 9 Ch. D. 259, at p. 266, it must be held that the use of the word "forthwith" dispensed with the necessity for fixing a time, though but for Thomas v. Nokes he should have been disposed to hold otherwise.

After a judgment has been passed and entered—even where it has been taken by consent and under a mistake—the Court cannot set it aside otherwise than in a fresh action brought for the purpose unless (1.) there has been a clerical mistake or an error arising from an accidental slip or omission within the meaning of Order xxviii., r. 11, or (2.) the judgment as drawn up does not correctly state what the Court actually decided and intended to decide—in either of which cases the application may be made by motion in the action.

- 239. — Consent order—Mistake—Unilateral mistake induced by the other party.

An order made in an action by consent and based upon, and intended to carry out, an agreement come to between the parties, can be set aside on any ground on which an agreement in the terms of the order could be set aside, and one of such grounds is mistake.

A written contract cannot be set aside merely because one of the parties to it put an erroneous construction on the words in which it was expressed; but this principle does not apply to a case where a mistake by one of the parties as to the meaning of the words used has been induced, however innocently, by the other party.

If the parties are not ad idem as to the subject-matter of the contract, there is no real agreement between them.

A party to a contract, who had failed to obtain from the Court a decision in his favour upon the construction of it, is competent to institute an action to have the contract set aside.

Upon these principles, the C. A., affirming the judgment of Byrne J., set aside a consent order made upon settled minutes in an action after the order had been passed, entered, partially acted upon, and construed by the Court.

Although mere non-payment of the costs of an interlocutory application which the plt. has been ordered to pay, and his inability to pay, furnish no sufficient ground for ordering proceedings in the action to be stayed until payment, the Court has jurisdiction to order such stay if the action is vexatious, or has been vexatiously conducted by him. GRAHAM v. Stop Order.

Order XLVI. rr. 12, 13, relate to stop orders.

246. — Fund in court—Priority—Mortgagor—Settlement—Stop order obtained by mortgagees.

In ascertaining the effect of a stop order the Court need not merely look at the language of the order, but may have recourse to what appears from any part thereof. Having regard to the practice of the Paymaster-General's office as to treating stop orders as not affecting income except where income is mentioned, care should be taken in drawing up such order to express whether capital or income or both are to be restrained. M., a person entitled to the income only of a fund in court, assigned his interest to the trustees of his marriage settlement. The trustees did not obtain a stop order. M. subsequently mortgaged his interest without disclosing the settlement. The mortgagees obtained a stop order expressed as to M.'s share generally, with no mention of the income of the fund:—

Held, that, looking at the deed recited in the stop order, and the mortgages entered therein as read, the stop order must be construed as affecting the income, and giving the mortgagees priority over the trustees of the marriage settlement. MACK v. POSTLE - Stirling J. [1894] 2 Ch. 449 interest in personality—Covenant to settle after-acquired property—Valuable consideration.

The persons to whom notice of a stop order ought to be sent for priority purposes are those who have the control and custody of the fund.

A fund was in court in an administration action, and under the custody and control of the Court for the purposes of that action. A son of the testator was entitled to a contingent interest in the fund, and died, bequeathing his interest, then still contingent, to a sister, who assigned it to A. and then to B., who had no notice of the first assignment. B. got a stop order on the fund. A. gave notice of his assignment to the son's legal personal representatives:—

Held, that the stop order had the same effect as notice to the father's executors would have had if the fund had not been in court, and that the proper person to receive notice of the assignment was the son's legal personal representative, and that A. had priority by virtue of his notice. STEPHENS v. The writ in a debenture-holder's action, which was in the usual form, was issued on Nov. 20, 1899. On Nov. 23 a receiver was appointed. On Dec. 1 the usual application for directions under the R. S. C., Order xxx., was heard, when the master ordered that the action should be set down for hearing without pleadings and as a short cause. Notice of trial was accordingly given, and the action was set down, and now came on for trial as a short cause:—

Held, that in cases of this kind the order made ought to contain a direction that evidence should be taken by affidavit; if the deft. consented, the action could then be tried on the earliest short cause day on affidavit evidence: if this was not done, a statement of claim should be directed. The evidence filed on the appointment of the receiver and additional evidence to be used was allowed, and the usual judgment in a debenture-holder's action was made. *In re GUTTA PERCHA CORPORATION, LD. 253. — Third party notice—Solicitors, Firm of—Surviving partners—Indemnity—Trustee—Breach of trust—R. S. C., Order XVI., r. 48.

The deft. and A. were joint trustees of a settled fund, A. being a member of the firm of solicitors acting in the management of the trust. A. received the proceeds of sale of part of the trust funds as solicitor and misapplied them, and the moneys were lost. After the death of A. an action was commenced against the deft. as the surviving trustee claiming a declaration that he was liable to pay the plt. the sum so misapplied.

The deft. obtained an order under Order XVI., r. 48, for leave to serve a third party notice on the surviving partners of the firm of solicitors claiming to be indemnified against liability in the action:—

Held, on motion to discharge the order, that this was not a claim to indemnify the deft. against the plt.'s claim in the action within Order XVI., r. 48, the right of the deft. to recover from the surviving partners a sum equal to the lost trust fund being an independent right and not one depending on the liability of the deft. in the action. *WYNNE v. and the defendant applied for an order for trial with a jury, which was refused:—

Held, that, upon the application under Order XIV., r. 1, it might have been made a condition of leave to defend that the cause should be tried without a jury, but that, as no condition to that effect had been attached to the order giving the deft. leave to defend, he had, at the time of the application for an order for directions, a right under Order XXXVI., r. 6, to an order for a trial with a jury, which the judge had no jurisdiction to refuse. WOOLFE v. Order XXXVI., r. 1, of the Rules of 1875, which were scheduled to the Judicature Act, 1875, absolutely abolished all local venues then existing. The fact that the corresponding rule of 1883 (Order XXXVI., r. 1) makes an exception in favour of statutory local venues, does not revive the local venues abolished in 1875, as the rule only applies to local venues created by statute since the Judicature Act, 1875:—

Motion for a writ of attachment against a firm of solicitors for failure, in pursuance of an undertaking, to enter an appearance for the deft. in an action of Anderson v. Tarbutt. The writ in that action was issued on Feb. 23, 1899, and by it the plt. claimed an account of profits made by the defts. in certain dealings relating to mining property in South Africa. The writ was indorsed by the defts'. solicitors as follows: "We accept service for the defts., and will enter appearance in due course." On Feb. 24 the defts. made an offer in settlement of the action; but the negotiations which ensued were not successful, and, owing to the absence in South Africa of parties concerned, by consent, the time for entering appearance was extended till April 30, 1899.

Nothing further was done in the action until October, 1899, when the plt. refused to accept the defts'. offer in settlement, and called upon the solicitors to enter an appearance pursuant to their undertaking. The solicitors took the view that owing to the lapse of time the action had expired, and their undertaking had ceased to be binding on them.

Held, that the undertaking was still binding on the respondents. Order VIII., r. 1, meant that the writ was in force for the purpose of service for twelve months, not that at the end of that period it lost its efficacy for all purposes. The undertaking was a contract binding for six years. The defts. had authorized the solicitors to give the undertaking on their behalf, and could not now withdraw their authority and thus render their agents liable to proceedings such as the present. The undertaking must be complied with. In re KERLY, SON AND VERDEN

In an action for the recovery of land against tenants whose term had expired, the writ was specially indorsed with a statement of the date of the lease, the length of the term, and the mode of devolution of the lessee's interest on the debts.; but in the copy served on the debts. the length of the term was omitted:—

Held, that the copy gave the debts. sufficient information to satisfy Order III., r. 6 (f):

Held, further, that the directions of Order XXVIII., r. 9, as to marking an amended indorsement or pleading with the dates of the order for amendment and of the amendment, do not extend to the copy delivered to the opposite party. HANMER v. CLIFTON

283. — Indorsement—Special indorsement—Amendment—Writ for service out of jurisdiction—Statement of claim indorsed on writ—R. S. C., Order XXVIII., rr. 1, 6.

Order XXVIII. applies to writs issued for service out of the jurisdiction, and a statement of claim indorsed on such a writ may be amended without re-service.

Where leave for amendment is necessary, the plt. must shew that the amended claim would have entitled him in the first instance to leave to issue a writ for service out of the jurisdiction.

In order to entitle a plt. to enter final judgment under Order XIV., r. 1, the writ of summons must be a good specially indorsed writ under Order III., r. 6, at the time when the summons under Order XIV. is taken out.

If, therefore, the indorsement be amended after the issue of a summons under Order XIV. by striking out an unliquidated demand, there is no jurisdiction to make an order giving the plt. leave to enter final judgment. GURNEY v. SMALL

A receiver was appointed in a foreclosure action with authority to retain arrears of interest and current interest out of the rents. The rents were insufficient to pay the current interest. The receiver commenced an action for the interest and indorsed his writ with a definite sum, being two years' arrears of interest less the amount of rents received:—

Held, that this was not a liquidated sum

The plts. issued a writ indorsed with a claim for possession of hereditaments at S., of which particulars were given, with a statement that the deft. had been tenant to the plts., and that his tenancy had expired by notice on a given day, and the plts. claimed "possession and 80*l.* for mesne profits." They then applied under Order XIV., r. 1, for liberty to sign final judgment for possession and the 80*l.* claimed for mesne profits. By affidavit in support of the application, the 80*l.* was claimed as double rent for six months on account of the deft. having refused to deliver up possession. On the hearing of the application Kennedy J. gave liberty to the plts. to sign final judgment for possession, "and for mesne profits to be calculated up to the date of the plts. obtaining possession":—

Held, on appeal, that this order was right, for that, whether double rent could be recovered or not, the writ was not vitiated by the plts. claiming it by affidavit, and that the judge was not confined to giving mesne profits up to the time of the order, and was not bound to put the plts. to a second action to recover mesne profits between the time of judgment and the time of recovering possession. The taker of a bill has satisfied himself by proper inquiry that an agent has authority to accept or indorse bills of exchange "per pro." The plt.'s agent obtained from the debt. bank a promise to pay certain cheques drawn by the plt. in consideration of his depositing with it a store warrant in lieu of the cash which the plt. had instructed him to pay to the credit of the plt.'s account. The store warrant belonged to the plt., was under pledge to the agent, and was accepted by the bank with full knowledge of the circumstances:—

Held, in an action for dishonouring the cheques, that the agent in substituting the deposit for cash did not exceed his authority, but that even if he had, the contract was complete, for there was consideration for the bank's promise. The deposit conferred on the bank some right, interest, profit, or benefit within the legal meaning of consideration; and in the circumstances it could not be heard to say that that consideration did not move from the plt.:

Held, further, that evidence of special damage—that is, of plt.'s loss of custom and credit from particular individuals—was wrongly admitted; special damage not having been alleged. FLEMING v. BANK OF NEW ZEALAND

The defts., a firm of stockbrokers, had in their employ a clerk, to whom they allowed commission upon orders introduced by him to them and accepted by them, but who was not authorized himself to accept orders on their behalf. On three occasions the plt. gave orders to the clerk for the purchase of shares by the defts. on the plt.'s behalf, which orders were transmitted by the clerk to the defts., who executed them and sent to the plt. bought notes in respect of the shares so purchased. No intimation was given by the defts. to the plt. that they accepted the orders prior to their execution by the defts. In payment of the price of the first two lots of shares purchased the plt. drew a cheque payable to defts., order which he gave to the clerk, who delivered it to the defts. The third lot of shares was paid for by the plt. in a similar manner, with the exception that the cheque was drawn to the order of the clerk. The defts. received the cheques and credited the plt. with the amount of them. Orders for the purchase of other shares by the defts. were subsequently given by the plt. to the clerk, who did not transmit them to the defts., but made out and handed to the plt. bought notes purporting to shew purchases of shares in pursuance of the orders, and to be signed by the defts., which were forgeries. The plt. gave him cheques for the supposed prices of the shares, which he misapplied to his own use:—

Held (Collins L.J. dissenting), that upon the above-mentioned facts there was no evidence for a jury of a holding out by the defts. to the plt. of the clerk as authorized to enter into contracts on their behalf, and, therefore, the defts. were not liable in respect of the orders subsequent to the first three. SPOONER v. The horses were delivered and found to be unsound, and thereupon they were returned and the cheque stopped. In the course of the trial of an action on the cheque it was elicited that the veterinary surgeon had accepted a bribe from the plt. :—

Held, that it was immaterial to inquire what effect the bribe had on the mind of the debt.'s agent, that the offer and acceptance invalidated the certificate, and that the pltff. could not recover under the contract which depended on the validity of the certificate. *SHIPWAY v. The plt. granted a lease to C. with proviso that C. should not assign without written consent of the plt. C. contracted to assign to A. C. drew a cheque to debt.'s order for the quarter's rent and debt.'s charges and then received from debt. the licence. C.'s cheque was dishonoured :—

In an action by the plts. against the district council and the contractor :—

Held, that the district council owed a duty to the public (including the plts.) so to construct the sewer as not to injure the gas-main; that they had been guilty of a breach of this duty; that, notwithstanding that they had delegated the performance of the duty to the contractor, they were responsible to the plts. for the breach; and that the damages were not too remote to be recovered. Where negligence or other breach of duty is committed by a solicitor in a matter of which the Court has seized, the Court can summarily order the solicitor, as its officer, to make good the loss actually occasioned thereby, but cannot mulct him in damages for his misconduct.

To constitute a binding adoption or ratification of acts done without previous authority, (1.) the acts must have been done for, and in the name of, the supposed principal; and (2.) full knowledge of them, and unequivocal adoption after knowledge, must be proved; or else, the circumstances must warrant the clear inference that the principal was adopting the acts of his supposed agent whatever their nature or culpability.

Without the knowledge or authority of X., a solicitor, A. B., another solicitor, used X.'s name in proceedings, wherein by acts of fraud and forgery, A. B. obtained an order for the payment out of a fund in court, and was thereby enabled to get the fund paid out by a cheque from the Paymaster-General, with which he opened a fictitious account at a bank. Two days later, and after the account had been partially drawn upon, X. was told by A. B. that his name had been made use of for a formal party. X. reprimanded A. B. for this, but, without inquiring into the nature of the business, accompanied A. B. to the Paymaster-General's Office, and received a cheque for 15*l.* for costs; over 10*l.* of this he paid to A. B. for out of pocket expenses, and the balance of 4*l.* 5*s.* 6*d.* he handed to his partner Y., who entered it to the credit of the firm in their books without knowing anything of the circumstances under which the money had been paid.

A large portion of the fund formerly in court having been lost:—

Held, (1) that, even if X. had previously authorized the use of his name for a formal party, he would not have been responsible for the acts of fraud and forgery committed by his supposed agent for that agent's own fraudulent purposes; (2) that, under the circumstances, X. had not condoned or ratified the use of his name by A. B., and was not liable for the whole of the loss sustained, but only for the amount of the 15*l.* cheque which he took; and (3.) that Y. was liable only for the 4*l.* 5*s.* 6*d.* received by him for the partnership.

An agent who pays to his principal's account a cheque given under protest if he has no notice of the duress under which the cheque was handed over, is not personally liable to the drawer of the cheque.

A trading co. executed a trust deed to secure debentures. Under certain circumstances the trustees had power to appoint a receiver as if they were mortgagees within the Conveyancing Act, 1881. Such a receiver was empowered to enter into possession, carry on the business, appoint managers, &c., and was to be deemed the agent of the co., and to be in the same position as a receiver duly appointed by a mortgagee under the Act:—

Held, that a receiver so appointed and carrying on the co.'s business was a mere agent, without personal responsibility. The deft. was so appointed. The manager without the deft.'s knowledge compelled the plts. under “duress of goods” to pay a sum for work done by the co. which the plts. alleged to be extortionate. The money was handed the deft., who paid it into the bank without notice of the duress:—

Held, that the payment into the bank was a payment by the deft. as agent for the co., and, as it was paid without notice of the duress, he was not personally liable to the plts. OWEN & Co. v. CRONK - - - C. A. [1895] 1 Q. B. 265

A stockbroker who on behalf of a principal buys stock upon the Stock Exchange for the next settling day, and without authority from his principal, and contrary to the agreement between them, sells the stock before that day at a loss cannot claim indemnity from his principal.

The plt., a stockbroker, having prior to Nov. 10 bought stock of a ry. co. for the deft. on the London Stock Exchange, it was agreed between them that the plt. should take part of the stock so purchased off the market by paying for it with money advanced by him for the purpose, which he accordingly did, and that he should hold that stock as security for his advance with interest, and should not sell the same before the account of Nov. 26. On Nov. 10 the plt. by the deft.'s instructions carried over the residue of the stock till Nov. 26, and bought a further amount of stock for that day. On Nov. 19 the plt., without the deft.'s authority, and contrary to his agreement, sold the whole amount of stock purchased at a loss in order to close the account between them. If the stock had been sold on Nov. 26, it would have realized a price higher than that at which the plt. sold, but lower than that at which he had bought it for the deft. In an action by the plt. against the deft. for indemnity in respect of the difference between the prices at which he had bought and sold the stock:—

Held, first, as to the plt.'s claim in respect of the stock paid for and taken off the market by the plt. as before mentioned, that the plt. was entitled to recover as for money paid for the deft. at his request, subject to the deft.'s right to counter-claim damages for the loss occasioned by the plt.'s wrongfully selling the stock before Nov. 26:—

Held, secondly, as to the plt.'s claim in respect of the stock carried over and that which was purchased on Nov. 10 as before mentioned (by A. L. Smith L.J. and Collins L.J., Rigby L.J. dissenting), that no action for indemnity was maintainable, the loss having arisen, not through any breach of contract by the deft., but through the wrongful sale by the plt.

By Rigby L.J., in affirmance of Mathew J., that the plt. was entitled to be credited in account with the price at which he purchased for the deft., being charged by way of damages with the loss arising from the wrongful sale.

Held, that as there was no contractual relation between the surveyor and the mortgagees, the

The goods were delivered to M., who claimed damages from H., alleging that the goods were not in fair merchantable condition:—

Held, that the sending of the invoice to M., the retaining of it, the acceptance and payment of the bill, constituted a contract between H. and M., and that H. having had the benefit of it could not repudiate, and that, therefore, M. was entitled to maintain the action. MALCOLM FLINN & Co. v. 27. — Warrant of authority—Solicitor—Authority to defend action in name of company—Revocation of authority—Notice of revocation—Payment by defendant's solicitor of plaintiff's costs of abortive action—Company—Dissolution pendente lite—Judgment against dissolved company—Jurisdiction.

A solicitor had originally authority to defend an action in the name of a co., but his authority was revoked by the dissolution of the co. shortly before the trial. The trial of the action was delayed owing partly to the state of the business of the Court and partly to the pleadings being amended. The action was tried on the assumption that the co. was in existence, and judgment was given for the plt. Neither the solicitor nor the plt. knew till after the trial that the co. had been dissolved; but on the day of the trial the solicitor was informed that the co. had held its final meeting, and he took no steps to ascertain whether or not it had been dissolved. Upon motion by the plt. that the solicitor might be ordered to pay his costs of the action as from the date of the dissolution of the co. —

Held, (1.) (distinguishing Whiteley Exerciser, Ltd. v. Gamage, [1898] 2 Ch. 405), that the judgment was invalid against the co. for want of jurisdiction; (2.) that the solicitor having originally authority to represent the co. was not liable for acting on that authority after it had been revoked by the dissolution of the co. until he knew or, by the exercise of due diligence, might have known of the dissolution; (3.) that on the day of the trial the solicitor did not use due diligence in ascertaining whether or not the co. had been dissolved, and that he ought to pay the plt.'s costs of the action after that date as between solicitor and client.

The principle of Smout v. Ilbery, (1842) 10 M. & W. 1, applies to a solicitor representing a party in an action, and it applies to a revocation of authority by the dissolution of a co. as well as by the death of an individual. SALTON v. NEW BEESTON CYCLE CO. Stirling J. [1900] 1 Ch. 43

Under s. 37 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, the liability of a bankrupt co-surety to contribution, though unascertained at the time of the bankruptcy proceedings, is a debt provable in the bankruptcy.

The statute does not begin to run against a surety suing a co-surety for contribution until the liability of the surety is ascertained, i.e., until the claim of the principal creditor has been established against him; although at the time of the action for contribution the statute may have run as between the principal creditor and the co-surety. *WOLMERSHAUSEN v. E. died, and a fresh bond was executed by F., B., and H., with the additional proviso that E.'s estate should not be exonerated. F. became bankrupt, and B. and H. repaid the advance. Bacon V.-C. held that B. and H. were creditors of E.'s estate for one moiety of the sums paid by them. No order was drawn up. In 1893 the chief clerk certified B. and H. to be creditors as decided by Bacon V.-C. E.'s executor took out a summons to vary the certificate:—

An unsatisfied judgment against one co-surety for a cheque given by him alone for the debt is not a bar to an action against the other co-surety on the original contract of guarantee. Decision of Wills J., [1894] 2 Q. B. 101, affirmed. WEGG-PROSSER v. EVANS — C. A. [1895] 1 Q. B. 108

9. — Co-sureties—Material alteration of instrument—Discharge.

Where two or more persons join as sureties for a common principal, but bind themselves in different amounts, in the event of the principal being in default they are liable to contribute to the satisfaction of the creditor's claim in proportion to the limits of their respective liabilities, and not in equal amounts.

Four persons, as sureties for a principal, executed a joint and several bond of suretyship, by the terms of which the liability of two of them was limited to 50*l.* each, and that of the other two to 25*l.* each. One of those whose liability was limited to 50*l.*, after the other three had executed the bond, executed it himself, but added to his signature the words "25*l.* only." The obligee accepted the bond so executed without objection, and subsequently the principal became in default:—

Held, that the effect of the added words was to make a material alteration in the bond, so that the three first signatories were thereby discharged from their obligation; and that as the last signatory only executed the bond as a joint and several bond, he also was not bound by it. *ELLESMERE BREWERY Co. v. 10. — Express power to give notice determining liability of guarantor.

A joint and several continuing guaranty bond provided that the obligors, or their respective "representatives," might determine their or his liability by a month's notice in writing to the obligees. One of the obligors having died, his executor, who was unaware of the bond, gave the obligees notice only of his death:—

which the co. raised upon mortgage of its premises, and it was provided by the bond that, although as between the co. and the obligors, the latter were only sureties for the co., nevertheless, as between the obligors and the obligees (the lenders of the money), the former should be taken to be principal debtors, so that they should not nor should either of them be released from their or his liability by reason of time being given to the co. or their assigns, or by any other forbearance, act, or omission of the obligees or their assigns, or by any other matter or thing whereby the obligors, or either of them, would be so released but for this provision. The plts. having had to pay the amount secured by the bond, the mortgage was transferred and the bond assigned to them: and they brought an action against the deft. for contribution and as assignees of the bond to recover a third part of the amount which they had paid. The plts. having, without the deft.'s assent, entered into an agreement with a new co., who became the purchasers of the goodwill, premises, and stock-in-trade of the first-mentioned co., that they would not for a certain period of time enforce the mortgage against the new co.:—

Held, that, having regard to the provisions of the bond, this agreement did not afford a defence to the action brought by the plts. against the deft.

Query, whether an agreement by a surety to give time to the principal debtor discharges a co-surety. GREENWOOD v. FRANCIS

C. A. [1899] 1 Q. B. 312

12. — Giving time to new firm—Liability of retired partner.

If of two principal debtors one is notified to the creditor as a surety, from that time that debtor has all the rights of a surety against the creditor, and the creditor must not give time to the other principal debtor, or prejudice the surety's interests. Therefore, where a bank allowed a firm to overdraw, and A. retired from the firm in 1884, and the overdraft was carried to the debit of the new firm, and the bank in 1889 passed a resolution continuing the overdraft for a limited time, and in 1890 agreed with the new firm and a surety, B., for guaranteeing payment to the bank of any balance on the overdraft exceeding a certain sum:—

Held, that there was no agreement to give time to the new firm, or to alter the relation between the parties, and that the retired partner was not released; but quære whether a proviso in the deed of dissolution of 1884 which gave time to make arrangements with creditors prevented A. from being discharged.

(A) The deft. covenanted as surety for the repayment by B. of a mortgage debt. B. afterwards, by a deed to which the surety was not a party, consolidated this mortgage with others, and assigned the benefit of all covenants to the plt.:—

Held, that, as by the terms of the consolidated

mortgage, the debt was not to be repaid until six months after date, time had been given to the principal debtor and the surety was discharged. BOLTON v. BUCKENHAM C. A. [1891] 1 Q. B. 278

(B) The deft. covenanted, as surety, for repayment of a mortgage debt, and assigned property as collateral security. The mortgage was afterwards consolidated, and the covenant in the consolidated mortgage was for repayment of the debt at a later date:—

Held, that both the property and the personal liability of the surety was thereby discharged. BOLTON v. SALMON Chitty J. [1891] 2 Ch. 48

A surety for a contractor for engineering works is not discharged from liability, although his position has been altered by the conduct of the employer, where that conduct has been caused by a fraudulent act or omission of the contractor against which the surety has, by the contract of suretyship, guaranteed the employer. *KINGSTON-UPON-HULL CORPORATION v. 15. — Material alteration in contract—Contribution.

C. being appointed agent and traveller to the plts., procured four persons to execute as sureties a joint and several bond conditioned for the due accounting by him for all moneys received by him on the plts.' account. The bond limited the liability of N. and E., two of the sureties, to 50*l.* each, and that of P. and B., the other two, to 25*l.* each. After the three last-named sureties had executed the bond N. executed it, adding to his signature the words "25*l.* only":—

Held, that the effect of that addition being to alter the rights of the sureties inter se, it discharged all of them, including N., from their liability upon the bond. ELLESMERE BREWERY CO. v. COOPER AND OTHERS

16. — Release of co-surety—Evidence of collateral agreement to reserve rights against co-surety.

In a suit against one of five joint and several sureties, it appeared that the creditor had, without the deft.'s knowledge and consent, released another of the sureties "from all debts due by him to (the creditor) at this date":—

Held, that the creditor could not recover, and that the legal effect of the release could not be modified by evidence of verbal negotiations prior to the release for the purpose of shewing an agreement superseded by the release to reserve rights against the sureties. MERCANTILE BANK OF SYDNEY v. TAYLOR P. C. [1893] A. C. 317

A creditor released his principal debtor, and accepted B. as full debtor in his stead. The surety for the original debtor agreed to give a guarantee for C. and to continue his former guarantee until he did so, but died before doing so. In an action by the creditor against the surety's executors, held, that as the former debt of the Non-contentious Probate Rules of 1862 as to the execution, but the executor made an affidavit under rule 7, stating that the signatures of the testator and attesting witnesses were in their handwriting, and that no other persons were present at the execution:—

S. & Co. failed, and the plts. claimed the exclusive right to the proceeds of the counter security:—

Held, (1) that the evidence was insufficient for grant of probate under rule 7; (2) that an order might be made under s. 24 of the Court of Probate Act, 1857, requiring the attesting witnesses to attend for examination as to the execution of the will. IN THE GOODS OF SWEET

Strict proof must be given of a will which is informal signed by mark instead of the usual subscription in full of the testator, and has been obtained from him by one of the proposers having a substantial interest in its provisions and witnessed by two of her relations. Such a will is not invalid; but the onus probandi may be increased by circumstances, and the presumption may even be conclusive against the validity of the instrument. DONNELLY v. BROUGHTON

A testamentary document consisted of a sheet of paper containing on the first page a lithographed form of will. The form in the first page was filled in by the testatrix and contained bequests to "my sisters and friends." Her signature and those of the attesting witnesses were at the bottom of the first page. The second and third pages contained a list of bequests to persons, some of whom were the sisters and other friends of the testatrix. There was no direct evidence that the second and third pages had been written before the execution of the will:—

Held, that assuming the second and third pages to have been written before the execution of the will, the signature of the testatrix was not so placed "opposite to" the writing contained in these pages as to bring the case within s. 1 of the Wills Amendment Act, 1852, and that therefore the first page alone would be admitted to probate. *ROYLE v. A testator died domiciled in Chili, leaving a will, appointing two executors, one of whom died without taking probate. The other was believed to be in Bolivia, but no response had been obtained to repeated applications made to him. The only property in this country of any value consisted of a debt which it was desired to collect.

The Court accepted the affidavit of a notary, who was not a qualified Chilean lawyer, as evidence of the law of Chili; and, upon his evidence that the powers and duties of an executor in that country would only extend to seeing that the estate was duly administered by the acting heiress, who in this case was the testator's widow, the Court made to her a grant of administration, with the will annexed. IN THE GOODS OF WHITELEGG — Jeune P. England—No executor—Grant to stranger without citing next of kin—Practice—Administration with will annexed—Probate Act, 1857 (20 & 21 Vict. c. 77), s. 73.

The testatrix, who died domiciled in the Republic of Hayti, left a will which was valid by the law of her domicile, but not executed with the formalities prescribed in the Wills Act. There was no appointment of executors, but the will contained the words: "M. E. Bordu of Port-au-Prince and Mr. J. B. Wallace of Liverpool shall carry out my last wishes." The only estate in England consisted of a sum of 1260*l.* 7*s.* 11*d.* in the hands of Mr. Wallace's firm.

The sole next of kin, who was entitled in distribution to half the fund, was in Hayti and had not been cited; but the persons entitled to the other half were in England, and assented to Mr. Wallace being appointed administrator with the will annexed.

By the Land Transfer Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c. 65), Part I., s. 2, sub-s. 4, "Where a person dies possessed of real estate, the Court shall, in granting letters of administration, have regard to the rights and interests of persons interested in his real estate, and his heir-at-law, if not one of the next of kin, shall be equally entitled to the grant with the next of kin, and provision shall be made by rules of Court for adapting the procedure and practice in the grant of letters of administration to the case of real estate."

A wife died intestate. Her husband survived her, and she left a son by a former marriage, a minor, who was her heir-at-law.

On it appearing that the husband was a dissipated man, who was mismanaging a public-house which was part of the estate, and of which he refused to give up possession, the Court, acting under the sub-section and s. 73 of the Court of Probate Act, 1857, granted administration of the estate to the guardian ad litem of the infant heir-at-law. By the Land Transfer Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c. 65), Part I., s. 2, sub-s. 4, "Where a person dies possessed of real estate, the Court shall, in granting letters of administration, have regard to the rights and interests of persons interested in his real estate, and his heir-at-law, if not one of the next of kin, shall be equally entitled to the grant with the next of kin, and provision shall be made by rules of Court for adapting the procedure and practice in the grant of letters of administration to the case of real estate :—

By an additional rule and order, dated Nov. 20, 1897, for the registrars of the principal and district registries: "All rules orders and instructions and the existing practice of the Court with respect to non-contentious business shall, so far as the circumstances of each case will allow, be applicable to grants of probate and administration made under the authority of the Land Transfer Act, 1897."

A married woman who owned certain farms made a will, by which she left her real estate to her husband for life, with remainder to her natural daughter absolutely, and all her personal estate to her husband, whom she appointed executor.

Her natural daughter died in her lifetime. Her husband died without proving the will, and administration of his personal estate was granted to his sister as next of kin. It was not known who was the heir-at-law of the testatrix. The value of the real estate was 7688*l.*, that of the personal estate 45*l.* :—

Held, on an application by the administratrix of the husband, for a grant of administration of the real and personal estate of the testatrix, that, having regard to the provisions of the sub-section, the heir-at-law not having been cited, a general grant ought not to be made, but that the applicant might take a grant ad colligendum, which would enable her to let and manage the farms, till the heir-at-law could be cited. All parties interested in the estate of the deceased entered into a compromise, with a view to putting an end to further disputes and litigation, and, being unable to agree amongst themselves that any one or more of their number should take a grant, it was arranged that B., chartered accountant, who had audited the books of the deceased's businesses for some years, should apply for letters of administration with the will and codicils of the deceased annexed; and the Court made an order in terms of this arrangement (see [1899] P. 265). In accordance with this order, B. entered upon his duties as administrator, and, after selling certain leaseholds and shares belonging to the testator's estate, died on Dec. 18, 1899, leaving part of the estate still unadministered.

On Dec. 20, administration de bonis non was granted, under s. 73, to Barnes, a partner of the said B., limited to collecting and preserving the estate and completing the sale of the leaseholds and continuing the business of the deceased until Jan. 29, 1900, or until a fresh permanent grant should be made.

With the consent of all parties interested, who were still unable to agree amongst themselves to a grant going to any one or more of their number,

An executor's probate action, brought in consequence of a caveat entered by a married woman who was made a deft. to the action, resulted in a verdict for the plt. with costs against the deft. Upon an application by the plt. under the Married Women's Property Act, 1893, s. 2, for an order for payment of the costs out of property to which the deft. was entitled subject to a restraint on anticipation:—

Held, that the proceedings in the probate action were "instituted" within the meaning of the Act of 1893 by the issue of the writ by the plt., and not by the entry of the caveat, or the appearance of the caveator in answer to the warning; and accordingly that the order applied for could not be made. *MORAN v. 91. — Costs—Proof in solemn form—Notice by defendant to cross-examine only—Practice—Order XXI., r. 18—R. S. C., July, 1898.

By Order XXI., r. 18, as amended by the Rules of the Supreme Court, July, 1898, "In probate actions the party opposing a will may, with his defence, give notice to the party setting up the will that he merely insists on the will being proved in solemn form of law, and only intends to cross-examine the witnesses produced in support of the will, and he shall thereupon be at liberty to do so, and shall not, in any event, be liable to pay the costs of the other side, unless the judge shall be of opinion that there was no reasonable ground for opposing the will."

92. — Costs—Severance of defences—Practice—Good cause—Probate action—Action tried with a jury—Separate sets of costs—R. S. C., Order LXV., r. 1.

An action to establish the third, and, alternatively, the second, will of a testator, was separately defended by the executors of the first will and two legatees thereunder. The legatees were interested in upsetting both the second and third wills, but the executors were only substantially interested in upsetting the third. The jury found that the execution of the last two wills was obtained by undue influence, and the judge pronounced against them and for the first will:—

Held, that there was a sufficient divergence of interest between the defts. to justify the legatees in appearing by separate counsel, and that, consequently, there was no good cause for depriving them of the costs of their separate appearance.

In an action to propound a will the defts. applied for inspection of documents. It appeared that the plt.'s solicitor had for many years acted for the testatrix, and had in his possession diaries, &c., relating to the affairs which were his own private property:—

Held, (1) that the plt. could not be compelled to produce these documents for inspection; (2) that the solicitor could not be compelled under Order xxxvii., r. 7, to produce the documents for discovery, nor called for examination under Order xxxvi., r. 5, at that stage of the action; (3) that an affidavit of documents claiming privilege for documents as communications between the party and his solicitor is insufficient, it being also necessary to shew that the letters were professional communications of a confidential character for the purpose of getting legal advice. It contained a direction that during her lifetime the widow should have the unrestricted right of administration and usufruct of the testator's estate without giving security, which according to the local law was equivalent to appointing her executrix, and entitled her to collect the personal estate as though she were the owner thereof. Part of the personal estate was in England:—

A testator devised property to trustees to provide an annuity for his wife, setting apart certain funds which they would find noted; he confirmed his will by two codicils. A document certainly later than the will and possibly before the codicils was found which set apart funds for this purpose:—

102. — Incorporation—Testamentary papers—Validity—Inadmissibility—Refusal of probate.

A testator executed a document in the presence of two witnesses who duly attested it. The document appointed no executors and contained no bequest, but referred to "the enclosed papers numbered" 1-6, as containing his testamentary wishes, and recited that such papers had been signed by him in the presence of the witnesses. This the witnesses denied, saying that when they witnessed the testator's signature, he said, "The will is in this drawer." Papers 1-6 bore dates antecedent to the witnessed document. In the attestation clause the deceased was referred to as the testator:—

Held, that, as the papers 1-6 were not clearly identified, they could not be taken as incorporated with the attested document, and as the attested paper alone would be inoperative, probate of all the documents must be refused. IN THE GOODS OF GARNETT G. Barnes J. [1894] P. 90

114. — Onus probandi—Will prepared under suspicious circumstances.

Where a will is prepared and executed under suspicious circumstances, it is for the party propounding it to adduce evidence to remove such suspicion and to satisfy the Court that the testator knew and approved of the contents of the will. The testatrix in 1880 and 1884 made wills in favour of the deft., but afterwards became dissatisfied with him, and from 1888 to 1892 wrote to her solicitor complaining of the deft. On Nov. 7, 1892, she made a will leaving her property to the plt. On Nov. 9 the deft.'s son brought to her a will prepared by himself leaving the property to the deft. The deft.'s son and a friend of his were the only persons present when this will was executed. The attesting witnesses swore that the testatrix understood and approved of the will:—

Where an intestate died leaving a widow and six children by a former marriage, and the widow, who obtained administration, could not be found, the Court, upon the application of the children, revoked the grant and directed administration de bonis non in favour of one of their number.

A wife long separated from her husband died intestate, and letters of administration were taken out as if she had been a spinster. The husband, some years later, discovering what had been done, applied after some delay in the county court to have the letters set aside and a grant made to him. The county court judge, holding that there had been no fraud, refused the application. On appeal, held (1) that the decision was on a “point of law” within s. 58 of the Court of Probate Act, 1857, and that the point of law was sufficiently raised at the hearing under s. 120 of the County Courts Act, 1888, and that an appeal lay; (2) that the decision that the grant could not be revoked in the absence of fraud was wrong.

In 1896 A. H. T. died bankrupt and intestate, leaving a widow, who was his second wife, and six children surviving. His estate was in the hands of an official receiver in bankruptcy. The widow and children duly renounced all rights to administration, and the official receiver took the grant to A. H. T.'s estate, and also a grant de bonis non to the estate of A. H. T.'s first wife.

In 1899 the administrator, having paid all the debts, desired to be relieved of his office, and, with his concurrence, the Court (G. Barnes J.) permitted the widow and children to retract their renunciations; revoked the letters of administration; and made a joint grant to the widow and two of the children, in respect of that portion of A. H. T.'s estate remaining unadministered, thus giving them the right, as of course, to take administration de bonis non in the estate of A. H. T.'s first wife. IN THE GOODS OF THACKER kin after distribution of intestate's estate—Action for revocation of letters of administration.

The plt., who claimed to be entitled as next of kin of an intestate, three years after the distribution of the estate, sought to impeach the title of the persons amongst whom the estate had been distributed, on the ground of the illegitimacy of one of their ancestors, and for this purpose commenced an action for revocation of letters of administration which had been granted to one of the persons who had received a share of the estate under the distribution. The plt. was aware at the date of the distribution of the alleged illegitimacy, but pleaded want of means in justification of the delay in bringing the action:—

Held, that the action was not maintainable, because (1) the plt.'s object might be obtained, without revoking the letters of administration, by commencing an action in the Ch. Div. for the purpose of following the assets into the hands of the persons who had wrongly received them; (2) the plt. was debarred by laches and acquiescence from prosecuting her claim.

By the Companies (Winding-up) Act, 1890, s. 1, sub-s. 6, it is provided that every Court having jurisdiction under that Act to wind up a co. shall, for the purposes of that jurisdiction, have all the powers of the High Court. The judge of a county court, to which the above-mentioned provision applied, having made an order of committal for disobedience of an order made by him in the course of the winding-up of a co., an application was made for a prohibition to him on the ground that the provisions of Order XXV., r. 40 (b), of the County Court Rules, 1889, with regard to service of the order sought to be enforced, had not been complied with, and he therefore had not jurisdiction to make an order for committal:—

Held, that, inasmuch as the county court judge was invested for the purposes of the winding-up jurisdiction with the powers of the High Court, a prohibition to him could not be granted. In re THE NEW PAR CONSOLS, LD. (No. 2) — C. A. [1898] 1 Q. B. 669

4. — County court—Want of jurisdiction—Acquiescence—Agricultural Holdings (England) Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 61), s. 24.

If total want of jurisdiction appears on the face of the proceedings in an inferior court, the Court is bound to grant prohibition, although the applicant may have acquiesced. In a lease by A. to B. it was provided that at the end of the tenancy compensation should be allowed for matters outside the Agricultural Holdings Act, 1883, and the procedure of the Act should apply to any claim for such compensation. At the end of the tenancy, cross-claims were referred to arbitration, and an award was made by an umpire, on the face of which it appeared that he had given B. compensation for matters both within and outside the Act. A county court judge made an order under s. 24 of the Act to enforce the award by execution.

On an application by A. for prohibition, held, that as it was apparent on the face of the proceedings that the county court judge had no jurisdiction to make an order under s. 24 of the Act to enforce payment of so much of the award as related to matters outside the Act, the writ must issue notwithstanding (1) the agreement in the lease, and (2) that the lessor had by his conduct acquiesced in the exercise of jurisdiction by the county court. *FARQUHARSON v. "The cause of action" in the Salford Hundred Court of Record Act, 1868, s. 6, means the whole cause of action, and not merely the act or default which gives the plt. his cause of complaint.

Sect. 7 of the Salford Hundred Court of Record Act, 1868, enacts that "No deft. shall be permitted to object to the jurisdiction of the Court otherwise than by special plea, and, if the want of jurisdiction be not so pleaded, the Court shall have jurisdiction for all purposes":—

Held (by the C. A., reversing the decision of a Div. Ct.), that, the effect of the section being to give jurisdiction to the Salford Hundred Court in cases where the want of jurisdiction is not pleaded, a deft., against whom judgment had been recovered in that court in default of appearance, and who had consequently not pleaded to the jurisdiction, was not entitled to a writ of prohibition on the ground of want of jurisdiction. *PAYNE v. A sanitary authority served notices, under the Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 4, on the owner of premises, requiring him to do certain specified works in respect of what was supposed to be a drain. He complied with the notices, and incurred expense in doing the works. It was discovered that the supposed drain was a sewer, which the sanitary authority was liable to repair, and the executors of the owner brought an action against the sanitary authority, to recover the amount of the expenses incurred, as money paid to the use, and at the request, of the defts. The action was not commenced within six months after the expenses had been paid :—

Held, that the action was brought for an act done in pursuance, or execution, or intended execution, of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, within the meaning of the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893, s. 1, and ought to have been brought within six months, and therefore the defendants were not liable.

1. — Charity—Validity of charitable gift—Effect of incorporation—Religious, Educational, and Charitable Institutions Act of 1861 (25 Vict. No. 19), s. 3.

The Religious, Educational, and Charitable Institutions Act of 1861, s. 3, applies to every gift which increases the resources of a body incorporated under the Act, although not in terms in its favour, and though different trustees are appointed. Therefore, where a bequest was made to a church and congregation, which had voluntarily joined an ecclesiastical body which had been incorporated through its officers under the Act:—

Held, that the congregation having become constituent members of the ecclesiastical body, a bequest in their favour was in reality a bequest to that body, and was invalid for want of registration and attestation as prescribed by the Act. McSWAINE v. LASCELLES

Payment honestly made by insurers in satisfaction of a claim by the insured entitles the insurers to the remedies available to the insured; and such remedies cannot be resisted on the ground that the payment was not within the terms of the policy:—

Held, that although the insurers could not by mere force of subrogation sue in their own name, yet that in this case the right to do so was conferred by assignment from the insured aided by s. 5, sub-s. 6, of the Judicature Act (40 Vict. c. 84), corresponding with the English Judicature Act of 1873. *KING v. Where a Government, being bailees for hire, stored B.'s explosive goods in sheds near to the water edge:—

Held, that the selection of such a site rendered it incumbent upon them to place the goods at such a level as would in all probability ensure their absolute immunity from the incursion of flood water; that B. was entitled to rely on the care and skill of his bailees, and could not be said to have accepted any risks of defective storage with which he had made himself acquainted.

3. — Purchase by railway company of reversion on lease — Covenant running with land—Covenant for quiet enjoyment—Injunction—Damages—Railways Clauses Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 20), s. 6.

In 1893 an Act was passed enabling the plt. co. to take compulsorily (inter alia) the property to which this action related. In 1894 the owner of the property let it to the deft. for a term of years by a lease containing the usual covenant for quiet enjoyment. In 1895 the co. purchased the reversion of the property, subject to the lease. After this the co. proceeded with their works, and in so doing caused structural injury to the deft.'s house; they also for some time rendered the access to his premises less convenient, by erecting hoardings which blocked up half the thoroughfare along the street in which his house stood, and by taking a great number of carts along that street. They also for three or four days incumbered a passage along which he had a right of way so that he could not use it. It was not alleged that the co. had exceeded their statutory powers or exercised them negligently. The co. sued the deft. for rent, and

Held, that the covenant for quiet enjoyment was in force and was binding on the co., and that they were liable to make compensation for any breach of it, but that no action would lie against them for any breach of it committed in the reasonable and careful exercise of their statutory powers, the only remedy of the tenant for such breaches being under the compensation clauses of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, and the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, and that the counter-claim, therefore, had been properly dismissed.

Though structural injury to a house by the lessor is a breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment, no temporary inconvenience caused by the lessor, but not affecting the title or possession of the tenant, is a breach of the covenant.

4. — Delay—Owner's risk note—Construction.

The plt. delivered to the defts., a ry. co., goods to be carried to their destination via a particular route, upon the terms that the plt., in consideration of his being charged a reduced rate below the defts.' ordinary rate, relieved the defts. "from all liability for (inter alia) delay . . . except upon proof that such . . . delay . . . arose from wilful misconduct on the part of the servants of the co." The defts. by mistake forwarded the goods by a different route from that contracted for, in consequence whereof the arrival at their destination was delayed and the plt. suffered damage.

Held, that as the delay of the goods was not a delay in the performance by the defts. of their contract, they were not relieved from responsibility. MALLETT v. GREAT EASTERN RY. CO.

5. — Liability to fence—Owner and occupier of adjoining land—Adjoining highway—License of owner of soil—Railways Clauses Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 20), s. 68.

A ry. co., whose premises adjoin a public highway, is not bound to fence against cattle straying upon the highway, and not merely passing and repassing along it, although they are upon the highway by permission of the owner of the soil.

Cattle belonging to a farmer were allowed to graze in a wood adjoining his farm; through the wood ran a highway, the property in the soil of which was in the owner of the wood. The cattle got upon the highway, and left it at a point where it was adjacent to the land of a ry. co., and, getting on to the line along an unfenced

Held, that the ry. co. were not liable. LUSCOMBE v. GREAT WESTERN RY. CO.

6. — Liability to make and maintain fences—Limitation of time as to further accommodation works—Fence not made within five years of opening railway—Railways Clauses Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 20), ss. 68, 73.

By s. 68 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, "The co. shall make and at all times thereafter maintain the following works for the accommodation of the owners and occupiers of lands adjoining the ry.: (inter alia) sufficient fences for separating the land taken for the use of the ry. from the adjoining lands not taken, and protecting the cattle of the owners or occupiers thereof from straying thereout." By s. 73, "the co. shall not be compelled to make any further or additional accommodation works . . . after five years from . . . the opening of the ry. for public use."

The obligation on a ry. co., under s. 68 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, to make and maintain fences is absolute, and is not affected by the limitation of time with regard to further accommodation works contained in s. 73, and a ry. co. are responsible to the occupier of adjoining land for injury to his cattle arising from neglect of the duty thrown on them by s. 68, although no fences were made within five years of the opening of the ry. for public use.

A ry. line crossed a public footpath on the level, the approaches to the crossing being guarded by hand gates. A watchman who was employed by the ry. co. to take charge of the gates and crossing during the day was withdrawn at night.

The dead body of a man was found on the line near the level crossing at night, the man having been killed by a train which carried the usual head lights but did not whistle or otherwise give warning of its approach. No evidence was given of the circumstances under which the deceased got on to the line.

An action on the ground of negligence having been brought by the administratrix of the deceased, the jury found a verdict for the plt.:—

Held, (1886) 12 App. Cas. 41, affirming the decision of the C. A., that even assuming (but without deciding) that there was evidence of negligence on the part of the co., yet there was no evidence to connect such negligence with the

8. — Negligence—Gatekeeper's duty—Contributory negligence.

The plt.'s husband was run over and killed by a train of the defts. under the following circumstances. The defts.' line crossed a public highway on the level. There was a gatekeeper's lodge near the crossing, where a servant of the defts. was stationed, whose duty under the co.'s regulations was to attend to the carriage gates at the crossing, and, whenever a train was approaching, to stand by the rails and, if the line was clear, exhibit as a signal a white flag by day or a white light by night. There were lamps on the carriage gates which shewed, when they were closed across the highway, a white light, and, when they were closed across the line, a red light. The deceased, who lived near the crossing on the other side of the line, called at the gatekeeper's lodge between 8 and 9 o'clock on a December night to inquire whether his wife was there, and found the gatekeeper sitting in his lodge reading. Being told that his wife was not there, he left the lodge. Though a train had been signalled, the gatekeeper gave him no warning and did not go out to signal the train. The deceased attempted to cross at the level crossing, and was caught by the train and killed. The train carried lights which were visible by any one about to cross at the level crossing for a distance of more than 600 yards. The engine-driver whistled ten seconds before the train passed over the crossing, which it did at the rate of from thirty-five to forty miles an hour. The engine-driver stated in evidence that, when approaching the crossing, he saw the white light on the carriage gates, but did not receive any hand-signal from the gatekeeper:—

Held, in an action by the plt. under Lord Campbell's Act to recover damages in respect of her husband's death, that there was upon the above facts evidence to go to the jury of negligence on the part of the defts. by which, and not by any negligence on his own part, the death of the plt.'s husband was caused, and therefore the judge at the trial was right in not withdrawing the case from the jury. SMITH v. SOUTH-EASTERN RY. CO. - C. A. [1896] 1 Q. B. 178

9. — Severed land—Level crossing—Severance—Easement—Railways Clauses Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 20), s. 68.

A ry. was made through the land of R., and pursuant to an award a level crossing was provided under the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, s. 68, as an accommodation work, and by the conveyance to the co. a right of way over it was reserved to R. and his successors in title, and the co. covenanted to maintain it. Afterwards R. sold and conveyed his land on one side of the ry. to P., not mentioning the crossing, and not giving P. any right of way over the land retained, nor reserving any right of way over the land sold. Afterwards the land retained by R. was sold to G., who insisted on his right to use the crossing:—

Held, that after the conveyance to P. there was no right to use the crossing, and that the co. were at liberty to stop it:

Held, further, that the right to the crossing was finally abandoned by the conveyance to P., and would not be revived if the lands on the two sides of the ry. should again become vested in the same person.

10. — Speed of trains—Railways Clauses Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 20), s. 48—Infringement of statute by public body—Information by Attorney-General—Injunction—Injury to public, evidence of not necessary.

Upon an information filed by the Att.-Gen. to restrain a public body with statutory powers from infringing a term introduced into their Act in the interests of the public, as a condition of the exercise of their powers, it is not necessary to prove that injury to the public results from that infringement.

A ry. co. was by a special Act, which incorporated the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, empowered to carry their ry. across a turnpike road on the level. They constantly drove their trains over the level crossing, which adjoined a station, at a speed exceeding four miles an hour, in contravention of the provisions of s. 48 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845.

On an information filed by the Att.-Gen. to restrain them from so doing, they set up by way of defence that there was no proof of any injury occasioned to the public by their contravention of the section, and that the inconvenience caused to the public by reason of the existence of the crossing would be increased if they complied with it:—

Held (affirming the judgment of Bruce J., [1898] W. N. 160 (12); [1899] 1 Q. B. 72), that, as the information was filed by the Att.-Gen. to enforce the express terms of an enactment made by the Legislature in the interests of the public, the Court could not entertain the question whether injury to the public was in fact occasioned by the contravention of the Act, but were bound to grant the injunction.

The provisions of the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, relating to the assessment of compensation, apply to compensation under s. 78 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845. The owner of mines under a ry. gave notice of intention to work them. The ry. required a certain amount of support to be left. Arbitrators were appointed to settle the amount of compensation :—

Held, that the owner's claim was made under s. 78 of the Railways Clauses Act, and therefore the provisions of the Lands Clauses Act as to the assessment of compensation applied, and therefore the ry. was bound to take up the award. REG. v. LONDON AND NORTH WESTERN RY. CO.

15. — Support—Subjacent and adjacent support—Subsidence.

A horse tramway was originally authorized by an Act of 1825, which excepted mines which might be worked so as not to injure the co.'s tram-road authorized by that Act. In 1830 the surface lands were conveyed to the co. By an Act of 1835 the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, was incorporated, and provision was made for altering the line so as to be suitable to locomotive engines; acts previously done, and all rights and liabilities consequent thereon, were saved. The defts., owners of the subjacent mines, gave notice under s. 78 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, of intention to work the mines, and on refusal by the ry. co. to pay compensation commenced working, and thereby caused subsidence of the surface and ry. :—

Held, that the ry. co. were entitled under the conveyance to a right of support without compensation which had not been lost by the conversion of the tramway into a ry., nor by the Act of 1855; and that the defts. must be restrained by injunction from letting down the surface or the ry. *GREAT WESTERN RY. Sect. 7 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854, enacts that a ry. co. shall be liable in the absence of a signed or reasonable contract for loss "occasioned by the neglect or default of such co. or its servants" :—

Held, that a loss by theft of a co.'s servant without negligence on the part of the co. was not within the section, and, therefore, that the co. could at common law protect themselves by a special contract, although such contract was not reasonable within the meaning of the Act. *SHAW v. 17. — Defective railway wagons—Breach of duty—Liability of railway company for their own defective wagons while in use by another railway company—Relevancy.

Wagons belonging to the Caledonian Ry. Co. were filled with coal from pits on that ry. co.'s system, and delivered to the Glasgow and South Western Ry. Co. at Dumfries Station, who had an agreement with the Gas Commrs. of Dumfries to haul the coal from the station to the gasworks. The station and the gasworks were connected by the Gas Commrs.' tramway line running along a public street. The Glasgow and South Western supplied the men and horses to haul the wagons, and once the wagons left the Caledonian Co.'s system they were not under their control. In conducting the wagons into the gasworks, two wagons at a time were taken along the tramway; but owing to a descent and ascent, one of the wagons was as usual uncoupled at the top of the descent, and the other taken on at a sharp trot to rush the ascent. While this was being done an obstruction got in the way, and the first wagon had to be pulled up; but the brake of the second wagon refused to act, and the husband of the respondent, who was in the employ of the Glasgow and South Western Ry. Co., was caught between the two wagons and killed. The respondent raised this action against both ry. cos., and the question was whether there was a relevant case made against the Caledonian Ry. Co. There was no averment as to the state of the wagons before they left the Caledonian Ry. Co.'s system :—

Held, reversing the decision of the Second Division of the Court of Session, [1897] 24 R. 429; 34 Sco. L. R. 317, that the respondent's averments did not shew that there was any duty cast on the Caledonian Ry. Co. in respect to any one using the wagons on behalf of the Glasgow and South Western Ry. Co. to take care that the wagons were in proper order after the coal had been delivered at Dumfries Station; and therefore the Caledonian Ry. Co. must be dismissed from the action.

By 5 & 6 Vict. c. 79, s. 2, and the schedule to that Act, a duty at the rate of 5 per cent. is made payable upon all sums received or charged for the hire, fare, or conveyance of passengers conveyed for hire upon any ry. By 46 & 47 Vict. c. 34, s. 2, sub-s. 1, fares not exceeding the rate of one penny a mile are exempt from duty.

A ry. co., whose third-class fares did not exceed a penny a mile, abolished all its second-class carriages and fares, and in lieu of them introduced a system by which third-class passengers, after taking and paying for their tickets, could for an extra charge procure "supplementary reserve tickets," entitling them to travel in reserved third-class compartments not available for the ordinary third-class passengers who had not paid the extra charge:—

Held, that the extra sums were paid in respect of extra accommodation incidental to the conveyance of the passengers, and that the Crown was entitled to duty upon the sums received by the ry. co. in all cases where the sum paid for the supplementary ticket when added to that paid for the ordinary third-class ticket exceeded a penny a mile. ATT.-GEN. v. The ticket contained a condition that if used for any other station it would be forfeited and the full fare charged. The deft. travelled to and returned from H., a station beyond W., paying the ordinary fare for the journeys between H. and W.:—

Held, that the condition was applicable to stations beyond that named on the ticket as well as to intermediate stations; that the deft. had used the ticket for a journey to a station other than that named on it, and that the ry. co. were entitled to treat the ticket as forfeited. GREAT NORTHERN RY. 30. — Borrowing powers—Unauthorized borrowing—Money applied in payment of debts of company—Subrogation of lender to rights of creditors—Secured creditors—Priority.

A ry. co. had power to borrow money by the creation of three classes of debenture stock, A, B, and C, A having priority over B and C, and B over C. They had issued the whole of these stocks, and had no other borrowing power. Not having the funds to pay a half-year's interest on the debenture stocks, they borrowed money from their bankers for the purpose, the bankers paying the interest warrants of the stockholders when presented to them. Soon after this had been done a judgment creditor of the co. presented a petition under the Railway Companies Act, 1867, and a receiver was appointed under the petition. The receiver had in his hands moneys sufficient to pay the next half-year's interest due to the A stockholders and to pay

Held, that the bankers were not entitled, in respect of the moneys advanced by them and applied in paying the interest due to the debenture stockholders, to the benefit of the securities and priorities of those stockholders or any of them, but that they were only entitled, so far as the moneys advanced had been applied in discharging legal debts or liabilities of the co., to stand in the same position as if the advance had been a valid one.

Where a co. borrows money ultra vires, the lender, so far as the money is applied in the discharge of legal debts and liabilities of the co., is entitled to have the loan treated as valid, but he is not subrogated to any securities or priorities of the creditors who are paid by means of his money.
